Anti-Missile Campaign Gaining Strength in U.S.

TRIO RELATES SPACE HOOK-UP

First-hand accounts of the recent dangerously-complicated lunar module mission is given today in The Times by the three U.S. astronauts who carried it out successfully.

Below, Russell Schweickart, 33, the only civilian and youngest of the trio, describes the overwhelming experience of standing outside the module in the awesome silence of outer Space.

On Page 6, Commander James McDivitt relates how tricky it was to steer the lunar module, while David Scott tells of the suspenseful time he had behind the controls of the command ship as he waited for the module to hook up.

He Stood in Awe At 17,000 MPH

By RUSSELL SCHWEICKART

In addition to the usual patches, pins and souvenirs which everybody takes up there, I had taken along copies of about 20 quotations I liked: From John and Robert Kennedy, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Thornton Wilder, Isaiah and some others.

It seemed important to have these glimpses of truth with me.

I was to do extra-vehicular activity (EVA)—to get outside the spacecraft — and I wanted very much to have a private moment then, to invite the beauty of that spectacle to penetrate the layer of my more immediate concern and responsibility.

But when I finally stood there on the "porch" of the LM, the quotations didn't spring into my mind, individually or collectively. So in that private moment I had to summom them up deliberately but it was an act on my part.

The visiual sensation you get from doing EVA is an overwhelmingly emotional experience. The intensity of the colors: it was just past sunrise, and I was out there looking up over the LM toward the Command Module into the richest black you ever saw.

Separating that fantastic sky and the Pacific Ocean was an intense, almost irridescent band of blue which formed the horizon.

The words to describe what you see just aren't there. I wasn't conscious of catching my breath or gasping; I was just overwhelmed by the beauty of it all.

Then there was the silence, and that has to be explained. I had the headset on, and everybody was talking.

Yet between those bits and pieces of conversation I was standing out there and aware of the fact that I was going 17,000 mph. Not because things were flashing by, as they do when you travel at high speeds in a car, but I did realize how high I was and was aware of the earth passing underneath.

And it was so quiet.

I really wished that I could turn off the radio and just listen to that silence. Of course in a vacuum there can't be a sound, but that silence penetrates.

I was out there for only 40 minutes. We had planned to be out for two hours, but we had trouble getting everything ready for the day's work. We always found ourselves behind at the beginning of every day.

We hadn't anticipated the mobility problem of getting into our suits before going into the LM. We had to suit up one at a time, staying out of each other's way, and the whole task took me 20 or 25 minutes, about twice what we had counted on.

We were all concerned that on the rendezvous day we might start out again behind the planned time line.

So we decided to wake up an hour earlier than planned. This meant an hour less of precious sleep unless we cut the EVA short. We left it up to Houston, and when they suggested terminating it early we all agreed.

SCHOOL'S OUT a little early at Claremont Senior Secondary in Saanich. More than half the 650 students staged an April Fool's walkout this morning in a prank one student said had been organized for a week. Class interruption lasted about 40 minutes, produced more noise than heat or light. Some students later apologized. Story on Page 2. (Robin Clarke photo)

Rescuers Abandon Hope For 178 in Mine

MUZQUIZ, Mexico (CP)—All hope was abandoned today for 178 miners trapped underground when a gas explosion ripped through a coal mine near this northern village.

Fourteen bodies were recovered and an official of the Red Cross, which is co-ordinating rescue efforts, said there was no hope of any survivors.

Of the 14 bodies recovered so far, 13 were of miners trapped near the mouth of the mine when fire-damp gas exploded and sealed off the two main shafts.

The other was of a man living nearby who rushed into the pit mouth in search of a missing relative and was overcome by fumes.

A Red Cross official said: "There can be no hope of any survivors—the shafts are filled with poisonous carbon monoxide gas."

The company is Altos Hornos de Mexico.

LITTLE HOPE

Dr. J. Ramos, director of the nearby Sabinas Red Cross Hospital, said he had little hope that any of the men survived.

"After the explosion they could have died from suffocation, toxic poisoning or burning," he said.

Some rescue officials expressed a hope of reaching some of the trapped men in 72 hours, but the mine tunnels were a shambles and rescue officials said it may be as long as 15 days before men could dig down to reach all of the victims.

FAMILIES RIOT

Troops were rushed in to control victims' families who rioted at the tunnel entrances. The crowds calmed down later.

The mine is at Barroteran, with a population of 8,000 people, about 75 miles southwest of the Texas border town of Eagle Pass.

"It was a tremendous explosion, blowing parts of the mine entrance into the air," said Dr. Emilio Lopez of the Barroteran hospital, who witnessed the blast. "We have no injured. They were either all killed at the entrance or trapped below. The lucky ones had left.

"They were able to take out the bodies of some of the dead miners because they were on their way up and near the exit." The mining company is one of Mexico's biggest coal producers.

6.3 Per Cent Profit Made

OTTAWA (CP) — Air Canada had a net income of $8,184,000 in 1968, the sixth consecutive year in which it has shown a profit, Transport Minister Paul Hellyer announced Tuesday.

The Crown-owned airline will need more than $300,000,000 in outside financing, however, to buy new equipment and property in the next five years, it was stated in the company's annual report tabled by Mr. Hellyer in the Commons.

The 1968 profit was the 15th for the airline in the last 18 years. It signified a return on investment of 6.3 per cent.

Comparable results for 1967, the Centennial Year, were a profit of $3,547,000 and an investment return of 5.2 per cent.

Passenger traffic growth was described as modest in 1968, compared with the sharp increase experienced in 1967.

MONTREAL BOMBER GIVEN LIFE TERM

MONTREAL (CP)—Terrorist bomber Pierre-Paul Geoffroy was sentenced today to life imprisonment for his active part in 31 recent bombing incidents in the Montreal area.

Geoffroy listened impassively, his arms folded across his chest, to the 20-minute judgment read by Chief Judge Andre Fabien of Sessions Court.

Judge Fabien said he was sentencing Geoffroy to life imprisonment on 124 charges stemming from 31 incidents—making bombs, placing bombs and conspiracy to make and place bombs.

Under terms of the law, Geoffroy could be paroled after serving seven years.

Robichaud Seeks New Ottawa Aid

FREDERICTON (CP)—In the midst of a flurry of protests over increased taxes, Premier Louis J. Robichaud of New Brunswick has appealed to the federal government for help.

The premier announced in the legislature Monday he has asked Ottawa for an "immediate and urgent" federal-provincial conference on finances.

Earlier Monday, the premier met demonstrators from Saint John, N.B., who presented him with a three-page brief asking for a reduction in provincial programs to cut tax increases.

It was the second group to come to the capital to protest the tax raises announced in Finance Minister L. G. DesBrisay's budget for 1963-1970.

The first group from Moncton, N.B., received a brusque reception from the premier last Thursday.

However, he said Monday's delegation presented a fair brief and represented a definite segment of the public opinion.

LEADS DELEGATION

Paul Gordon, chairman of the Saint John Save New Brunswick Committee, led the delegation.

The brief he presented asked the premier to either find some means of lowering the recently-announced tax raises or "resign and allow the people to decide by an election who is capable of managing the affairs of our province."

While the delegation met the premier, a crowd of about 200 demonstrators outside the legislature building waved banners and called for his resignation.

Repeated attempts by the demonstrators to enter the building were foiled by 20 RCMP officers.

Criticism of the tax increases were also voiced Monday by members of the legislature. Claude Taylor (PC—Albert) said New Brunswick was probably the highest taxed area of North America.

Lawrence Garvie (PC—Fredericton) called for a full disclosure of the province's financial situation.

He said Finance Minister DesBrisay referred to his budget which brought a $29,400,000 increase in taxes, as anti-inflationary.

Kennedy Active In Protest Move

By WARREN UNNA

WASHINGTON (WP)—A nation-wide opposition movement to the Nixon administration's go-ahead on the safeguard anti-ballistic missile deployment suddenly is springing up.

Some of it is centreing around Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D—Mass.); some of it around bi-partisan New York congressmen; some of it is coming from the Harvard-M.I.T. professors; and some of it is attempting to capture the grass roots college enthusiasm which last year fastened on the anti-Vietnam protest of Sen. Eugene McCarthy (D-Minn).

Kennedy has been by far the most active in this new fight against the ABM. And there is strong indication that it will not be confined to just defeating this year's safeguard appropriation requests by the administration, but to the overall priority military demands now should have in competition with pressing domestic needs.

SEN. KENNEDY
. . . leads critics

NON-PARTISAN

Kennedy's aides insist the opposition is strictly on an issue and strictly non-partisan. But it coincides with a decision by the Democratic Party's potential presidential candidate to return to the banquet circuit of cross-country speechmaking beginning this month.

And Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky.), as avid as Kennedy in opposing the ABM, is warning that if the movement does become partisan and anti-Nixon he is going his own way.

The anti-ABM movement is taking many forms in many locales. The main ones are:

● A move by Sens. Kennedy, Cooper, Charles H. Percy (R-Ill.) and Philip A. Hart (D-Mich.) to form what tentatively is being called a "National Committee for Common Sense" led by perhaps 10 impeccable authorities from science, business, the ex-military, Negro and women's groups.

● A document, at last count 400 pages, requested by Kennedy from some 16 scientists, mainly in the Cambridge locale, which is to be completed within the next week or two and made available to a Congress confronted with Pentagon ABM authorization and appropriations requests.

● The grass roots movement, led by two associates of the Kennedy family political machine, Richard N. Goodwin and William Vanden Heuvel, which is centered in New York and now beginning to send out mail urging the establishment of community anti-ABM protest groups.

● A strictly New York coalition movement led by Rep. Jonathan B. Bingham, a Bronx Democrat, who hopes to run for the senate next year, and Rep. Ogden R. Reid, Westchester County Republican which already has a public relations firm engaged in putting out pamphlets, issuing press statements and keeping the home telephones ringing.

Pakistan Demands UN Action

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Pakistan demanded today that the United Nations Security Council condemn Israel anew despite the threat it might split the Big Four on the eve of private talks on Middle East peace.

Ambassador Agha Shahi of Pakistan formally introduced an Asian-African resolution asking condemnation for the Israeli attack on a Jordanian village last Wednesday.

He said the resolution represented the maximum compromise possible with the major powers on the council.

Shahi said the sponsors wanted to avoid division among the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France and thus went to greater lengths than the sponsors would have otherwise done.

But he added that the situation had deteriorated in the Middle East to the point where another condemnation resolution aimed at Israel was needed.

REVISIONS SOUGHT

The U.S. and Britain sought to persuade the sponsors to water down the resolution so that it would include mention of Arab guerrilla raids as well as retaliatory strikes by Israel.

The U.S. and Britain were believed likely to abstain on the resolution, while the Soviet Union would vote for it. The position of France was uncertain.

Britain told the council earlier that a split in the voting would prejudice Big Four talks on the Middle East set to begin this week.

The Israeli cabinet Sunday reiterated its opposition to any move by the Big Four to impose a peace settlement and said Israel and the Arab states are mainly responsible for working out a peace plan.

After the Security Council unanimously condemned Israel last Dec. 31 for its reprisal raid on Beirut International Airport, Israel rejected the condemnation and denounced the council as "morally, politically and juridically bankrupt."

Act Ruled Invalid

BOSTON (UPI) — A federal judge today ruled the Selective Service Act of 1967 is unconstitutional because it fails to grant draft exemptions to those who are conscientious objectors on non-religious grounds.

TRAIN TAKES IKE BACK TO HEART OF AMERICA

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The train bearing the body of Dwight David Eisenhower rumbled across the face of America today, carrying to a modest resting place the man who once led the world's mightiest nation and commanded the most awesome military machine ever assembled.

"I come from the heart of America," he liked to say of his boyhood in Kansas, and it is to that geographic centre of the United States he is returning.

The nation's capital bade farewell at sundown Monday as Eisenhower's coffin was placed on baggage car No. 314 for the 30-hour, 1,379-mile trip home to Abilene.

Earlier, Palm Sunday crowds had shuffled past his bier in an all-night procession through the great marble rotunda of the Capitol building. It was on this spot that Eisenhower had twice been sworn in as Republican president—in 1952 and in 1956.

But Monday bloomed bright and sunny, if unseasonably cold, for the funeral procession and service that brought together, in the National Cathedral, representatives of more than 120 nations among the 2,107 invited guests.

Prime Minister Trudeau headed the four-man delegation representing the people and government of Canada. He placed a wreath at the bier.

With Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, John Diefenbaker who was Conservative prime minister part of the time Eisenhower was in the White House, and Gen. Jean V. Allard, chief of the defence staff, the prime minister later attended a White House reception for visiting dignitaries.

MOVES TO STATION

Finally, as the setting sun cast long shadows across the city, the hearse carrying Ike's body in a standard $80 army coffin moved down the great avenues and into Union Station. There it was placed aboard the black-draped, 10-car train and began the long journey home. At the rear came Eisenhower's private car, now occupied by his widow, Mamie, 72, still composed but visibly shaken.

Clusters of people gathered by the railway tracks in the night to pay final homage to the man they knew as "Ike."

At midnight tonight the funeral train will reach Abilene.

The burial, beside his first son who died in infancy, will be Wednesday in the Eisenhower Centre, a memorial library and chapel built on a cornfield.

President Nixon, the political heir whom Eisenhower lived to see in the White House at last, will fly here for the final services.

Nixon was blinking back tears as he left the train station in Washington Monday after the flag-covered coffin was carried aboard the funeral car.

Nixon led the great of the world at the state funeral in Washington National Cathedral.

CONDUCTS THE SERVICE

"The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord," intoned Very Rev. Francis B. Sayre Jr., dean of the cathedral and grandson of another president, Woodrow Wilson.

Massive Sweep By U.S. Troops

SAIGON (AP) — Thousands of helicopter-borne United States air cavalrymen are pursuing an estimated 7,500 troops of two North Vietnamese divisions through the Viet Cong War Zone C, military spokesmen said today.

The air cavalrymen are chasing the North Vietnamese 1st and 7th Divisions, which are believed to have pulled back into the jungles of northern Tay Ninh province near the Cambodian border after eluding a 10,000-man American sweep called Operation Atlas Wedge.

Atlas wedge was conducted in the Michelin rubber plantations in the southern half of Tay Ninh province, 45 miles northwest of Saigon. The new drive is called Montana Scout. Spokesmen said it is about half the size of Atlas Wedge.

Military analysts said the retreat of the two North Vietnamese divisions into War Zone C was part of a general withdrawal forced on them by heavy losses suffered in their five-week-old offensive. The Viet Cong's 9th Division, which is supposed to spearhead any attack on Saigon, also is reported in Tay Ninh province.

Negative Tax Idea Studied

By JOHN MIKA
Legislative Reporter

Social Welfare Minister Dan Campbell Monday told the legislature the social welfare system throughout the western world has totally failed and the B.C. government thinks the negative income tax will replace it.

Campbell was replying to a broadside attack by Opposition Leader Robert Strachan that the welfare roll is growing at an alarming rate because the present system doesn't reduce hard core unemployment.

Strachan accused Campbell of "deliberately withholding" welfare roll statistics from the House until after his departmental estimates are approved.

He said the minister is afraid to admit the number of families on welfare jumped from an average 72,000 in 1967 to 86,000 last December "and probably now total 100,000."

Campbell said his department is still preparing the statistics.

"But as far as the number on welfare rolls is concerned, the most significant thing is the effect of technology today on those rolls.

"The entire system of welfare as we know it in Canada, Great Britain and the United States too, has been a complete and total failure," said Campbell.

Unemployement Problem to Grow

He said it is true a hard core unemployment problem exists here as elsewhere and far from being reduced it will grow with automation.

"With that type of a situation, we simply must find a way to change the way we help with social assistance," said Campbell.

He said the provincial government now is studying the negative income tax idea as the answer.

"We believe that a system of negative income tax, with some modifications, will bring in a new day in the social service field in Canada," Campbell said as several MLAs applauded.

David Barrett (NDP—Coquitlam) doubted the minister's sincerity because "he knows the negative income tax can only be brought in by the federal government."

"No, that's not true," retorted Campbell.

"You can effect a negative income tax just in B.C.?" queried Barrett.

Campbell nodded his head.

"Then get with it, do it now," said Barrett.

Premier Bennett was the first provincial leader, at the Constitutional Conference in Ottawa last month, to propose a system of negative income tax for Canada.

Ontario Wants More Discussion

(The system involves establishment of a base line of income and anyone filing an income tax over the base would pay tax while the government would pay the difference to anyone who earned less than the base line — in other words, a negative tax payment.

(In effect, the system would establish a guaranteed annual income with income tax forms doubling as the means test.)

The province of Ontario, since Premier Bennett's proposal, has endorsed the suggestion for more discussion on the subject.

In raising the idea, Premier Bennett told the Ottawa meeting that a negative tax would equalize the economic opportunities of all Canadian citizens in better fashion than the present system of equalization grants to "have-not" provinces.

He also pointed out that it would provide major reductions in administration costs and red tape by eliminating the need for a large number of federal and provincial clerks to keep track of the huge volume of transfer payments involved in a variety of programs.

Although the B.C. government is understood to be actively pushing for a major conference on making the change, it is not believed to be considering exercising its right to unilateral action for fear it would start an unparalleled stampede of Canadians moving here.

Members Sought By Youth Branch Of Safety Council

A newly-formed youth division of the Greater Victoria and District Safety Council will hold a membership drive during the next few weeks.

A steering committee, headed by Joan Taaffee with members Paul Hadfield and John Porter, will organize the campaign.

Prospective members must hold a valid B.C. driver's licence and be between 16 and 24.

The youth division supports the aims of the Safety Council.

Slide Rips Track

VANCOUVER (CP) — A rockslide Monday ripped out about 350 feet of track on the Pemberton-Lillooet section of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, about 32 miles south of Lillooet. PGE officials said repairs are expected to take at least two days.

School Walkout Just Prank

By DON VIPOND

Students at Claremont Senior Secondary School dissipated their April foolishness with a 40-minute classroom walkout this morning.

The 30 teachers at the Saanich high school kept their cool and took advantage of the break to hold their monthly staff meeting.

Most of the 650-student body marched out of the school shortly after 10 a.m. at the end of the first class period.

Signs reading "Recess or Strike" sprouted in the milling laughing mob. The school's fire alarm bell was tripped and clanged deafeningly through the corridors for about 10 minutes.

An impromptu rally in the school gym produced chants of "we want a parking lot" and "we want a lunch room." It broke up after a bellowed "April Fools."

Principal Joseph Lott said he was not planning any school-wide disciplinary action. action.

"They got themselves into something they didn't know how to get out of."

It should serve as a lesson in the hazards of mob action, he suggested.

A student delegation appeared in the principal's office to apologize shortly after the demonstration.

Ban Coming On Highland Deer Hunting

Deer hunters are expected to be barred from the Highland District this fall.

An official of the fish and game branch confirmed that an application by Highland Ratepayers' Association a partial hunting closure is planned.

The partial closure would outlaw hunting with rifles but would permit use of shotguns by bird hunters. The department will publish boundaries for the proposed partial closed area.

Word of the partial closure was relayed to the ratepayers group Monday by its chairman R. G. McMinn. The group had asked for a complete ban against hunting in view of the increasing number of homes in the district.

ELSEWHERE

Partial bans are common in rural areas of the province. They apply on North and South Pender, on Bowen Island and in most lower mainland rural municipalities.

The Highland ratepayers in their Monday meeting also discussed the use of their roads and properties as a dumping ground for old cars and garbage — and the reluctance of property owners to lay charges.

McMinn asked the ratepayers to submit written complaints and observations to him so that they may be submitted to authorities.

The new executive is: R. G. McMinn for a second term as chairman; Kerry Joy, vice-chairman; Mrs. Nancy McMinn, secretary; Carla Czarnecki, treasurer; area directors, Earl Pallister, J. D. Holt, P. B. Findlay.

Car Insurance Bill Passes Final Vote

By JOHN SLINGER

The New Democratic Party spokesman on auto insurance called the government's new program "political propaganda" as the opposition took its last fling at the bill Monday.

As William Hartley (NDP—Yale-Lillooet) was making the charge, saying the government would not dare implement the insurance before an election, two cabinet ministers took a fling at Hartley.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell accused the New Democrat of misleading the house Friday during second reading of the bill when Hartley said the insurance company for whom he worked had cancelled his contract.

CONTRACT CANCELLED

Hartley replied by saying he had received official notification Monday that both his life and general insurance contracts have been cancelled.

Attorney-General Peterson read from two letters which stated Hartley had lost his contracts "due to lack of production" during the last two years.

That brought Opposition Leader Robert Strachan to his feet accusing the company—Co-

"I state that as government policy."

Macdonald said the legislation, as it stands, "is a sometime bill," and Hartley called it "insurance company legislation and you're going to try to use it as election propaganda.

"When people are forced into the clenched fist of the insurance companies, they won't like you any more," he added, pointing at the government benches.

"You wouldn't try bringing it in before an election."

The member concluded that "right from the word go, this bill is politically motivated."

Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver Point Grey) said current auto insurance discriminates against young people and this discrimination should stop.

He said that in Vancouver, any person under 25 now must pay about $210 for basic coverage even if he has a clean driving record.

"Just because you're under 25—just because you're young or old, is no reason to apply operative Insurance Co., for whom Hartley was an agent in Merritt—with being "part of the establishment."

"This company wants to be on the right side of this government," said Strachan. "That's why they fired Bill Hartley and for no other reason."

Strachan described it as "plain dirty politics."

Clause-by-clause committee approval was given the legislation with amendments after about 1½ hours of debate.

Hartley and Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) both centred criticism on the absence of a specific starting date in the insurance bill.

Peterson said it will come into effect before Jan. 1, 1970.

discriminatory rules."

The attorney-general said no cost estimates are available for the additional insurance to cover the $250 deductible under the new collision plan in the insurance bill.

Allan Cox (L—Oak Bay) said costs of this extra insurance will make costs to the average driver with a good record "unfair."

Two Nominated For Board's Metchosin Seat

Two men were nominated Monday night to seek the single Metchosin seat in the Capital Regional District.

They are Kenneth Rainey and Mac Tipton, both former directors of the district.

Vacancies were created when directors from Langford, Colwood and Metchosin resigned in the wake of a heavy defeat of an incorporation vote in February.

The nominations were made at the Metchosin Ratepayers' Association meeting.

The Capital Regional District is responsible for a growing number of local tasks on southern Vancouver Island, principally implementation of a new system of trunk sewer lines and rebuilt and extended outfalls.

Student Endorsed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia council of the Young New Democrats has endorsed John Conway, Simon Fraser University graduate student, for the provincial NDP leadership. He and MLAs Dave Barrett, Tom Berger and Bob Williams seek to replace retiring Bob Strachan.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Archaeologists believe that the great changes in climate that occurred in Europe during the 12th and 13th centuries to bring milder and moister weather were timed with changes to severely dry weather in the middle western part of the North American continent at the same time.

Researchers found that the drought in the corn belt of the continent forced a change in the diet of native Indians and changes in their living habits.

The aboriginal inhabitants of what is now Iowa, Southern Minnesota, southwestern Wisconsin and north Illinois grew less and less corn as the drought progressed over many decades. There were less deer and other woods animals to kill for food. The Indians switched to bison as the area changed to a plains-like terrain and, of course, the hunters ranged far from their home grounds as they searched for food.

The effects of weather changes are far-reaching.

Cabinet Split on NATO Still Runs Deep

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — The division in the cabinet over NATO policy is broader, deeper and harder to bridge than had been thought.

Westell

The fact that ministers failed to reach a consensus after two days of strenuous debate at the weekend shows that it was far from merely a formality—as had been suggested—of approving a ready-made decision to maintain Canada's present position in the alliance.

The weekend of argument, in fact, seems only to have eliminated from practical consideration the far-out option of withdrawing Canada at once from the alliance.

There remains a realistic choice between the status quo and a decision to give notice of intention to withdraw Canadian forces from Europe over the next few years.

Avoid Bloodshed

Some sources inside the government now believe that Prime Minister Trudeau will have to move skilfully to avoid bloodshed—that is, one or more resignations from the cabinet.

He has, in any event, taken the argument firmly into his own hands and called another cabinet meeting for 8 p.m. tonight, at which he will seek to bring the hung jury to agreement on a verdict.

Meantime, he has been able to weigh the issue in his mind and, if he wished, to take private advice. Indeed, he had an unexpected opportunity yesterday, when he was in Washington for the Eisenhower funeral, to talk to President Nixon and to other heads of Western governments.

One of the questions which has run through the public debate on NATO, and which was asked again in the privacy of the cabinet room, is the attitude of the United States. Would a decision by Canada to withdraw from the alliance so upset the U.S. government and public opinion as to make economic and political reprisals likely?

The U.S. government has been scrupulous in refraining from saying or doing anything that might be considered to be pressure upon Canada—so scrupulous that it is hard for the Canadian government to know just where it stands.

The likely U.S. response is obviously a factor that has to be weighed in the decision, and Trudeau may very well have had a final word with Nixon about it yesterday.

There is, after all, some truth in the old political proverb that there has been many a warm handshake over a cold grave.

But whatever the advice from Washington and Western Europe, Trudeau must be more influenced by his own inclinations and by the balance of power within the cabinet.

He made his preference, unmistakably clear a year ago when he was campaigning for the Liberal leadership.

He advocated the basic review of policy which is now coming to decision, but he clearly expected that it would show the desirability of pulling Canada out of the political wing of the alliance into some sort of "Third World" role.

Optimism Shaken

Trudeau's optimistic view of the peaceful course of events in Europe, like the view of many other people, was severely shaken by the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Even so, he opposed all suggestions that NATO should respond with a military build-up.

He wanted Canada to continue with its plan to cut the air division in Europe by 20 per cent, and this move was postponed only when External Affairs minister Mitchell Sharp and Defence Minister Leo Cadieux were actually at the NATO council meeting, in Brussels in November, and advised Trudeau of the strong opinions there.

He then agreed to maintain the current level of the military commitment for another year.

Trudeau obviously was not converted to any great enthusiasm for NATO, and he has since then been careful to keep his personal options open.

SHARP
. . . definitely yes

Only last week, when addressing the National Press Club in Washington, he went out of his way to say that he is not impressed by the theory that Canada cannot take foreign policy initiatives because of the likelihood that other countries would follow suit, with a cumulative impact on affairs.

He warned, in effect, that he does not accept the view that Canada's withdrawal from NATO might precipitate the break-up of the alliance.

It seems clear that Trudeau's personal choice is for, at the minimum, de-escalation of Canada's military contribution to NATO. What of his cabinet?

He has been remarkably successful in sealing off cabinet leaks, and it is hard to be sure that what ministers say privately outside the room is an accurate reflection of inside events.

Like ordinary mortals, ministers tend to interpret their own actions, and the actions of others, in a context provided by their own prejudices. They are not always reliable witsesses, and it is difficult nowadays to check one against another.

NATO Advocates

With this caution, it may be said that:

NATO's four horsemen in the cabinet are Sharp, Cadieux, former external affairs minister Paul Martin and former defence minister Paul Hellyer;

● The four principal ministers in opposition are Communications Minister Eric Kierans, Regional Development Minister Jean Marchand, Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier and Privy Council President Donald Macdonald.

. . . decidedly no

The position of other ministers, as far as can be determined, has not been as clear, or at least not as forceful. Some are torn between a personal view that the NATO commitment should be reduced and the opinion that the country, or constituents, are not ready for it.

Others argue personal convictions against the interests of their portfolios. Thus, Trade, Commerce and Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin appears to have little interest in NATO, but has to be concerned about the possible economic repercussions of withdrawal.

Generation Gap

One source suggests that the basic line of division in the cabinet is the age-experience gap—between the older and longer established ministers, to whom NATO has become part of Canada's international way of life, and younger, less-conditioned ministers, who are impatient with old ideas and eager for defence economies to release funds into their portfolios.

Trudeau's instinct must be to side with the reformers. But when he talks to cabinet tonight, he may have to impose a compromise.

The most likely solution seems to be to continue to keep Canadian troops in Europe for the next few years, but to make a conscious decision not to re-equip them.

Anguilla Accord Wins Moderates

BASSETERRE, St. Kitts (Reuters) — British envoy Lord Caradon is continuing talks today with Prime Minister Robert Bradshaw on the agreement reached Monday over the future of Anguilla.

The agreement, which left rebel Anguilla leader Ronald Webster with even greater prestige in the eyes of his followers, was termed by Caradon as a "good start, not a long-term agreement."

Caradon, returning to New York ot resume his post as chief of the British delegation to the United Nations, explained the agreement during two hours of talks Monday with Bradshaw, head of the associated state of St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla from which Anguilla seceded two years ago and proclaimed its independence.

Caradon said he could not say when British troops on Anguilla would leave the island but he hopes to see a quick improvement in the situation.

As the British diplomat emerged from his talks with the St. Kitts prime minister, a section of the large crowd waiting to see him shouted "Down with Bradshaw."

Caradon and Webster announced Monday that Britain and Anguilla reached agreement virtually quashing the island's republican regime and paving the way for a constitutional settlement.

Later, stopping over on the island of Antigua which served as jumping-off point for the British invasion nearly two weeks ago, Caradon said his talks resulted in a good start—"though not a solution."

Reuters correspondent William Gasson, reporting from Bridgetown, Barbados, said although Webster was unable to eject British Commissioner Tony Lee from Anguilla, he succeeded in getting agreement to allow the Anguillans to largely run their own affairs.

Under the agreement, the 6,000 islanders will be administered by Lee in consultation with the seven-man council which they elected after their declaration of independence.

Apart from Webster's enhanced position, it is also a triumph for the moderates whose voice can once again be heard in the island's councils without fear of the intimidation that is reported to have existed there.

Observers believe the Anguillans are at last convinced Britain has no intention of forcing them back to the hated St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla association. They also believe that, in time, the complete administration of the island may be theirs.

Despite the confusion of conflicting statements by both sides during the last two weeks, the Anguillans have gained what the majority wanted for the present:

—Direct ties with Britain.

—A system of law and order they can trust.

—Independence from St. Kitts.

Soviet Minister Sees Czech Troop Trials

PRAGUE (Reuters) — Soviet Defence Minister Andrew Grechko came to Czechoslovakia to watch the first Warsaw pact manoeuvres involving Czechoslovak troops since the August pact occupation of the country, usually well-informed sources said today.

There have been recent indications that the Soviet Union wants the Czechoslovak army—badly shaken by the events of the last year—to become a working component again in the Eastern European alliance's military command.

Observers here said the presence of Grechko, who arrived in Milovice in central Bohemia on Monday with a high-ranking military delegation, would give added importance to the manoeuvres by Soviet, Czechoslovak, East German and Polish staff and signal corps.

The manoeuvres are taking place on Czechoslovak, East German and Polish soil.

The Soviet marshal's visit came on the heels of a bitter Moscow attack on Czechoslovak leaders over a hockey victory celebration Friday night following the second defeat of Russia by Czechoslovakia at the world tournament in Stockholm, Sweden.

This turned into an anti-Soviet demonstration when the Soviet state airline office was ransacked and all its documents were burned on the pavement.

The Soviet attack came in Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, which accused Josef Smrkovsky, a leading member of the Czechoslovak presidium, of taking part in the attack on the Aeroflot office.

Prague officials denied he was involved.

The Pravda article also complained other party and government leaders failed to issue a statement condemning an earlier outburst after the first hockey victory and thus made the weekend outbreak possible.

Stop the Thief

ONE HARD FACT OUT OF many in the annual report of Mr. Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada, issued a few days ago, was that "the consumer price index continued its four per cent annual rise in 1968, with no signs of a slowdown".

As a statistic that is startling enough; as a fact of life for every Canadian resident it is one of the most alarming figures in this country. It means that the buying power of every dollar put into savings is being whittled by four per cent each year; that Canadians on pension are losing four per cent of their income each year; that bonds and insurance funds put away for later years are being steadily drained of their purchasing value.

It is no answer to reply that this has been going on for a long time, so that there can be no need to worry. Early thinking was that the inflationary spiral was merely a phase through which we passed periodically and that it would soon more or less automatically come to an end. That idea has now been shown to be false. Despite the efforts of government in various fields—although not effectively in curtailment of spending—the price index continues to rise. And even the theory that a steady rise is necessary to an expanding economy is now under question. The plain fact is that continually spiralling prices are a cancer in our economy which must eventually be eradicated or present a serious danger.

National productivity is one key to the problem. A substantial annual increase in the amount of goods turned out by Canadian industry of all kinds—if not counteracted by greatly increased demand and much higher wages—would help to stabilize our price level. But as Mr. Rasminsky points out, over the past three years our productivity has risen by less than one per cent per annum. "Wages rose by much more than that, as did prices." As a result we have no signs of a slowdown in the four per cent annual inflation rate.

The old device of "when in doubt form a committee" is suspect in many ways. But Mr. Rasminsky views with approval the latest three-man commission set up by the federal government to make yet another study of prices and incomes and present recommendations to the government. This body will have the duty of carrying on a continuing analysis of costs and prices, and not only offering advice to the government but also educating the public on what may be done. It will tell the people which actions are helpful in controlling inflation and which are not. Beyond that Canada has not yet proposed going.

Guidelines are a democratic means of advising management and labor, as well as consumers, what should be done. They avoid the weight of economic legislation to force compliance with various policies. But if guidelines as a voluntary measure are to have any effect they must be supported by the public, which in turn will bring pressure to bear on management and labor if they do not conform.

Clearly a very large-scale educational program will have to be inaugurated. Inflation, like the weather, is to most people merely a phenomenon which happens to them; they do not see it as something which they themselves help to create by their actions in buying, pricing or wage-setting. Once that truth is grasped we may have a chance to fight inflation on an effective basis. But without a public fight the thief will continue his four-per-cent annual depredations.

It Is Our Problem Too

SINCE HIS GOVERNMENT brought down its tough, tax-raising budget two weeks ago, Premier Louis Robichaud of New Brunswick has been subjected to more abuse than he deserves. It is not hard to understand the frustration and resentment on the part of his already heavily-taxed constituents but some of their anger may be misdirected.

For the struggle that Premier Robichaud is engaged in to make ends meet should be of concern to all Canadians, especially those who live in the wealthier provinces. The way they respond to the plight of New Brunswick, and the other economically depressed Atlantic provinces, will be a test of the nation's will to stick together. But inherent in any aid program, of course, is the need to insure that the money will be spent to the best advantage on projects of real merit and predictable success.

The groups in New Brunswick who are gathering petitions and organizing protest marches against Mr. Robichaud should perhaps be carrying their plea to Parliament Hill, or the doorsteps of Premiers Robarts and Bennett, for those are the sources of finance from which ultimately the solution to New Brunswick's problems must come.

The problem is one to be tackled nationally, through the national government. But the wealthy provinces should help through improved equalization programs and tax distribution. The federal government has now admitted in effect that previous development programs have lacked the resources and impetus to recharge the run-down Martimes economies.

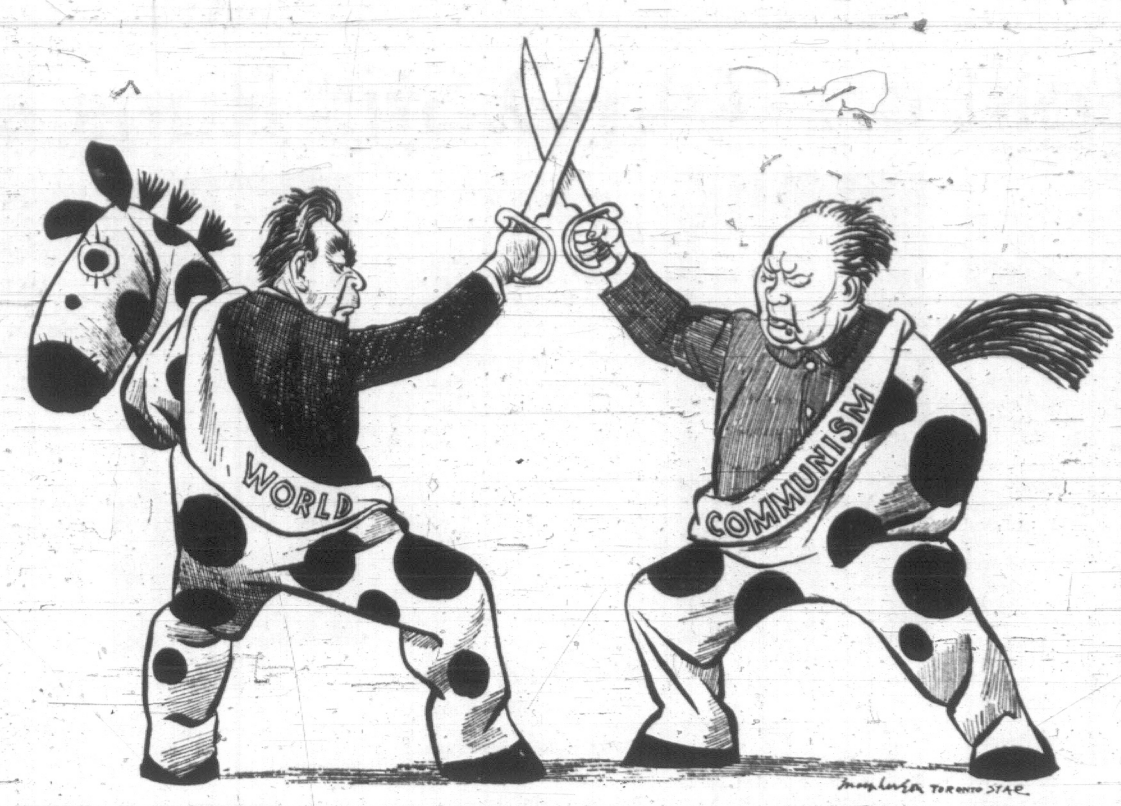
The federal minister responsible for regional development, Mr. Marchand, is now undertaking a new program that he says will provide no real improvements for two or three years and will take 15 years to reach its objective of eliminating inequality. It is doubtful whether the Maritimes can wait that long. Mr. Robichaud's budget indicated just how serious the problem has become, and the reaction of the people to it indicates they are not in a mood for long-term solutions.

The Pilots Make It Official

THE INTERNATIONAL FEDERation of Airline Pilots, meeting in Amsterdam, has moved a step closer to taking effective action against hijackers. Apart from a proposed 24-hour strike, which presumably would be staged to emphasize their determination, they have indicated a boycott system which would inflict serious economic injury on countries dealing inadequately with the skyjackers.

One proposal would establish a ban on air traffic into such countries. Another would co-ordinate action to restrict movement of the countries' aircraft, and cargo moved either by air or surface carriers.

The Amsterdam decisions reinforce earlier warnings given by the pilots' associations. The alternatives are presented squarely to any nation which fails to act against persons who, by force, redirect an aircraft from its proper destination to some other. They can toughen their treatment of the hijackers or they can go without service in an age which depends heavily on aircraft and the men who fly them.



FROM OTTAWA — By MAURICE WESTERN

Special Dispensation for Car Makers?

WHEN the government announces new taxes to check the march of its annual deficits, a now well-established ritual calls for supporting noises from the department of national revenue. Law abiding citizens are given to understand that the department, in the interests of equity, has tightened its procedures and is in full pursuit of tax delinquents. The trouble is that it pursues some taxpayers with greater zeal than other taxpayers. It appears from the latest report of Mr. Maxwell Henderson, the auditor-general, that in the case of the favored automobile manufacturers there is no pursuit at all.

Western

Duty Concession

For the last four years by virture of a well-known tariff order, these motor vehicles have been free of duty provided that they meet certain conditions. This is a valuable concession. Naturally, when the conditions are not met, the department is supposed to collect the revenues—of which the government manifestly is in need.

Mr. Henderson last year expressed concern over a situation which, as he now tells us, remains unchanged. He has been surprised to discover that there are still no records available showing the amount of customs duty involved or even the total value of the imports for which the manufacturer must account. The department does not always receive adequate information on which to assess progress in meeting the conditions and there is a "lack of sufficient pressure . . . on the manufacturers" to submit the required annual statements in line.

March 31, 1968, an estimated $43.6 million was owed by 14 companies. This bonanza remains untapped. As Mr. Henderson sadly reports: "Not only has no attempt been made by the department to collect any portion of these duties, but no attempt has been made to establish with any degree of precision the amounts owing by the individual manufacturers."

Explanation Needed

So philosophic an attitude is not characteristic of the department's dealings with individual taxpayers. One naturally looks for the explanation.

The money is recorded as a contingent receivable. Evidently the department is in no rush to collect because, according to Mr. Henderson, it sees a possibility that the amounts may be remitted by the government under the Financial Administration act.

What remarkable generosity! The companies having received the tariff subsidy to which they are entitled under the order, it is now seriously suggested that they should be forgiven $43.6 million to which, apparently, they are not entitled.

But this is not all. The amount has now increased to a possible $80 millions because a manufacturer who failed to qualify in a period previously reviewed has since failed to qualify in a subsequent period.

Sometimes parts are imported freely by the companies and then diverted to become replacements. In such cases, the manufacturers are supposed to account for the diversion, make amending entries and pay the duties. But in the four years since January, 1965, the records of most vehicle manufacturers have been audited only once by the customs investigation branch.

Skipped Audits

There are 500 parts manufacturers but of these only 125 have ever had their records audited.

Mr. Henderson very properly demanded last year that the administration should be tightened up. He said: "If necessary, penalties should be imposed to ensure that the industry provides promptly the information required for settlement of the accounts.

"Importers may benefit from concessions beyond those to which they are entitled and, as a result, losses of revenue to the Crown will occur. It is a fact that since the inception of the motor vehicles tariff order 1965 . . . not one cent of duty has yet been collected from any company for failure to meet the conditions of the order."

Was the department jolted by this rebuke? Not in the least. Last year's comments, Mr. Hendersons says, are still applicable because there has been no important change in the department's administration of the concessions to manufacturers.

The 1965 order defines "manufacturer." It means a company which has met the specified conditions and so qualified for the free entry privilege. But this cannot be determined at the time the goods are imported. It would be normal to charge the duty prescribed by law and to remit payments on proof that the manufacturer has qualified for the privilege. But for the automobile companies, the rule is reversed. They are permitted to import vehicles free of tariff and afterwards to fulfil the conditions. This obviously is the reason why the department has worked itself into the present mess.

Henderson Advice

Mr. Henderson repeats what he urged on indifferent officials last year. "In order that the procedures applied will ensure an effective check on the revenues of the crown, we believe that all duties and taxes should be collected at the time of importation and that benefits or incentives provided should be made available to the manufacturer only when evidence is produced that the required conditions have been met."

Unless this is now accepted and unless the department belatedly pursues the huge sums now in arrears, citizens will be entitled to conclude that, from the standpoint of national revenue, there is one law for automobile manufacturers and another for private taxpayers.

FROM WASHINGTON — By JAMES RESTON

'Canada Is Something Separate, Special'

PRIME Minister Pierre Trudeau told President Nixon here the other day that the Canadian government would decide within a week or so whether Canada will remain in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, and this simple declaration of doubt from our closest ally dramatized just how fragile our alliances are. Nobody in Washington after the allied divisions over Vietnam, Europe, the Middle East and Cuba had much faith that nations with common objectives would adopt common policies or make common sacrifices for common ends, but Canada is something special in the mind of the United States.

Reston

If we couldn't count on the Canadians, who's left? It wasn't that the Nixon-Trudeau conversations went wrong. Actually, they went very well, and the Canadian Prime Minister's talks with Secretary of State Rogers were equally frank and even amiable.

Nevertheless, while the conviction remains here that the Canadians will stay in NATO, the doubt remains. After all, if you ask the girl if she loves you, and she says, "I'll think about it and tell you later," you are bound to wonder if everything's all right.

It may very well be that Trudeau under-estimated the effect in Washington of his hesitation about staying in the alliance. Officials here have been taught by General de Gaulle not to be sentimental about "the old alliances." They understand the economic plight of the British and the strategic dilemma of the West Germans, and the historical difficulty of the Japanese, but Canada is something separate and special.

When the United States was trying to put together some kind of world order at the end of the last World War at the Chultepec, Dumbarton Oaks and San Francisco conferences, which finally created the United Nations organization, the relationship between Washington and Ottawa was fundamental.

San Francisco Example

It was the remarkable Canadian contingent at San Francisco of Mike Pearson, Norman Robertson and Escott Reid, with his own personal charter for world sanity, and all the rest of the young Canadian outfit in those critical years — including, unbelievably two characters called Hume Wright and Hume Wrong — who were closer to the divided and troubled American delegation of Edward Stettinius, Arthur Vandenberg, Adlai Stevenson and Tom Finletter than any other delegation in the world.

This was where the dream of "collective security" among the nations of the world really lay. The French, the British, and certainly the Soviets were cynical about getting the big powers to work for peace together, and the Canadians and the rest of the middle powers had their doubts, but when the chips were down, the Canadians fought harder and more effectively for the principle of collective security than anybody else.

Promise to Question

No wonder then that Washington, despite its disappointments of the last few years, was startled by Trudeau's doubts. He is, of course, playing his own politics. He came to office promising to question everything in the past, and he is doing this with Washington and NATO as he is doing it with Quebec, labor policy and everything else at home. But Washington has been so shaken by its problems and so forsaken — as it sees it — by the rest of the allies that in a funny kind of way, it needs the symbolic support of Canada at this moment in world politics more than it cares to admit.

Canada's air and ground forces in Europe are not really important. But Canada's moral political support is vital, and this is what Trudeau said he would think about a little later.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times, April 1, 1909.

The tramp of an invading army of immigrants marching on western Canada can already be heard and in fact the advance guards of the newcomers are already arriving in our midst. The influx, which promises this year to exceed all previous years, will be from the direction of Europe and the United States.

In the past week a number of home-seekers also arrived in the city from Ontario. They are a sturdy lot with lots of farming experience to back them up.

Letters

Letters will be considered for publication only if the writer is clearly identified to the editor, who may permit pen names at his discretion. Submissions will be edited and may be condensed. Short letters are favored. None will be returned.

Where We Stand

If I understand Bruce Hutchison's sarcastic article (page 4, March 26 Times) rightly, he is saying that Canada's opinion counts for nothing in Moscow and Washington. Good! Now we know where we stand.

After President Nixon's ABM decision we know that NORAD has become meaningless. The U.S. government makes decisions in the interest of U.S. "security" regardless of what happens to Canada in the process of "defence." There is no point condemning the U.S. government for acting in the interests of its own citizens — as it sees these interests. But surely we 20 million people north of the border do not have to applaud, or even support, the madness of the overkill arms race!

Let us not miss this opportunity to tell the U.S.A. — "Go ahead — do what you think you must. In the meantime, we will talk sense to those nations that will listen to us. We know we cannot protect ourselves and we know you cannot protect us. Therefore we will ask the United Nations to protect us. We will keep an armed force ready to move to any part of the world — for peacekeeping. We will continue to work for disarmament around the world instead of aiding or abetting the arms race." — David P. Reimer, 1701 Cedar Hill Cross Rd.

Earthquake Rumors

I would like to comment on the various stories about the earthquake resulting in the sinking of Vancouver Island that we're supposed to have on Good Friday, April 4.

Upon trying to track down the source of the information, I have presently reached a dead-end.

Various persons have attributed the prediction of Jeane Dixon and/or Edgar Cayce. Myself and others have checked Ruth Montgomery's "A Gift of Prophecy" (the best selling book about Jeane Dixon) and have found nothing to this effect. I have also asked if anyone has heard Mrs. Dixon announce this prediction herself since the book was published. No one has.

Many of us have also read much with regard to Edgar Cayce, and, as yet, have found nothing to indicate that he predicted an earthquake or such disaster for Vancouver Island, for April 4, 1969.

Now if anyone reading this letter has any exact information as to such a specific prediction ever being made by anyone, in a book or otherwise, we would be most interested in receiving precise information to this effect.

However, if no such information can be found, I think it's time this rumor stopped. — Miss G. McConville, 1476 Gladstone.

Money and Democracy

Calgary Albertan

In a democracy, where force is ruled out as an instrument of power, the ultimate source of authority is the public purse. It is no accident, in fact, that the struggle for democracy in Britain was basically a battle between the Crown and the people's chosen representatives for the right to raise money through taxation and to control its spending.

The people's representatives won — although not without bloodshed — and the Crown's authority became merely symbolic. But the struggle for the public purse goes on in almost every democratic land; only now the antagonists are the people's representatives and the executive arm of government.

Unfortunately, the battle lines are often obscured by such things as the party system and the fact that the members of the executive are generally people's representatives themselves. Nevertheless, the sortie launched by the Progressive Conservatives in the Alberta Legislature last month would have had the blessing of Pym, Hampden and Fox.

Mr. Peter Lougheed and his Tory colleagues argued that the Legislature's control over Alberta's public purse is badly circumscribed by the arrangements governing the distribution of the education foundation fund; and he is right. The Legislature is simply asked to approve an item in the estimates authorizing the minister of education to disburse a total of $156.2 million in operational grants and $2 million in capital grants to the province's schools. But which schools are to get what share of the money for what purpose is left to the minister's discretion.

Canada: Life in a Branch Plant Economy

By MELVILLE H. WATKINS

An associate professor of economics at the University of Toronto, Mr. Watkins headed a study group that prepared a report for the federal government on foreign ownership of Canadian industry. The report, tabled early last year, recommended a number of measures to deal with the situation but there has been no government action on it.

We cannot understand what is happening to education in Canada unless we comprehend the nature of our lives in a branch plant economy.

My own perception of the latter — my education, if you will — is closely related to my experience in writing and defending the Watkins Report. The report needs to be considered independent of its contents if, in McLuhan's terms, we are to get at the real message.

A report commissioned by the government, and under its constant surveillance, ended up by being disowned by the government.

WATKINS

Insofar as the report was a bland and conventional document, its fate cannot be attributed to its being radical in content. Rather, what was exposed was the limitations of liberalism — and of Liberalism.

What the latter is all about is the dominance of the business class of the country. It is hardly news that Canada, as a liberal democracy, is run largely by and for the national bourgeoisie.

The specialness of the Canadian case arises from the extent to which its bourgeoisie is emasculated. The business elite of this country has always been timid and colonial-minded, and has provided no base for a viable nationalism.

The rise and fall of Walter Gordon exposed the limitations of Canadian liberalism; so far as foreign ownership is concerned; no movement from complete laissez-faire is apparently to be tolerated.

To the extent that there remains a case for nationalism, it must be a nationalism of the left based on economic and social planning, that is, socialism.

This way of looking at things has a double significance. Firstly, the implications of the branch plant situation are pervasive, for what is sometimes seen as merely the absence of leadership in Canada is more properly seen as the inability to govern.

Historically, the Canadian government emerged to create a Canadian economy separate from the American economy.

But the Canadian economy, patiently assembled around the railway as an extension of the St. Lawrence River, and never very impressive as a national economy, has fragmented back into a collection of regional economies, now parts of a continental North American economy.

The capacity at the federal level to effect the rate of economic growth and the levels of prices and employment perhaps never really existed but now approaches zero. Understandably, the very existence of a federal government has become increasingly pointless.

The North American economy into which Canada has become imbedded has become in its turn, more explicitly a military-industrial complex. American economic growth is highly dependent on military spending, and labor is absorbed by the draft and the war industries.

Canada, to its credit, has refused to be fully integrated with the American war machine, though our complicity is substantial, with the result that there are more problems of absorbing the young in the labor market; sharp increases in enrolment in post-secondary education have helped to alleviate this structural problem.

In the long-run, however, Canada's ambivalence toward war — its refusal either to join fully the American cause or to find viable alternatives — means fewer opportunities for such skilled professionals as engineers and scientists.

The external politics of the branch plant economy tend to be dominated by quiet diplomacy, so as to minimize tension within the imperial system, and by the mercantilist strategy of seeking special status within the empire.

Locked In by Mandarins

The recent history of Canadian foreign policy is a tribute to the success with which the Ottawa mandarins have carried out these functions, while locking Canada even more tightly into the continental system.

The efficient functioning of the branch plant society rests also on the turning out of branch plant intellectuals — persons capable of rationalizing the system while having the technical skills needed for its efficient operation.

Eventually, even the universities must be Americanized. John Porter has shown how the Canadian elites systematically neglected higher education so as to remove potential threats to their power.

But they failed even to run their branch plants efficiently, much less try to create any kind of independent economy with a capacity to generate growth on its own.

The great educational push in Canada in recent years is intended to improve the efficiency of the branch plant economy; it is no accident that major support has come from the Economic Council, itself an emasculated version of the American Council of Economic Advisers, with its research often done by economists otherwise employed by the Canadian-American Committee.

As the late Harold Innis observed, the risk of being a social scientist in Canada is that one may die laughing.

The second significance of this way of thinking is to realize that little is to be gained through the more intellectual exercise of working out a policy for Canada. Any technocrat can do that.

Carter worked out an ingenious reform of the tax system, but by imagining that economics is a technical exercise independent of politics, that those who have power will legislate against their own interest, doomed itself.

Rabbits Out of Hat

The real issue is not politics in the sense of policy but politics in the sense of politicizing people. The demand for solutions provides jobs for economists to pull rabbits out of hats when what is needed is political action.

Hence, students protesting Dow Chemical's recruiting on Canadian campuses do more to expose the reality of foreign ownership as the intrusion of the U.S. military-industrial complex than could any number of Watkins Reports.

The implications of all this for Canadian universities have already been touched on. Both the defenders and critics of the multiversity, from Clark Kerr to Ronald Reagan, agree that it is a knowledge factory.

As such, the Canadian universities have not been performing up to scratch and are therefore in the process of being reformed.

New universities have been created and old ones expanded to absorb more students and enable the Canadian participation ratio to approach the American participation ratio.

Obsolete requirements are removed and more choice for the student implemented; the appropriate analogy is either the supermarket or Jean Genet's brothel. The tri-semester system and a longer school year make for more efficient use of plant and keep students out of the job market in the summer.

A high priority for graduate studies and the proliferation of research centres and institutes improves working conditions for the faculty at uncertain costs for undergraduates. In Ontario, the University of Toronto has become a multiversity at the centre of an embryonic University of Ontario, the example of California notwithstanding.

What is to be done? Perhaps very little, but certainly something. Clearly, the problems of the university are continental before they are national and national before they are provincial; that ministers of education are provincial, in all sense of that term, should not blind us to these structural realities.

GORDON

CARTER

Continentally, the universities have become a battleground to expose the contradictions and the repressiveness of corporate capitalism. Nationally, the universities have become the last bastion from which to insist that Canada was born as an act of separatism from the United States.

In the words of John Seeley: "If Canada is to be more than a geographical expression, her nationhood will be born in her universities. And if her universities are to discover any merit or mission, then students will educate into that discovery—and salvation."

It is tempting to leave the matter there — though insisting that the issue is not salvation, but survival. But to ask students to shoulder the burden, and say no more, is to cop out.

Advice From Experience

Those of us who are professors should either work to change the universities or leave them to sink into their irrelevance. And we should give the students advice based on experience of life within the walls.

Specifically: students should work to get joint student-faculty control of departments — for that is where the power lies — and then join in creating an environment centred not on teaching (much less publishing) but on learning.

If there is any truth at all in the view of Galbraith, and others, that power is shifting from the capitalists to the technocrats, then no time should be lost in humanizing the universities where technocracy presently thrives.

For what is at issue is not simply discovery as a personal possibility, though the liberation of the mind is sufficient to justify action.

The terrible truth of our times is that the technology of the technocrats has created a world out of control, and has made action a prerequisite to sheer survival. To act is to assume a moral risk, but the present is intolerable.

Quebec Moves Toward Own 'National Press'

By FRANK HOWARD

QUEBEC — Quebec has moved closer than ever toward the establishment of an autonomous national press, much of it subsidized by public funds.

The thrust for this "restructuration" comes not only from official Quebec, but from a faction of professional journalists which has become the official spokesman for the "profession."

The elements of this autonomous national press as they seem to be emerging from various recent developments, would include:

- A Government-owned broadcasting system, Radio-Quebec, that could either compete with, or take over, the French network of the CBC, Radio-Canada;
- A Government-owned news agency, which would emerge from l'Office d'Information et de Publicite du Quebec and which could compete with, or even replace, the French service of Canadian Press;
- A self-policing professional association which would act as official spokesman (the way the bar association does for lawyers) on behalf of all Quebec journalists, including eventually those working for l'Office and Radio-Quebec.

While none of these things is yet public policy, they are nevertheless strongly indicated by several movements that seem to be converging on the same target.

A recent event to point in that direction was the founding convention of the Federation of Quebec Journalists in Montreal.

The federation is made up of organizations like press clubs and other non-union press associations, as well as unions throughout the province. Only journalists serving the Quebec market may be members.

Happy to Talk

Health and Welfare Minister Jean-Paul Cloutier, who represented the Cabinet at the founding convention, said that now that the Quebec press "has given itself an official spokesman" the Government would be happy to dialogue with it.

The same convention called on the government to alter the status of OIPQ and Radio-Quebec to make them autonomous organizations responsible to the National Assembly, rather than responsible to some minister.

The infant federation, however, refused membership to "journalists" working for l'Office or Radio-Quebec until their organizations achieve a status comparable to that of the CBC.

Radio-Quebec, which recently opened a modern production centre in Montreal and which is at the core of the Paris-Quebec-Ottawa satellite wrangle, could get autonomous status this session.

(Legislation to increase the powers of the organization was introduced last week.)

This sort of move has been proposed by several editorials in Quebec's 10 French-language dailies, notably in Le Devoir and Quebec City's Le Soleil.

Meanwhile, the already existing language barriers between the French and English networks of the CBC are being reinforced by a separate union structure.

The decision last year to put all of the CBC's Quebec news operation under the control of the Confederation of National Trade Unions is having one unforeseen effect: the English side of the network in Montreal is being cut out of the pan-Canadian system.

There are many working for CBC News out of Montreal who feel that this separation from the rest of the network will atrophy the English presence in that city.

The problem as they present it goes something like this. They are members of the CNTU and consequently they have no seniority outside Quebec where the American Newspaper Guild is the bargaining agent.

This means that they are at the bottom of the list as far as promotions in the English network are concerned.

It also means that they do not get any assignments outside Quebec that could not be handled by a Guild member.

Seeking Transfers

Competent and ambitious newsmen will not want to work in Montreal under such circumstances, they claim. And that is why some of them are pressing for transfers.

It is not hard to see how this could make the Quebec network a more tidy package in the event that Quebec ever wanted to take it over.

And it is equally easy to see why Quebec should want to lay claim to this "instrument of culture and education."

Fluorides and Democracy

By JOSHUA LEDERBERG

The merits of fluoridation make for one of the most intricate technical questions ever submitted to popular decision. In many communities, the question of fluoridating the water supply has been too hot for the local authorities to handle, and when taken to the polls has often lost out.

The weight of expert opinion (with which I concur) favors fluoridation for the dental health of children and discounts the likelihood of any hazard.

Therefore, many sociologists have interpreted adverse voter reaction as the alienation of the powerless: "A vote against fluoridation, then, is a vote against science expertise, modernization and the mass society."

Writing in Science Magazine, however, Harvey M. Sapolsky, an MIT political scientist, counters that the public is confused rather than alienated.

He argues that test polls often show a strong majority in favor of fluoridation before a campaign. Then there ensues an apparent conflict of technical arguments which leaves the public unable to reach a correct decision.

The fallacy of this conclusion, in my own opinion, is that a vote on fluoridation is widely perceived as something more than a technical decision — about which, after all, many voters well know their limitations.

It is also an expression of political philosophy; that the right to dissent is more important than the merit of the complaint.

Saccharine assurances by profluoridationists that there can be no possible hazard are self-defeating, for nothing in life is so certain.

Many of us would hesitate to subject the "other fellow" to fluoride against his will, no matter how far-fetched his objections might be.

Those of us who regard a proper dose of fluoride as a personal benefit can, after all, get it at moderate cost.

On the other hand, the social merit of ensuring better teeth for all children is obvious. The fluoridation controversy is, then, an unusually simple test case of the conflict between personal liberty and what Roosevelt called "the liberty of the community."

We face many more difficult confrontations of this kind as a by-product of biological discovery, and we ought to be learning better how to handle them. In a democracy, the right answer is not "let the experts decide."

The most obvious step is, of course, to resolve the argument by more research and better education about its positive conclusions.

But there is also a deeper issue: how to soften the conflict between individual and community. That is to say that the enhancement of individual decision should be an important premise of social policy.

This principle can often lead to technological evasions of insoluble moral or political conflicts.

This is not the place to argue the details of a particular technique, but, to give one illustration, we might offer a third choice to the argument about fluoridation. That would be to add fluoride only in alternate weeks according to a prearranged schedule.

Those of us who see a benefit from or are indifferent to fluoride could ignore the schedule. Those who hold against it could save low-fluoride drinking water (fluoridate-free water is a laboratory artifact) for use in "fluoride weeks."

I would also advise them against drinking tea, which is a rather rich source of fluoride.

'Moral Pressure' Worse Than Beatings

By RICHARD NEEDHAM

Some kids are home-sick when they're away, and some are home-sick when they're at home. They're homesick in the sense of being seasick or car-sick; the home is making them ill — physically or mentally or both, and I guess every doctor and clergyman and social worker in Canada knows kids (not to mention adults) who fit the description.

Needham

Samuel Butler referred to this way of being home-sick in his great autobiographical novel, The Way of All Flesh.

The book tells of a sadistic English clergyman, Rev. Theobald Pontifex, and his jellyfish of a wife, Christina, who under the guise of Christian love give their children an utterly hellish upbringing.

"The children were white and puny, they were suffering from homesickness. They were starving through being over-crammed with the wrong things" — with fear, hate, suspicion, scoldings, beatings for trivial reasons or none at all. (Little Ernest, alias Samuel Butler himself, is beaten by his father for pronouncing the word "come" as "tum." Ernest is then sent to bed, and his father calls in the servants for evening prayers.)

Servants? Yes, the story is told in mid-Victorian times, for Samuel Butler lived his life from 1835 to 1902.

Spare the rod and spoil the child! Absolute obedience in all things!

That's what the Victorians believed, and notably among them Rev. Theobald Pontifex (alias Rev. Thomas Butler.)

His philosophy of parenthood is described in the following passage:

"It was the duty of parents to begin training up their chidren in the way they should go, even from their earliest infancy. The first signs of self-will must be carefully looked for, and plucked up by the roots at once before they had time to grow. Before Ernest could well crawl, he was taught to kneel; before he could well speak, he was taught to lisp the Lord's Prayer and the General Confession.

"How was it possible these things could be taught too early? If his attention flagged or his memory failed him, here was an ill weed which would grow apace, unless it were plucked out immediately, and the only way to pluck it out was to whip him, or shut him up in a cupboard, or dock him of some of the small pleasures of childhood."

What the father seeks to accomplish through bullying and beatings, the slimy, whiny, treacherous mother seeks to accomplish through emotional blackmail.

She tells Ernest, "Papa does not feel that you love him with that fulness and unreserve which would prompt you to have no concealment from him, and to tell him everything freely and fearlessly as your most loving earthy friend next only to your Heavenly Father. Perfect love, as we know, casteth out fear; your father loves you perfectly, my darling, but he does not feel that you love him perfectly in return."

Ecch! Ernest hates and fears his father from the very beginning, but discovers only around 16 what a fink his mother is — she had played the domestic confidence trick on him times without number already.

Over and over again had she wheedled from him all she wanted to know, and afterward got him into the most horrible scrapes by telling the whole to Theobald.

But Ernest isn't out of the woods yet — "A boy of barely 16 cannot stand against the moral pressure of a father and mother who have always oppressed him any more than he can cope physically with a powerful, full-grown man."

This moral pressure on children, what I call emotional blackmail, is much worse than physical beatings; and perhaps is more in style today than physical beatings.

If your parents "rough you up" you can have them in court; but if they go on the emotional trip — "You have disappointed us, you have ruined our lives, we made such sacrifices for you" — there's no redress.

So after all this, what's the right way to bring up kids? Hell, I don't pretend to know. But from everything I've seen and done, I would feel (not claiming to be "right," just saying what I think) that there's little to be gained from hitting them, scolding them, cutting them down, trying to make them feel guilty.

I'd go along with the French philosopher, Joseph Joubert, who said, "Our children are in more need of models than of critics."

Parents should love their kids, to be sure, but shouldn't try to mold or possess or dominate them, should encourage them rather to grow up with confidence in themselves and respect for others.

It seems to me the best thing a parent can do is to laugh a good deal (at himself, with the children), set as good an example as he can, and hope they will turn out okay.

There's no guarantee that they will in fact turn out okay; in this world, there are no guarantees whatsoever.

But if a child is brought up on the side of joy and warmth and life, he'll probably stay on that side.

If, on the other hand, he is brought up on the side of gloom and fear and death, he'll probably stay on that side, too, which explains those faces you see on the subway each morning.

'I Was Sort of Flying Blind' . . .

By JAMES McDIVITT

The LM (Lunar Module) is a spacecraft, even though it doesn't look like one with all those legs and protrusions. It doesn't have a heat shield or parachutes, but it handles in orbit just as any other spacecraft does.

You fly it standing up, which makes it a bit different, but it had rocket engines for attitude control. It can be flown up or down, backward or forward, right or left.

Inside the LM we have cables hooked to our waists, holding us down on the floor. Before the flight I had some concern about how we would be able to operate with them.

On the ground, wearing an 85-pound suit and putting up with those cable tensions, we really got tired.

In orbit we didn't. Our suits didn't weigh anything there, and neither did we.

It was a little surprising to find that the cables tended to pull us to the outside of the spacecraft, me to the left and Rusty to the right. But that's what they were designed to do in a lunar landing — hold you toward the window. In orbit you much prefer to look at the instruments, not out the window.

Our primary task was to make a technical evaluation of the LM spacecraft, and an operational evaluation of the two spacecraft operating together. This is complicated; not just twice as complicated, but "50 times 50 times" more complicated.

You have to talk to each other; the ground stations have to talk to each other; the problems of co-ordination increase goemetrically; and I can't say enough about the great job everyone on the ground did.

The fifty day — the day we separated and flew different trajectories and then made a rendezvous and docking — well, that was a long day. Twenty-six hours.

We ate breakfast and we didn't eat again for almost 24 hours. We had planned to, but we became too involved in making sure that we flew that spacecraft to where it was supposed to be at the right time.

I had had about 350 hours doing all this in a LM simulator, but it turned out to be considerably different doing a docking in the sunlight.

Our sight is like a reflecting gun sight, a piece of glass that reflects an image from a light source. But the Command Module is silver, and with the sun shining on it, Gumdrop was so bright that I really couldn't see it.

The relative brightness between my sight and the target was about the same. I was sort of flying blind, with Dave talking me in, until the last few feet.

Then I could see the sight and it all worked fine.

There is a difference in docking techniques, too. Dave docked first, the first day of the flight, when he turned the Command Module around and hooked onto the LM and pulled it out of the third stage of the rocket. At that time the two vehicles together weighted about 200,000 pounds or more.

It was a very, very large mass. When I flew back to dock with Dave four days later the LM weighed only about 10,000 pounds and the

Col. James A. McDivitt, 39, commanded the Gemini 4 four years ago, which featured the first space walk, made by Lt. Col. Edward White. Col. David R. Scott, 36, was co-pilot on the Gemini 8 flight three years ago when the craft tumbled out of control and made an emergency landing in the Pacific.

Suddenly, During It All There Was No Spider

Considering everything, it was the perfect test flight—something every pilot dreams about.

On the first day my job was trai sposition and docking—turning Gumdrop (the command module) around to latch onto Spider (the lunar module), then fold up inside the third-stage rocket, and pull "him" out.

Everything went perfectly except that the reaction control thrusters which moved us to the left refused to work. It seemed like Geimini 8 all over again. That time, three years ago, Neil Armstrong and I had reaction control thrusters which failed in the on position and we had to make an emergency landing in the Pacific.

This time the thrusters failed off. The spacecraft would go up and down, forward and backward, and to the right. But it wouldn't go left.

We tried every control mode there was, threw all the switches, tried all the backup modes. If we couldn't go left we couldn't get the LM (lunar module) out.

Then we noticed that several propellant valves were closed. We had checked them prior to stage separation. Once those valves are open, they are never supposed to close by accident. These were closed.

We opened them, and then we had our thruster control and we got the LM out.

BUSY FIFTH DAY

On that busy fifth day I had one of those surprises that you learn to expect in flight.

Spider was off by himself and I could see him each time I manoeuvred to look for him. His flashing light was always there at night and his reflected image in the daytime.

But right in the middle of the rendezvous, almost at the maximum distance between us, there was no LM. I gave him a call and asked if his lights were on and he said he couldn't tell.

My first thought was that the light had failed, and my second was that perhaps the manoeuvre was in the wrong direction and I was looking in the wrong place. I checked my computer numbers and the LM numbers and the ground calculations and everything seemed to be okay, but there was still no LM.

'MIRROR MODE'

Now all our operations were set up so that the command module could do the same manoeuvres as the LM, only in reverse—we call it the "mirror mode"—so that if the LM failed, the command module could get to the same relative position at the same time and complete the rendezvous.

'Hey, Amigo, I've Got You In My Big Eye'

But during that period, I didn't have a chance to get a navigation fix on the LM. And all I could do was sit and wait and hope that when Spider came into daylight I could see him. I prepared the command module to perform a mirror image, as planned, and put the numbers into my computer.

At daybreak I commanded an automatic optics check to see if it would point at the LM. Suddenly—lo and behold!—there was Spider.

FANTASTIC COMPUTER

Fantastic computer! It had kept track for more than an hour without any updates and had projected an almost perfect solution. As I looked through the sextant I could see the LM image—not just a point source of light, but the whole odd silhouette of the LM ascent stage against the sky.

I called over and said, "Hey, Amigo, I've got you in my big eye!" And Spider came back and said, "Boy, am I ever glad to hear that!"

Then we thought we had it made.

But we didn't—quite. It was a little bothersome when Jim and Rusty were coming back in Spider and my indicators showed that the probe wasn't in the right position. (The "probe" is a mechanism on the command module which is designed to be inserted into a funnel-shaped "drogue" on the LM to lock the two vehicles together and permit the transfer of passengers from one vehicle to another through a tunnel.)

INDICATOR WRONG

For a little while it looked as if we might have to bring Jim and Rusty back to Gumdrop via the outside, extra-vehicular. Nobody was too keen about that because Jim had a backup life support system with 30 minutes of oxygen and no radio—just where we always wanted to get him, with only 30 minutes of air and no voice!

It turned out the indicator was wrong, not the system. I recycled the switch and went through the sequence again, and for some reason that made everything check out properly. We may never know what, if anything, was wrong, because we left the probe up there.

Now we were home free, and shortly thereafter I was able to report: "I have capture."

They tell me I sounded pretty matter-of-fact, and that down in Nassau Bay, outside Houston, my wife looked pretty relieved when she heard me say it.

But I did not feel so very matter-of-fact when I went on to tell the world that we had the best flight support system anybody ever had. Because we did.

(C) 1969 Time Inc.

All That Mattered

You should never be early to a party, but you must never be late to a rendezvous.

We were 100 miles apart at maximum separation, and we couldn't always see Gumdrop. That wasn't of any concern, because our radar had him, we knew exactly how far away he was, how fast we were going away or closing, and where we were relatively above or below him. That was all that mattered.

Part of our flight plan was to have a LM-active docking. That is, the LM would find Gumdrop and dock with him. Such a docking is not a normal procedure — it is much easier for the Command Module to do it.

But of the CM were short of fuel, or had a thruster out, or some other emergency, we wanted to test the capability of the LM for the job.

Docking Overhead

Normally when you fly the LM you do it by looking out the front window to see where you're going, and fly it with the control handles — pushing forward when you want to go forward, back when you want to go back.

But the only way to dock is over your head. The docking mechanism is up there.

There's a small window in the ceiling, and you mount the sight up there and lean over backwards and look up, lining up that sight with a target in the window of the Command Module.

You have to line up on that target and fly toward it — and that involves what we call a co-ordinate transformation. You must learn to operate the controls at an angle 90 degrees different from normal.

Couldn't See It

When you're looking out the front window and you want to go forward, you push forward. But when you're bent over backwards, looking up, you have the feeling that you want to go forward but in fact you want to pull the handle up, to make you go up. It takes a little practice.

. . . 'Gee Whiz, We Did It'

Going up and down the handrail on the LM, a distance of eight or nine feet, I had absolutely no problem. At one point I let go with one hand, held on with the other and positioned body as I wished just by using one wrist.

As I approached the Command Module, Dave was supposed to take pictures, but he ran out of film in his sequence camera and he was saying, "Just a minute, just a minute."

So I was playing around for seven or eight minutes, waiting for him to change his film pack.

In that time I could have done the whole transfer, climbing up the LM and into the Command Module, three times!

But we fulfilled our objective: to exercise the whole portable life support system, the suit, the extra-vehicular visor assembly with the gold coating on it, and the EV gloves, which are quite different from the gloves we use inside the spacefraft. And we had verified that it was possible to transfer that way from one spacecraft to the other.

NOT AFRAID

People always ask you if you aren't afraid and the answer "no" doesn't really satisfy them.

They don't believe it. It's difficult for people who haven't spent years of their lives building up to something like this to understand that it is possible to do it and not have throbbing and butterflies.

You develop a capability for detachment, and that's a good thing. Detachment is a mechanism, perhaps a defence mechanism, which enables you to operate in a situation that is demanding and potentially dangerous and do so in a rational and controlled manner. We are not so different from other people, except perhaps in the frequency with which we experience situations where maintaining complete control, emotionally and mentally, is required to sustain our lives. It is this capacity we call on. Not at one time during the rendezvous did I — and I'm sure it was the same with Jim — think about being 100 miles away, without even a heat shield. Thinking about such a thing doesn't pay because it's almost irrelevant.

'WE DID IT'

When that long day was over and the LM was gone, the three of us were back in the CM looking at each other and saying, "Gee whiz, we did it! We really did it! How in the world did we do it?" We had all hated to say "Bye, bye, LM" (yes, we said it) as it sailed away — to stay in orbit for 19 years. We saw it once more on the 10th day as a bright spot of light which passed within 700 miles of us before pulling away again.

At the end of that great fifth day there was no hoopla, just a warm handshake all around, but Jim wouldn't go to sleep. He was really turned on, finding all kinds of things to say and do, this and that, and Dave and I would look at each other and think, well, wait until he runs down and we can go to bed. He finally did.

I had also taken on board a tape recording of Vaughan Williams' cantata Hodie, a really beautiful thing, but I couldn't find it to play until the ninth or 10th day. It turned up in one of Dave's suit pockets.

LACKS COMFORT

For longer space flights, after Apollo, something will have to be done about creature comforts.

On a flight like ours you can grit your teeth and bear it — you know that you're going to get clean again, chew a steak again. You know you can do it, but you do find yourself thinking about what a 56-day mission would be like.

By now everybody knows that I got sick, twice in the same day, and almost didn't get to go outside at all. I still don't know why I got sick — it happened when I least expected it. Happily, on the fourth day, the EVE (Extra Vehicular Activity) day, as we were preparing for an abbreviated operation it became obvious to both Jim and me that I was feeling much better.

When we reached the point in the checklist that called for final preparations, Jim looked at me and then informed Houston that we would press on with it. I said nothing then, but afterward, when we had finished work in the LM, I looked at Jim and said, "Thank you." He said, "That's what we came up here for. I just didn't want you to kill yourself." I said, "I agree with that, and I'll try not to for the rest of the mission."

Before the Magistrate

An obsession for time earned a 75-year-old man nine months' worth when he appeared in magistrate's court Saturday charged with theft.

Court was told Charles Simard, 1312 Government, took 10 small clocks from F. W. Woolworth Ltd. Friday and concealed them in pockets in his trousers, jacket and raincoat. He was seen by a clerk who alerted a store detective.

The detective said the accused left the store but remained standing outside with price tags of some of the clocks dangling from his raincoat pockets.

The detective testified Simard appeared intoxicated and while being questioned in an office in the store toppled off a chair.

Arthur Nickerson, 1554 Athlone, was fined $400 when he pleaded guilty to being impaired while in care or control of a car.

Crown counsel Ernest McIntyre said police observed Nickerson's car following close behind a sports car heading north on Quadra at 12:40 a.m. Saturday. As police followed them, both cars overtook and passed two other vehicles on the right-hand side.

The defendant's car was weaving, struck a curb and several times swerved on to the gravel shoulder, police said.

Police finally stopped the sports car when it turned into a dead-end street. Nickerson was later found lying on the front seat of his car after parking it on Deeprose.

Magistrate William Ostler suspended the accused's licence.

A 35-year-old man who said he stole two clocks from Woolworth's on a dare was sentenced Monday to a month in jail.

Daniel Blondeau, 647 Niagara, pleaded guilty.

"I hear some stupid things from time to time," said Magistrate William Ostler after listening to the explanation.

Blondeau said he was dared on Saturday to take the clocks, go out one door and return them via another without being caught.

A store official said he saw the man put the clocks inside his coat and in his pocket. He caught up to the accused on the street. Total value of the articles was $28.

"Why are the clocks at Woolworth's so popular with everyone?" asked Magistrate Ostler, noting another man had pleaded guilty several days previously to taking clocks from the store.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Blondeau had a previous conviction for theft for which he was fined.

An 18-year-old was given probation on a charge of breaking into and stealing from Reynolds Road School.

Alan G. Mackereth, 4022 Martha Crescent, also was ordered to post a $500 18-month bond.

He pleaded guilty earlier to the theft of a quantity of chocolate bars, candy and milk from the school March 18.

Andrew Robb, no address available, was sentenced to a year in jail on three counts of false pretences.

He pleaded guilty to cashing worthless cheques totalling $25 at a city hotel earlier in March.

Magistrate Ostler said he would recommend the man be sent to the Alouette River Institute, a treatment centre for alcoholics.

Robb was convicted on nine counts of false pretences in 1967 and nine in 1968.

Kevin Macdonald, 19, of 2639 Victor, was sentenced to six months on a charge of common assault by Magistrate J. A. Byers.

The charge was laid Jan. 8 after an incident during which a man said he was pushed and grabbed by Macdonald.

He was also given a six-month concurrent sentence for a breach of recognizance.

Donald Stopherd, of Cobble Hill, was fined $250 for driving while suspended. Donald Green, 21 Ontario, was fined $100 on the same charge.

Roy MacDonald, 964 Inverness, was fined $400 for impaired driving.

Command Module about 25,000.

We had dropped the heavy third stage and burned up a lot of fuel. The difference is how hard you can hit and still be safe.

When they are heavy, the two spacecraft go right together. When they are light, they tend to touch and bounce away.

So the first time we just let the thing glide right up into the drogue and latch. The second time we waited until we were about ready to touch and then I fired the thrusters to push us the rest of the way in.

The sound of those latches, that capture, was pretty nice. There is very little that has to be changed to make that LM ready for a lunar landing. It was a successful test flight.

We make gasoline. But mileage is our business.

Our idea is quite simple: we want you to go as far as possible on every gallon of gasoline. That's why we try to do a lot more than just fill your tank.

How we help you go farther

When you stop at the Shell sign, we can check your tires. The right pressure will give you better mileage.

We can check your spark plugs. If they're worn, you could be wasting one gallon in every tankful.

We can check your air filter. If it's dirty, that's more wasted gasoline—and money.

These are a few of our gas-saving secrets. We have many more. We want everything right with your car when we fill your tank—so Super Shell can really show off.

5 ingredients for good mileage

Super Shell has built up quite a reputation for good mileage. There's one good reason: the formulation.

Super Shell has five ingredients blended for good mileage.

- Platformate contains extra-energy petroleum molecules.
- TCP works to keep spark plugs from misfiring.
- Butane helps you start quickly. And the faster you start, the less gasoline you use before you get going.
- A detergent fights deposits that can build up inside the carburettor. These deposits reduce mileage.
- Mixed Pentanes help your engine warm up quickly to prevent misfiring, coughing and wasted fuel—in any weather.

But as we said, gasoline is only part of the story. Mileage is our business. We'd like to prove it to you.

Visit a Shell station—if you'd like to go farther.

Mileage is our business

Medicare Launched Without Most Doctors

WINNIPEG (CP) — Medicare comes to Manitoba today with more doctors out than in.

Coverage is compulsory, at monthly premiums of $9.80 for a family and $4.90 for an individual. But it's up to the doctor to decide whether he wants to work under the health care umbrella.

So far, it is the declared intention of more than half

Opposition Based On Lack of Deterrent Fees

the doctors in private practice to work outside the plan as it is now constituted.

The opt-outs include every practitioner in the booming northern mining town of Thompson, all doctors in the city of Brandon with the exception of pathologists and radiologists working within hospital facilities, and the majority of anesthesists at Metropolitan Winnipeg's hospitals.

The situation was described this way in a statement by Dr. D. M. McPhail, president of the Manitoba Medical Association, reporting that 417 doctors of approximately 750 in active private practice will not participate:

"Although these opted-out doctors are generally representative of urban and rural practice, there are certain geographic areas where all doctors have elected to opt out, and there are also certain specialty sections which all doctors have elected to opt out."

Opposition is based not on the principle of a compulsory government-operated insurance plan, MMA spokesmen say, but on the Manitoba plans' absence of "direct patient participation — "that is, provision for payment by a patient of part of every doctor bill rather than having the premium take care of everything.

Says Dr. McPhail: "Experience in other areas indicates that where there is no patient-physician responsibility in recognizing the actual costs of medical services, there is unforseen and incontrollable escalation of the costs of these services."

WEIR
. . . no rate increase

At the heart of the MMA-government disagreement is the matter of assignment of benefits.

Under the plan, to be administered by the Medical Services Insurance Corporation, a participating doctor will be reimbursed directly for about 85 per cent of the provincial fee schedule, and he must accept this amount as payment in full.

Non-participating doctors may bill to the full schedule, but the 85-per-cent payment will be made to the patient who then is expected to pass it on to the doctor. The patient will not be permitted to "assign" it — that is, ask the corporation to pay it directly to the doctor.

However, in amendments to the 1967 Medical Services Bill which are before the legislature the government has made a concession to the doctors in allowing assignment in the case of teaching hospitals, whether or not the doctor is a medicare participant.

Also, the door is being left open for a possible future change in payment methods by amending the original act so that the assignment policy could be changed by provincial cabinet action without reference to the house.

"It is impossible at this time to tell what arrangements will be necessary as the plan comes into operation to make it work in the public interest," Health Minister George Johnson told the legislature last week.

Over-all cost for the first year of the plan has been estimated at $44,000,000, with Ottawa picking up approximately $26,000,000 of the tab under federal medical care legislation.

Premier Walter Weir has said the premium rate should see the plan through at least the first two years without any increase.

MANY FOR-HIRE

There are about 62,000 for-hire trucks on Canadian roads and they do about three-quarters of all truck transport net miles.

BETTING CASE TRIAL ORDERED

CALGARY (CP) — Seventeen men, charged with conspiring to commit bookmaking, were committed here for trial in Alberta Supreme Court after 19 days of preliminary hearing.

The men were charged in November, 1967, after simultaneous RCMP raids in Calgary, Vancouver, Winnipeg, Toronto, Regina, Edmonton and Montreal.

The prosecution called 86 witnesses and entered 541 exhibits during the hearing before Magistrate R. V. Read.

Exhibits included schedules of sporting events, team records, bank records showing transfers of money between the six cities, records of 16,542 long-distance telephone calls and what one Crown witness called "instructions on how to bet."

CN Pensioners Have Travel Show

Old railroaders from many parts of Canada will entertain their wives at a meeting of Canadian National Railway Pensioners' Association Friday at 2 p.m.

The event will take place in the K of P Hall, 723 Cormorant Street.

Pensioner Alex Gray, whose hobby is photography, will show slides of his visit to California. Bingo and refreshments will follow.

Russian Troops Alert To New Chinese Raid

MOSCOW (WP) — High Soviet commanders on the Ussuri frontier are reported to be concerned over the prospect of new Chinese attacks within the next fortnight.

Soviet journalists just returned from the area report that the population of Khabarovsky and other major Soviet far eastern towns is calm, but that Russian military leaders are worried about the approaching thaw which, within the next two weeks, will render useless the movement of heavy Soviet armored personnel carriers, tanks and trucks near beleaguered Damansky (Chenpao) Island.

The Red army has completely evacuated the civilian population of Nizhne Mikhailovka and other border points, and Soviet frontier troops—who have been reinforced—have been instructed not to expose themselves to sniper fire.

30% OF BLOOD 'NOT USED'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Almost 30 per cent of the 78,300 pints of blood, issued to British Columbia hospitals last year by the B.C.-Yukon division of the Canadian Red Cross Soceity, was not used. Dr. T. D. Stout, medical director, said Sunday hospital control should be improved.

COMMONS WORK LIST STILL HEAVY

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — The 1968-69 session of Parliament has enacted 29 bills, 18 of them since Christmas.

But that still leaves 40 bills to go in 56 sitting days if the Commons adjourns as planned June 27 for the summer. The session started last Sept. 12.

Some of these 40 bills are likely to be disposed of by Wednesday this week when the Commons knocks off until April 14 for an Easter recess. At least four are merely waiting for Senate passage or royal assent or both.

Of the 56 scheduled sitting days, 13 will be opposition days —that is, days on which the opposition parties can bring up any subject they wish.

Another six days will be devoted to a budget debate—if there is a budget — or to a statement on the economy promised by Finance Minister Edgar Benson.

Consequently, the Commons will have only 37 days at the most to put through about the same number of pieces of legislation.

Such speedy action is possible but appears unlikely in view of the fact that 19 bills have not yet been even introduced in the Commons.

These 19 include promised amendments in the National Housing Act. This subject alone is expected to consume many days.

The bill to give effect to the two-per-cent income tax surcharge imposed last Oct. 22 has not been introduced. Neither has the hoary Canada Development Corporation bill which has made almost an annual appearance on the order paper since 1963 without being passed.

Hellyer Denies Ethics Breach

OTTAWA (CP) — The government counter-attacked on two fronts Monday against criticism surrounding the selection of a site for Montreal's new international airport.

While Prime Minister Trudeau set out the government's reasons for its choice in an argument with Quebec, Transport Minister Paul Hellyer in the Commons rejected opposition charges of a breach in political ethics in the manner of announcing it.

A Conservative bid for investigation of radio and television announcements recorded by Mr. Hellyer and Rural Development Minister Jean Marchand before the site was revealed was ruled out by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux.

But the Speaker said the issue could still be raised as a non-confidence matter if the opposition wishes.

The airport controversy, boiling through the weekend after charges raised in the House Friday, took up an hour of Commons time at the opening Monday.

Later the House snapped through final approval of four minor government measures.

They dealt with the Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corp. Act, the Co-Operative Credit Associations Act, the National Library and the Farm Machinery Syndicates Credit Act.

Blocking Tactic Overcome

In Monday's round, the government was overruled in an attempt to block a transport committee report on the service. The committee recommends that the cabinet suspend an order of the Canadian transport commission authorizing the CNR to end the service after April 15.

A motion to concur in the report was permitted by Mr. Lamoureux, and it is to be debated today.

In the airport debate, Mr. Hellyer and Mr. Marchand conceded that they had made the advance tapes, but only on a tentative basis for use if the cabinet decided on the site they expected would be chosen.

Mr. Hellyer said many people were aware of the sites under consideration, but every possible precaution had been taken to ensure that the final choice was kept secret until the cabinet decision was announced last Thursday.

A private public relations firm, Agence Canadienne de Publicite Limitee, had been hired to make arrangements for the advance taping, but they and other firms involved understood that no final decision had been taken.

The work was "subject to the normal discretion and security which is involved in any professional contract," he said. And the Official Secrets Act had "general application" in the case.

Expropriation papers were filed immediately after the announcement.

Even if there had been a leak, Mr. Hellyer said, there was no chance that a speculator could make a profit from a last-minute purchase. Expropriation prices were not based on isolated transactions just before takeover.

"In general, I am satisfied that all possible security measures were taken and that in no sense has there been a breach of cabinet secrecy," Mr. Hellyer said.

But Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North), who moved for a committee investigation Friday when neither minister was in the House, continued to press his motion.

While he was not saying the ministers were guilty, the facts justified an investigation.

Only One Tape Recorded

Despite the government's insistence that no decision had been made at the time, only one tape had apparently been made.

It was contrary to ministers' oaths as privy councillors to make a disclosure on a matter dealing with money and property.

An investigation would determine "whether this breach of political ethics amounted to violation of the privy councillor's oath."

In all, he said, about 100 people would have been "in the know."

It was no defence to say that no harm had been done. This was as ridiculous as defending a drunk who drove on the wrong side of the road by saying he did not kill anyone.

As for the argument that the action would not affect land prices, Mr. Woolliams called it "hogwash."

David Lewis, NDP deputy leader, used the same word on Mr. Hellyer's statement that no final decision had been reached.

"Nobody can persuade any reasonable person that the ministers responsible . . . would go to the trouble of having a booklet produced, of pre-taping information, without having at least a 99.99-per-cent certainty that what they were proposing was going to be accepted."

The minister's "rather arrogant" admissions showed there was at least some question about the judgment and propriety of what had been done, and it should be investigated.

Span Opening Delayed

VANCOUVER (CP)—Opening of Canadian National Railways lift bridge across the Second Narrows on Burrard Inlet, scheduled for today, has been delayed until mid-month. A spokesman said further tests of the complicated mechanism are needed.

Tax Boost Looms

VANCOUVER (CP)—A tax increase of 7.5 per cent on the average house in Vancouver is forecast for 1969-70 in a preliminary report to city council. This would be less than half the 16.3 per cent increase originally forecast by the city's finance department.

HELLYER
. . . airport hassle

Trudeau, Bertrand Clash Over New Airport Site

OTTAWA (CP) — Harsh words have been exchanged by Prime Minister Trudeau and Quebec Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand over the federal choice of a site for Montreal's new jumbo-jet airport, and neither side shows any sign of backing down.

Announcement last Thursday of the selection of a site at Ste. Scholastique, 26 miles northwest of Montreal, brought howls of protest from Quebec politicians who would have preferred a site south or southeast of the city.

Premier Bertrand summed it up Monday when he made public, in Quebec City, the text of a Friday telegram to Mr. Trudeau describing the federal decision as a "power play" coup de force and as "unacceptable."

He made a formal request that the decision be revoked and that Ottawa resume negotiations on a site with Quebec representatives.

Mr. Trudeau retorted in a telegram Monday night that the premier's reaction "seems to me scarcely worthy of the relations of confidence and good faith" between Quebec and Ottawa.

AGREES TO MEETING

He agreed to another meeting between federal and provincial representatives on the airport question, but gave no indication that the decision would be reviewed.

The prime minister said the meeting would "shed some light on many points in your telegram which seem to us to indicate an erroneous interpretation of the facts and figures we submitted to you."

Mr. Bertrand said in his telegram that the federal decision was "aimed at imposing on Quebec a decision that is unacceptable because it is far from being the most favorable to its development.

"I was all the more disappointed because it appears to me that Quebec did everything in its power to communicate frankly with your representatives and that our views were expressed reasonably and clearly. You have known for a long time that the site you chose was unacceptable to us, and you know why."

Mr. Trudeau denied that Quebec's views had been overlooked, and accused the premier of trying to make the public believe that the federal government "listened to your arguments but neglected to take them into consideration in making its decision."

'CONTENTION IS ODIUS'

The prime minister described as "particularly odious" Mr. Bertrand's statement that the Ste. Scholastique site would do more for Ottawa and Ontario than it would for Quebec development.

"The area north of Montreal is still part of Quebec as far as I know," Mr. Trudeau said, "and I find it hard to see how an investment of more than $400,000,000 on the part of the federal government and airline companies, as well as the creation of 75,000 to 100,000 new jobs in that region, will not benefit Quebec first."

He said he could not believe that Quebec government policies were so discouraging to private investment as to drive it outside the province.

Mr. Trudeau said he was "astonished at the tone" of Mr. Bertrand's telegram, since he had told the premier of the decision before it was announced and had explained "at length the reasons for our decision."

Premier Bertrand had said in the national assembly Friday that the Quebec government was informed of the choice of a site at the same time as Ottawa reporters.

We Won't Be Coerced, Says Bertrand

Students Talk French —Or Else

OTTAWA (CP) — Students caught speaking English at St. Thomas of Aquinas French separate school in Ottawa are losing their recess time.

They become members of "The Club" run by their school principal and teachers, and must read a short French book. The books can be read in four recesses, or taken home. The students remain members of The Club until they can answer questions on the book successfully.

The Club meets during recess and is not considered a punishment. Its purpose is to help to break the children of their habit of speaking English.

"It works," Principal Andre Richard declared. "The children are speaking French in the school yard."

Sixty per cent of the students at the school are English-Canadian.

The Club has become a source of competition among the students. Each class tries to see which can have fewer members in The Club each week.

Some of the students' parents, however, hotly oppose the idea of The Club.

One student was a member from just after Christmas until Feb. 25, and his mother said: "They've changed the schools from bilingual to French-language but they can't change the kids."

It was found that instructions to speak only French during recess were being ignored unless a teacher was present.

Most of the French-language school's encourage the use of French at all times, but the children may lapse into English. Few principals of other French schools in Ottawa favor a method such as the recess club to encourage French.

Principal Richard says: "English children come here to learn French. You can't learn to speak French listening to a teacher all day. The only way they will learn French is by speaking it spontaneously."

BIG NARCOTICS HAUL

NUERNBERG (Reuters)—Police have seized about 100 pounds of marijuana and arrested 16 men, including 11 American servicemen, in what is believed the biggest narcotics haul in West Germany.

A Nuernberg police spokesman said today the drugs were found in an apartment and the 16 men rounded up Monday night.

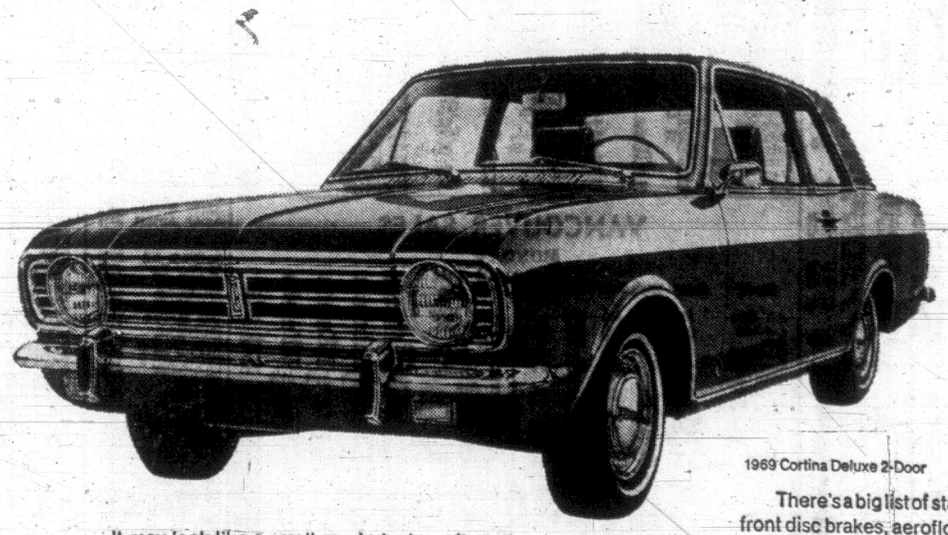
CORTINA Ford

Deep inside this small car lives a big car.



1969 Cortina Deluxe 2-Door

It may look like a small car, but where it really counts, the 1969 Cortina is a big car. And big in standard features. Consider this: last year's great sales success didn't come because Cortina is an ordinary import. Cortina is extraordinary.

Start with the trunk. It isn't import-sized. It's big-car sized. You get 21 cu. ft. to store your suitcases, hat boxes, duffel bags or what-have-you. Try the back seat: room for three... not two, three. Up front, there are two big bucket seats that are very, very comfortable—with big-car leg and shoulder room.

And Cortina is big in interior styling with handsome vinyl trim and fully-padded dash. The Cortina Deluxe and GT models feature deep-embossed vinyl seats, coloured keyed interiors and full loop pile carpet.

Cortina believes in delivering big car performance too. With a unique bowl-in-piston engine, bred in over 500 rally wins around the world. And thoroughly tested in tough Canadian winters. This great engine gives you better acceleration, higher top speed, and better performance with no increase in fuel consumption. In fact, you get up to 36 mpg.

There's a big list of standard features that includes front disc brakes, aeroflow ventilation with air extractors, a 4-speed fully-synchronized "sport type" transmission, (3-speed North American-type automatic is optional at a modest cost), a special Canadian Winter Driving Package comprising heavy duty battery and starter, high output heavy-duty generator and heater/defroster; and lots more. There's a big model choice of 2- and 4-door Cortinas, 2- and 4-door Cortina Deluxes, 2- and 4-door GT's, and an incredibly roomy 4-door Deluxe Wagon. And they're all equipped with the North American Safety Equipment Package including headrests.

If you're a GT buff, the standard GT features will make you smile all the way to the bank. You get everything from a 1600 cc engine with a 2-V Weber carburetor, tach and full instrumentation, including a clock, to a special stiffened suspension, radial ply tires, and power brakes with front discs. The GT interior features a genuine wood-panelled dash.

Yet, with all this big car thinking inside and out, Cortina gives you small car thinking in two vital areas: a very low purchase price and economy of operation. Discover Cortina's big car hiding inside a little car at selected Ford and Mercury dealers. It's a lot more car for buyers of imports.

Ford's 1969 Cortina: A lot more car $1945*

*Manufacturers suggested retail price of Cortina 2-door, Port of Entry Vancouver, not including Provincial and Local taxes, shipping charges, licence and suggested preparation and conditioning charge of $25.00. Illustrated Cortina Deluxe 2-door, slightly higher.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Editor: G. S. Kent

Western Broadcasting

Western Broadcasting Co. Ltd. Monday completed the purchase of Derston Investment Ltd. to become the largest single shareholder in Television Broadcasting System Ltd.

The purchase, approved recently by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, includes 15 per cent of the common shares of BCTV held by Derston and brings Western's holdings to approximately 33 per cent of the comm shares in BCTV.

The acquisition also brings Vancouver financier Peter Paul Saunders to the board of directors of Western.

James United

James United Steel Ltd. has absorbed Zenith Engraving Co. Ltd. of Vancouver and its related companies into a "graphic arts industry group."

The other firms involved are Zenith Printing Plate Ltd., Western Graphic Arts Supply Ltd. and Calgary Photoengraving Ltd.

The Zenith group, which supplies basic services and designs and also manufactures products for the graphic arts and printing industry, had 1968 sales of about $1 million.

Zenith will continue operations under president John Thomson and vice-president Douglas J. Dailey.

James United, a Calgary-based company, said a program for acquisition throughout Canada and the western U.S. is being formulated by Thomson and Dailey.

Hanna-Kawasaki

The Hanna Mining Co. of Canada will supply Japan with iron ore in large quantities from Quebec over two years starting next year, the Kawasaki Steel Corp., of Japan, said.

A group of five leading Japanese steel mills led by Kawasaki has concluded a two-year deal with the Canadian firm to import between 400,000 and 600,000 tons of fine iron ore annually, the Japanese firm said.

The ore, mined at Carol Lake, Que., will be shipped from Sept Isles.

Canbrew

Canadian Breweries, Ltd., had net earnings of $10.89 million or 42 cents a share for the nine months ended January 31, compared with $11.5 million or 44 cents a share the previous year.

The company said the Ontario brewery strike last summer adversely affected the nine-month results. Earnings for the three months ended January 31 were $2.99 million or 11 cents a share, compared with 2.95 million or 10 cents a share.

Sales were up slightly in both periods — to $53.9 million after taxes, from $52 million in the three-month period, and to $189.4 million from $185 million for the nine months.

PNW Plywood

Seventeen more Pacific Northwest plywood plants shut down Monday for a week, most citing poor price levels as reasons for discontinuing production, Crow's weekly Plywood Letter reports.

Three plants stopped production last week. There are approximately 110 plywood plants in the Northwest U.S.

Air Link With China Desired By CP Air

TORONTO (CP) — The president of Canadian Pacific Airlines aid Monday his company is not interested in a merger with Air Canda on international routes unless "we hold a majority interest."

John C. Gilmer said the merger of the two companies in international operation has been informally discussed in a government review of Air Canada's corporate structure.

"We have already told the government that we would consider merger on international routes only if we hold a majority interest," said Gilmer who came here from Vancouver to mark Wednesday's inauguration of CPA's third transcontinental run.

The president of the Vancouver-based airline said his company is seeking route expansion on its own and will consider opening a service to China if Canada establishes diplomatic relations with that country.

"We are going to ask the government immediately to include air communications as part of these negotiations."

Gilmer said CPA has applied for operating rights to Zagreb or Belgrade, both in Yugoslavia, and to Tel Aviv, Israel, and Beirut, Lebanon.

The airline, he said would also fight to operate between Vancouver and Los Angeles and Toronto and San Francisco. The company now has a flight between Vancouver and San Francisco.

Tax Measures Will Increase Insurance Rates 'Slightly'

Life insurance premiums will be only slightly higher as a result of the federal government's new tax measures, Kenneth R. MacGregor, president of Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada, said here Monday.

"The increase will be small compared with the reduction of premiums that has been effected over the past 14 years," the president said.

"While everything else is going up, our premiums have been coming down. Inevitably there will have to be some adjustment in premiums or dividends, or both, but they will be small."

MacGregor said it will be some time before the life insurance industry adjusts fully to new taxation policy—a tax on benefits other than those paid on death, a 15 per cent tax on companies' investment income and a tax on their retained earnings.

Would Canadians buy a good mutual fund offering growth possibilities in preference to life insurance?

INSURANCE THE WAY

"No", the president said. "Life insurance is still the only way you can get an immediate estate. Mutual funds are not a substitute for permanent life insurance.

"The basis of every person's planning should be permanent life insurance. When they have established that basis, they can go on to invest in mutual funds and other things.

"Most people, when they retire, depend mainly on life insurance. Very few people over 65 can manage comfortably without it."

MacGregor said he is more optimistic than ever concerning the future of life insurance in Canada.

"There is a mistaken impression we have passed our peak. This is a fallacy."

On a recent visit to Japan, MacGregor noted that life insurance is "booming" and the Japanese people are using it to raise their standard of living.

"Their standards may be lower than ours, but there is a general feeling of prosperity. They work hard and they don't have our welfare services, but they are prospering."

Is there a trend towards a merger of Canadian Life Insurance companies?

"No," MacGregor said. "The federal government's policy is to discourage mergers of companies and I don't foresee any change."

Mr. and Mrs. MacGregor flew to Victoria from Pakistan, where they have been visiting their daughter, the wife of J. E. G. Gibson, Canadian trade commissioner to Pakistan and Afghanistan.

They are flying back to Waterloo, Ont., today.

U.S. Firm Seeking Canadian Gas Lines

CALGARY (CP) — Northern Natural Gas Co. of Omaha, Neb., searching for increased supplies, announced plans Monday for two natural gas pipelines in an attempt to grab a share of recent discoveries in Alberta and the Northwest Territories.

The company, making its second bid for Canadian natural gas, proposed pipelines from southeast Alberta and southwestern Northwest Territories to North Branch, Minn., at an estimated cost of $1.4 billion.

The Alberta pipeline, 36 inches in diameter and running 900 miles from Empress on the Saskatchewan border, would use gas from the Strachan-Ricinis area in the west-central section of the province.

The Strachan find now is being developed, chiefly by Banff Oil Ltd., and the gas would be delivered through the trans-Canada pipeline to Empress starting in November, 1971.

The Empress-to-North Branch line would initially carry 360 million cubic feet daily but this would increase to 960 million cubic feet by 1979.

TO AID DEVELOPMENT

The main objective of Northern Natural Gas, which serves more than 1,000 communities in the United States Midwest, is development of recent gas discoveries in the Pointed Mountain area of the Northwest Territories, about 750 miles northwest of Edmonton.

Herb Simpson, vice-president of development, said Northern needs the gas and plans the 1,710-mile pipeline as an aid to development of the territories and the "terrific reserves people think are there."

The 36-inch N.W.T. pipeline, which will cost about $1 billion, is to be in use by late 1974 and will originally carry 360 million cubic feet of natural gas daily. This would increase to 1.8 billion cubic feet by 1979.

Both lines are to be constructed by Consolidated Pipe Lines Co. of Calgary, in which Northern has acquired a controlling interest.

The Alberta line is to supply gas as an interim measure while markets are being developed and will continue at near capacity after the line to the territories is in use.

$ EXCHANGE

VICTORIA—Purchase of U.S. funds in terms of the Canadian dollar was quoted by the Royal Bank today at $1.07⅝ for cheques, $1.07¼ for cash, $1.06¼ for silver. Sales were $1.08⅛ for cheques and $1.08¼ for cash.

MONTREAL (CP)—The U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds was up 1/16 at $1.07 13/16. Pound sterling was up 3/16 at $2.37 15/16.

NEW YORK (CP)—The Canadian dollar was down 3/64 at $2 55/64 in terms of U.S. funds. Pound sterling was up 1/64 at $2.39¼.

Tax Tips

By P. J. KELLY
Victoria Taxation Office

If your question is not answered here or in the department's tax guide, telephone 382-2173 or write National Revenue, Taxation, Victoria.

Q.—I understand that persons with a net income from self-employment of $800 or more are required to file an income tax return, even if they have no taxable income. Is this so?

A.—This is true because the return is needed for the purpose of calculating and paying the contributions they must make under the Canada Pension Plan.

Q.—My 18-year-old daughter was married during the year. I have always claimed her as a dependant on my income tax return. Am I entitled to an exemption on this year's return?

A.—Your daughter's marriage during the year does not affect your right to claim her as a dependant for that year. If her total income for the year earned both before and after marriage is less than $950, you may claim her as a dependant.

Husbands Wash Feet for Wives In Serbia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The married men of the Serbian village of Dusnik have admitted they're a henpecked lot.

As a result life has become easier for them all. They've become less ashamed of it. Their wives have eased up on them a bit. They're the butt of fewer jokes.

Green membership cards are issued when the men sign up for a recently-organized Henpecked Husbands Club.

"Actually," one card-carrying member told a visiting reporter, "we've merely legalized a practice we've all been engaged in for years. Now that we openly admit our position, we're jeered at a lot less than before."

Rules of the club include various concessions.

The member must ask his wife's permission if he wants to go out.

He can't go out in any case until he has hauled in the water from the spring and wood for the fire.

He must not be ashamed to wash his wife's feet.

He'll baby-sit if his wife wants to go out.

He'll wash the dishes and clean up the kitchen whether his wife goes out or not.

And he'll get up first in the morning, light the fire and prepare the breakfast.

"Why not admit it?" one member said, "We've all been doing it for years."

Young unmarried males say things are better, too. Pretty girls from nearby villages have started coming to Dusnik to look for husbands willing to admit that a man's place is under the female thumb.

SIHANOUK
. . . neutral which way?

Communist Moves Worry Cambodia

By DAVID MASON

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — For years Prince Norodom Sihanouk heaped praise on the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong, lauding their "rightful struggle" in Vietnam. Lately he has turned against them, apparently because he feels they will gobble up Cambodia.

An increasingly ominous intrusion of the VC-Hanoi forces into Cambodia is one factor which seems to be making the 46-year-old ruler more friendly toward Washington. A cordial exchange of letters between Sihanouk and President Nixon and the quick release of four American prisoners have set the tone.

At a press conference recently, Sihanouk dramatically announced that the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese are encamped on vast stretches of eastern Cambodia.

More surprisingly, he openly expressed wonderment as to why the Americans didn't bomb them.

Sihanouk said the infiltrators "represent an immediate and long-term danger" for Cambodia. Once and for all, the prince cleared away any lingering doubt about repeated U.S. assertions that Communist-led forces operate in considerable numbers from his soil.

It was the first time he had been so specific and labelled their presence a real threat.

There was no immediate reaction from the North Vietnamese, who have an embassy here, and from the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front, which has one of its major diplomatic establishments here. But day to day relations between Cambodians and the Vietnamese have markedly chilled in recent months.

Long-time observers here say Sihanouk has brought into the open a struggle for his independence once the shooting war stops in Vietnam. Fears are expressed that the Hanoi-led Vietnamese are so well entrenched that they will never leave on their own.

Sihanouk himself said Communists and others among his neighbors want to reduce Cambodia "to nothing." The Mekong River running through Cambodia would simply become the border between Thailand to the west and Vietnam to the east, he said.

Sihanouk has had continuing trouble with the Thais, but his main concern now is with the Viet Cong, the North Vietnamese and even the Pathet Lao who operate in Laos.

Pointing to a map at his press conference, Sihanouk sketched in areas in northeastern Cambodia, where he said the Pattet Lao have come in from Laos, and in the east and southeast where Vietnamese have crossed over.

By wondering out loud why the Americans don't bomb forces farther to the north in Cambodia, Sihanouk, some observers here feel, has approached an open invitation to the Americans to come in with planes or raiding parties.

Why doesn't the prince drive out his unwelcome visitors himself? His army of some 30,000 to 35,000 just isn't big enough, although some American intelligence sources say there is evidence that Cambodian soldiers have recently taken on some Viet Cong units.

Search Red Planes

NEW DELHI (AP)—The Indian government has granted the Soviet Union permission to fly over India en route to North Vietnam and back once a week, foreign Minister Dinesh Singh told Parliament Monday. He said the "civilian" Ilyushin 18 flights will stop in Calcutta for a check to see that no military supplies are carried.

Lebanese Free General

BEIRUT (AP) — The Lebanese government decided Monday to free Iranian Gen. Teymour Bakhtiar. The move may sour relations between Lebanon and Iran.

Justice Minister Chafik Wazzan said he decided to reject an Iranian request that the general be extradited to his country.

The Iranian government says that Bakhtiar, a cousin of former Empress Soraya, is wanted on criminal charges dating from the time when he was Iran's security chief.

Nixons Pay Homage To Roosevelt Kin

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Alice Roosevelt Longworth, who ruled the Washington social circuit for nearly 40 years, now resides in quiet dignity befitting one of the great ladies of the United States.

The daughter of president Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. Longworth, at 85, is still a charming and witty woman who commands enough attention to be visited by President and Mrs. Nixon at her stately Washington mansion.

The Nixons were among several distinguished guests to pay homage to "Princess Alice," as she was dubbed early in the century, on her 85th birthday Feb. 12.

Nixon is only one of a long line of presidents she has known dating back to 1888 when she met president Benjamin Harrison as a child.

A sprightly woman, known for broad-brimmed hats, she continues to be a social figure.

Born Feb. 12, 1884, in New York, Alice inherited her father's zest for life and fiery spirit which would make her the "enfant terrible" of the famous Roosevelt family.

Her father once remarked to novelist Owen Wister "I can be president of the United States or I can attend to Alice but I cannot possibly do both."

At the age of 17 Alice moved into the White House and until the age of 22 was romantically linked with any number of eligible young diplomats and congressmen in Washington circles.

In 1906 she was married to Nicholas Longworth, a Republican congressman from Ohio, in a White House ceremony which was the most impressive and expensive of the era. The guest list included more than 1,000.

She always had a flare for the unusual and a taste for the unconventional. She was the first socially prominent woman in the U.S. to allow herself to be photographed smoking.

During one 15-month period, a French newspaper recorded her activities as including 350 balls, 300 parties, 680 teas and 1,706 calls from statesmen.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, APRIL 1, 1969 —PAGE 17

Arthur Mayse

A look today at three by-products of a big little university.

The first is such a play as I've hoped would one evening rack up a full house for a McPherson Theatre which has remained stubbornly alive through good days and bad.

The play was Moliere's "Tartuffe," and a capacity Victoria audience gave the university cast that offered it one well-deserved curtain call after another.

As a Victorian who has seen Uvic theatre take on stature with the years, I congratulate undergraduate and faculty players. Their Saturday night performance marked a new high point in polished and spirited entertainment.

From the excellent sets (to which Bill West of Oak Bay Senior Secondary lent his talent) through to the handling of even minor roles, the quality was better-than-average professional.

The town's growing up, and so is its theatre. What I found most refreshing was the fact that in Tartuffe, we were presented with a play that called for no concessions from those who came to see it.

For those who missed it, Tartuffe is one of three classic plays to be staged at the McPherson as part of an ambitious Victoria Fair summer program of theatre, music and visual arts.

The second by-product is 'Introductions from an Island', a 41-page book of poems written by students in Uvic's creative writing program.

The verse, nicely produced between green cardboard covers, is sharply modern in treatment, and contains contributions from some young men and women who will undoubtedly be heard from again.

As a sample, here is one poem that conveys the sinister quality of a forest at night. It is titled 'Between Two Islands,' and was written by Alan Jones.

Between two islands
the fishing fleet balanced
on a strip of metallic sea.

Thick fingers around the tiller,
the fisherman glanced
at the fir-covered slopes.

Tossed dark in his cabin at night
he heard roots cracking
as always,
and again the splitting
and crunching of underbrush
as, one after another, trees
came down to the water.

The book, edited by poet and creative writing program director Robin Skelton, is on sale at the University book store for $1.

The third Uvic by-product was a fun thing, but one that brought university, lower schools and public together on amiable terms.

This was last Saturday's kite celebration — a final fling before Easter, and exams afterward for those who are required to take 'em this year.

Dodging strings that stretched up and away to kites of all shapes and sizes, we found student president Norman Wright calmly noting entry performance.

"It's going very well," said Wright, while a monstrous though temporarily grounded triangle of balsa and plastic passed with tail-bearers tramping behind.

"You see that dark one, high up on the far side of the road? They call it the flying mattress. No framework — the thing's just a wind tunnel."

Meanwhile, a busy group not far off was trying for the umpteenth time to launch a multi-kite that was composed of kitelets arranged in squadron formation. In brisker airs, it might have outflown the high-flyers that soared all but invisible in the changeable March sky.

But it didn't — not while we watched at least — which struck as us a sorry reward for effort expended.

We started to tally tethered birds aloft, but lost count at 60 and took ourselves home stiff-necked from upward gazing.

By-products, yes . . . but all three mark a good neighbor reaching out by Uvic to a community that benefits from its presence.

Committee Calls Five Ministers In Plane Probe

MLAs Demand Explanations

The four ministers without portfolio and Health Minister Ralph Loffmark have been called to explain to a legislative committee Wednesday why they've been using government aircraft like air taxis to their hometowns.

And Highways Minister Wesley Black, in charge of the provincial air fleet, also will be asked to appear to say whether or not he believes they've ignored his warning to all departments last June that flight privileges should not be abused.

The committee agreed this morning it had to call the ministers as witnesses if it is to get down to hard facts on how much it costs to operate the fleet and who uses it.

Ernie Lecours (SC — Richmond) summed up the committee's feelings this morning by observing the ministers must be called because "We want to find out if government aircraft are being abused."

FEW FACTS

The committee learned there are few facts available about the air fleet's operations.

Fraser MacLean, assistant deputy highways minister, who now handles bookings for trips on the government planes, said no operating cost breakdown has been kept for the two piston-driven Beechcraft, one turbine-powered Beechcraft and one Grumman Goose now being converted to turbine power.

He said that Minister Without Portfolio Phil Gaglardi, who was in charge of the fleet as highways minister for almost the entire 1967-68 fiscal year under study, took a personal interest in the air fleet and his office handled all bookings directly.

"People phoned to his secretary and made a booking for where and when they wanted to go and the flights were approved by that office," MacLean said.

NO LEAR RECORD

He added that while operating details were skimpy for the existing fleet, there is no record left at all of the Lear jet's operations because its flight log was returned with the plane to the manufacturer when Premier Bennett decided to drop the lease-purchase agreement after Gaglardi's resignation.

After Black took over the portfolio last summer, he designated MacLean as the booking officer and sent out a circular memo to all departments June 6 laying down conditions for use of the aircraft by senior personnel as transport.

The memo said commercial lines were to be used wherever possible and the government planes used only when absolutely necessary and for productive purposes only with no flights going beyond the province except to use the Watson Lake and Whitehorse airfields when necessary on trips to northern B.C.

Black's memo said all personnel flights were to be endorsed at the ministerial level and the bookings made through MacLean.

Ask The Times

Q. What is the number of paid personnel in connection with the Greater Victoria Scouts? What is the average monthly salary? Is it true that the monies paid in dues and Community Chest donations are used: one sixth for training and camp operation, and the remainder for administrative costs? —J. T.

A. There are four persons on the staff of the Greater Victoria Region; an administrative supervisor, a camp warden (responsible for Camp Barnard near Sooke) and two women secretaries. Amounts of individual salaries are not available, but the total amounts to $19,637. This amount, explains one official, represents five employees, one of whom has now retired. A total of $2,460 for training and $3,335 for camp operation is shown. Community Chest donations are used for these expenses. In addition, approximately $4,000 for training and $30,000 for camp development has been spent during the past four years. These monies came from capital revenue, raised by donations and a T. S. McPherson legacy.

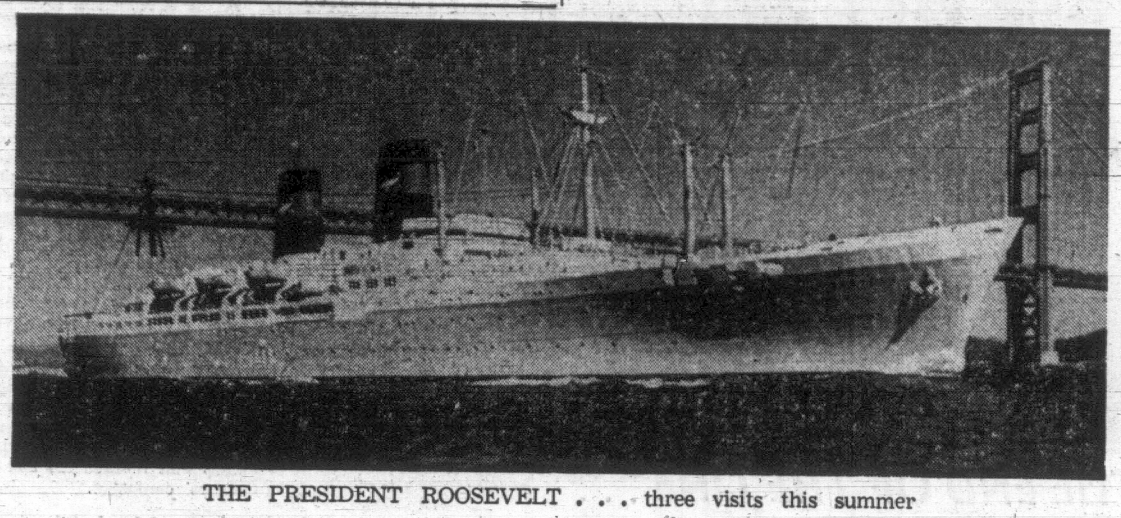
Provincial Museum staffers will be working Saturday and Sunday when the museum will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Sunday. The museum will be closed Friday and Monday.

Ogden Point Facelift To Start Immediately



THE PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT . . . three visits this summer

'First-Class Study' On Long-Range Plan

By W. RALPH THOMAS

A "two-pronged attack" on inadequate docking facilities at Ogden Point will be launched by Ottawa immediately.

In a telephone interview from Ottawa with the two Victoria area Liberal MPs, David Anderson and David Groos, the results of a multi-departmental meeting involving federal cabinet ministers, deputy ministers and the CNR late last week were revealed.

The meeting decided (1) to whip the Ogden Point docks into shape for passenger liners arriving here this summer; and (2) to form a committee of representatives from the department of transport, the department of public works, the CNR, the city of Victoria and the Chamber of Commerce to determine the future of shipping here.

The first phase, which begins immediately, involves making improvements necessary for handling liners which will bring more than 7,000 tourists to Victoria this summer.

"We must guarantee that there will be enough water for the (passenger) ships to dock, and secondly, to make sure there will be sufficient facilities on the dock itself," said Anderson.

There will be an adequate waiting room, unloading facilities and space for buses to draw up to load tourists," he added.

SHARE COSTS

He said the cost of revamping the docks to enable them to cope with passenger liners will be shared by the department of transport and the CNR.

The second phase of the attack will be an exhaustive study of all aspects of shipping in Victoria.

Groos said this study will be carried out by the Inter-department Group on Canadian Ports, and that they will be instructed to prepare their report "within two months."

He said the pilings at the bottom of he docks will be examined to determine whether the rock footings are slipping, causing portions of the docks to sink, and that the exact cost of raising the docks and dredging alongside will be calculated.

"The study group will hold consultations with the city of Victoria with regard to zoning regulations in the vicinity of Ogden Point," he added.

Anderson expanded on this when he said the future of the residential area behind the docks will be examined to determine the effects it would have on the traffic increased shipping would bring.

"The whole future of the marine docking facilities in Victoria will be looked into," he said, "and one of the first things they (the study group) will look into is this agreement under which the CNR brings grain to the Victoria elevator.

FIRST-CLASS STUDY

"After that they will look at the road access to the docks. If they find the type of residential area in the future, such as apartment blocks, will connect present routes to the docks, they will have to take into consideration methods of handling the problem.

In describing the project as a "first-class study," Anderson said much of the credit should go to Groos for pushing the matter for more than a year and to the chamber of commerce for "constructive help."

Said Groos: "We've at last captured the interest of the various government departments and the CNR in this operation and we are finally going to get some action."

PRESSURING AT PARTY CHARGED

The Carpenters Union today charged a Victoria construction firm with holding a drinking party to pressure union members into disclosing how they voted in a secret strike vote a week ago.

An ex parte injunction granted by the British Columbia Supreme Court last week declared the vote invalid.

Lorne Robson, secretary of the Provincial Council of Carpenters, said the council learned from its members the party was held March 21 in the offices of Yakimovich Construction Ltd. in Victoria, shortly after the men had voted 8-7 to strike.

'SOCIAL'

A company statement confirmed the men had visited company offices but stressed they did so voluntarily to discuss the situation "freely among themselves and their employer in a convivial social atmosphere."

The union later set up pickets at one of the firm's Victoria construction projects. Robson said they were then called into Ernie Yakimovich's office one at a time and asked how they voted.

He said it was his opinion the men "were intimidated into signing affidavits that they had voted not to strike."

The injunction was granted by Mr. Justice R. A. B. Wootton after he considered 10 sworn statements from carpenters that they had voted against a strike.

FILE CLAIM

Robson said the union plans to file a claim with the provincial Labor Relations Board that the company took action to break the secrecy of a strike vote provided under provincial law.

He said the union also will file an application in court to have the injunction removed and is seeking support of the B.C. Federation of Labor.

The new provincial Mediation Commission Act last year eliminated government-supervised strike votes and now permits unions to conduct their own secret votes.

The company statement called the union claim about its actions "absurd, inaccurate and most insulting to the carpenters involved and the integrity of the company."

It stressed that of the 15 carpenters who voted in the secret ballot, 10 visited its offices voluntarily and "swore under solemn oath that they had voted against strike action at the secret ballot."

The company has asked the mediation commission to make an inquiry into the holding of the carpenters' vote.

7,000 Extra Tourists Coming on Cruise Ships

An extra 7,000 U.S. tourists are expected to visit Victoria this summer.

And they are coming by sea.

They'll be disembarked at Ogden Point docks in 14 groups of between 350 and 600 from ships of three major passenger lines.

Slated to put in here on a regular basis are the Princess Italia, the President Roosevelt and Mariposa and Monterey. They are owned by Princess Cruises, American President Lines and Matson Lines.

Passengers will have time to explore the city for a day—or in some cases they will spend a night at Empress Hotel.

Another company announcement comes from P and O Lines—that starting next year ships of that world-girdling line will also call at Victoria.

This will permit waterfront watchers a close-up of vessels they have seen only in the distance in past years as they proceed to Vancouver.

Princess Italia will be the first of the passenger liners to arrive this year. Carrying a maximum of 420 passengers she comes June 14 from Alaska for a two-day stay while en route back to San Francisco.

She will make a total of seven two-day stopovers at two-week intervals during the holiday season.

Dates she is scheduled to be here are: June 14-15, June 28-29, July 12-13, July 26-27, Aug. 9-10, Aug. 23-24, Sept. 6-7, and Sept. 11-12.

600-PASSENGER

American President's 600-passenger liner President Roosevelt will arrive on the mornings of June 21, July 6 and Aug. 30 and depart again late the same days.

Matson's 375-passenger Monterey will dock here June 19 from 7 a.m. to noon on her initial run from Los Angeles to Alaska. Her sister Mariposa will also make three stops between 7 a.m. and noon on July 31, Aug. 14 and Aug. 29.

Many passengers aboard the plush Princess Italia will spend a night in the Empress Hotel as part of their itinerary, while passengers from the Matson Lines ships will make a quick tour of Beacon Hill Park, Marine Drive, Uplands and Butchart Gardens.

Woman Satisfactory After Crash on Hill

A Saanich woman whose car went off the road on Mt. Douglas Monday is in fairly good condition today in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Mrs. George Bartlett, 38, of 1836 San Juan, was found lying half out of her car and was thought at first to have suffered a broken neck. X-rays later showed this wasn't so.

Police said she was travelling down Churchill Drive from the summit of the mountain when her car went over the bank just past a treacherous hairpin turn.

She was alone at the time and police said damage to the car was slight.

Officers attending the accident said her car might have rolled over a 70-foot bank if it hadn't been for a large rock outcropping that caught the running board.

A doctor was brought to the accident scene before the woman was moved. Hospital officials said today her injuries were undetermined.

In a separate accident in the city an elderly man is in fair condition in St. Joseph's Hospital after he was struck by a car while crossing a street.

Wong Chew Kim, 87, of 516½ Herald, suffered head cuts.

Driver of the car was Colin William Molesworth, 22, of 1172 Yates.

Police said Kim was walking east on the southerly crosswalk at Douglas and Pandora when he was in collision with the car.

$75,000 Bill For Freighter After Grounding

Damage to the 7,600-ton Liberian freighter Hong Kong Clipper, which ran aground on Denny Island in the Queen Charlotte Sound last week, has been estimated at $75,000.

A spokesman for Yarrows Ltd. said a number of shell plates in the forward section were punctured by orcks and the internal structure was affected by the collision.

The freighter, undergoing repairs in Esquimalt Graving Dock, is expected to be under way later this week.

Mayor, Alderman in Sharp Clash Over Parking Fee at Thetis Lake

Ald. Clyde Savage of Victoria today advocated a 50-cent-a-day parking charge at Thetis Lake Park to help defray mounting maintenance costs.

His proposal ran into stubborn opposition from Mayor Hugh Stephen who said "I think you would have a riot on your hands if you tried to charge admittance to a public park."

Savage stuck by his guns claiming it was unfair that the taxpayers of Victoria should be forced to pay the cost to maintain a park which is used 65 per cent of the time by district residents.

"The only way we can properly maintain the park and keep it open to the public is by making a charge for parking to at least help with the cost," Savage said.

"It's either that or close the park.

"We need funds for roads and lifeguards and we have already earmarked $5,000 this year for the parking lot."

The cost of two lifeguards for swimmer protection has been estimated between $2,000 and $2,500 a season.

VENDING MACHINE

Savage said he was suggesting the installation of a parking ticket vending machine at the main gateway to the park to dispense 50-cent tickets which would be good all day.

Stephen argued the installation of parking ticket vending machines would be impractical.

"And anyway the regional district will be taking the park over next year," he added. "It would have become a regional park this year but the minister didn't seem to grasp just what we were trying to do."

Savage replied he didn't have too much faith in promises of government action.

"The way I have seen this government act I wouldn't be too sure that the government will take action next year or the year after," he said.

But Stephen still objected.

"Are you suggesting that we should pay between $25,000 and $30,000 a year just to keep the park open for the entire district?" asked Savage.

"No," answered Stephen. "Just that we should continue to pay for essential maintenance.

"I realize what you're saying and I agree with you to a degree," said Savage. "But we are still faced with the problem of asking the taxpayers of Victoria to pay for something which really belongs to the district."

'REALLY SILLY'

"We've been doing it for years," answered the mayor.

"And I think it's silly to keep on doing it," snapped Savage.

"We are faced with two courses of action: we either close the park or we charge for parking. I don't think the people will resist a parking fee. If we are going to keep the park open somebody has to help pay for it."

The parks committee discussing the problem left the matter in abeyance for further study and discussion before making a final decision.

Fight Promised Welfare Case Prescription Fee

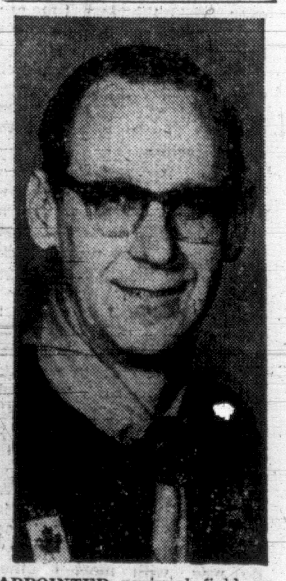
The provincial government will oppose plans of B.C. druggists to charge social welfare recipients an extra dollar per prescription.

Social Welfare Minister Dan Campbell told newsmen this is an attempt to force a "fee for service principle on the government."

"We will investigate as many ways of getting around this as are necessary," said Campbell.

He said pharmacists are caught in a price-cost squeeze, "but we don't intend to have the department of social welfare made the scapegoat for that situation."

On Monday the B.C. Pharmacists' Society warned it would introduce the extra charge April 15. The society claimed its members lose more than $900,000 on welfare prescriptions because the government payment for drugs is too low.



APPOINTED regional field executive of the Boy Scouts of Canada effective today is R. C. (Bob) Muir of Victoria. He will be responsible for assisting the regional council in the training program of adult members, field service training in eight districts and the camping and special events programs. Mr. Muir has been associated with the scouts for 33 years, starting as a cub in the First Tillicum Pack in 1933. He is married and has three sons, all of whom have been Queen's Scouts.

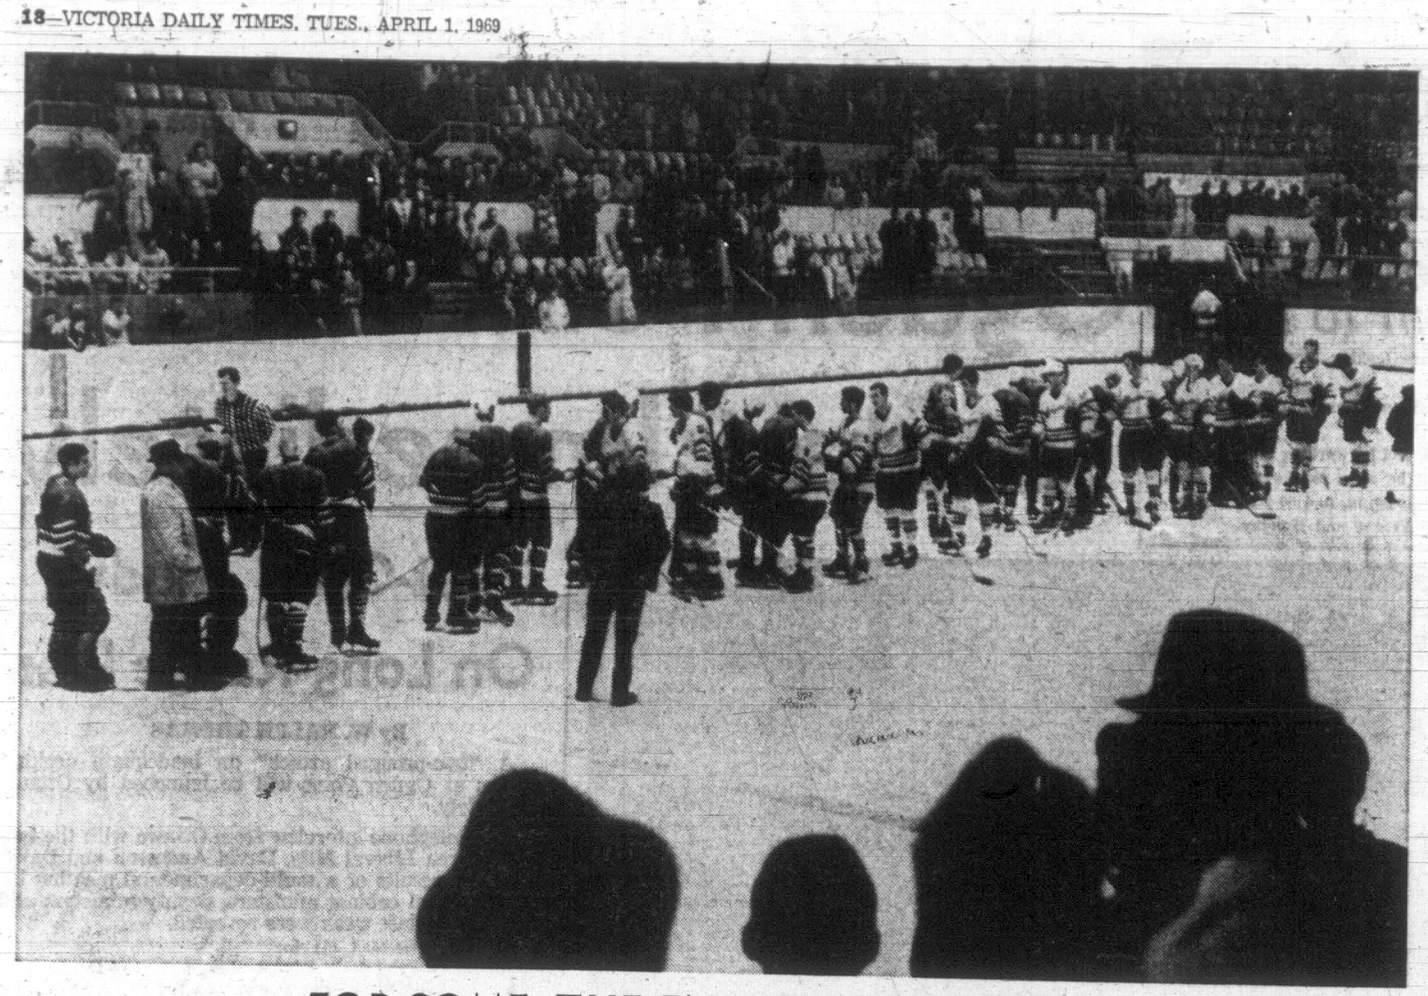
VICTORIA MAN ADMITS GUILT IN SIDNEY RIFLE INCIDENT

A man who held seven children captive while armed with a rifle today pleaded guilty in Sidney magistrate's court to possession of an offensive weapon.

Hubert Deforge, 27, of Victoria, was remanded by Magistrate D. G. Ashby until April 14 for a pre-sentence report.

He was arrested and a .303 calibre rifle seized after the seven children had been held captive for two hours in the home of Beverly Robinson. The children ranged in age from two to 10 years.

Police said the woman ran from the house after the armed man went inside. He later surrendered to police, who said one shot was fired from the rifle.



FOR SOME, THE END OF THE LINE . . .

Handshaking ceremony at conclusion of Monday's junior hockey playoff game at Memorial Arena marked the end of season for Victoria Cougars (white sweaters). For Lethbridge Sugar Kings, who defeated B.C. champions 3-2 to win best-of-seven series 4-2, it was line that pointed towards another playoff campaign against Regina Pats. Sugar Kings End Cougar Campaign

Alberta Champs Advance After Tripping Cats 3-2

By ERNIE FEDORUK

A single note doesn't make a melody, and the losing note struck by Victoria Cougars Monday evening can't drown out the air of success the 1968-69 B.C. Junior Hockey League champions played for their fans.

The campaign officially ended at 10:36 p.m. Monday. That's when Lethbridge's scrappy Sugar Kings sealed a 3-2 victory over the Cougars and advanced to face the highly-touted Regina Pats in a best-of-seven Western Canada semi-final series to open in the Saskatchewan city on Wednesday.

Lethbridge ended Victoria's playoff advance in the sixth game of their best-of-seven quarter-final.

Sugar Kings opened with 4-2 and 6-5 victories on home ice, dropped 5-4 and 7-5 decisions at Memorial Arena before rebounding for 4-2 and 3-2 triumphs that marked the end of Cougars' campaign.

If it's consolation to the 1968-69 Cougar team, they managed a good selling job for junior "A" hockey. The product drew 24,728 fans to eight playoff games, including 3,286 on Monday.

The Victoria team also wrote an act that may be tough to follow. Unpredictable but always willing, coach Doug Anderson's team bounced from the cellar to a championship in two years of operation.

Even in losing, Anderson was still not convinced Lethbridge rates as "the better team." Cougars appeared to neglect their teamwork and skating, and that seemed to be all the advantage the Kings needed.

Kings Had Skates, Hustle, Finish

The skating and hustle was very much in evidence Monday as the Alberta champions stepped off to a 2-0 lead in the first period. It was 2-1 after the second and each team counted once in the third to make it a down-to-the-wire finish.

The "finish" also belonged to the Kings . . . at game's end and around the Victoria goal.

Gerry LeGrandeur, Howie Heggedal and Dave Sharlow counted the big goals for Lethbridge—all on alert and hustling plays. Playoff addition Gene Carr scored both Victoria goals.

After breezing through their own league playoffs in seven straight games, Cougars never quite managed to show some of the solid team form they flashed earlier.

"We beat Penticton (in the B.C. League final) with team work," said Anderson, "but we never got around to it against Lethbridge."

Lethbridge coach Don McLean sized up the difference as "three lines against two. We had the balance and the Cougars didn't."

The fact is emphasized that Anderson continually juggled his forward lines, even during the regular campaign. It worked more often than not, but certainly not against Lethbridge.

Carr Hampered by Back Ailment

Anderson also disclosed that Carr, one of Cougars' most consistent performers, played throughout the series with a bad back. It happened in the opening game at Lethbridge, and the Nanaimo-reared centre did, at times, appear to have difficulty skating.

As well, winger Adrian Blais played with a broken nose and goaltender Ron Grahame bounced back into action despite a nasty head cut. Both injuries to Blais and Grahame were suffered in Saturday's 4-2 loss to Lethbridge.

Grahame, as he was throughout the series, was Cougars' standout. He made 46 stops compared to a mere 28 handled by rival Don Hall Monday.

Hall had a particularly easy time of it. Cougars, refusing to pass and skate, mustered less than three dangerous shots on the Lethbridge net in the first 30 minutes of action.

When it mattered, though, Hall came through with saves that counted. Protecting a 2-1 Lethbridge lead in the second period, Hall made four important saves.

Big Saves, Shardlow Sealed Win

Cougar centre Doug Gibson broke away with winger Bruce Cowick but refused to pass or shoot and Hall came out to smother the breakaway effort. Three minutes later he made two fine saves off shots by Reg Cherenko. Near the end of the second period, Grant Evans took a clear-cut run but was stymied by Hall.

When Shardlow provided Lethbridge with a 3-1 advantage at 1:12 of the third period, the hand-writing appeared on the wall for Victoria.

Carr's second goal, with less than four minutes left in the game, brought Cougars back to life but they nullified their offense with erratic passing and too much individualism.

When Anderson pulled Grahame in favor of a sixth attacker at 19:35 of the third period, Cougars couldn't muster a single shot on Hall.

Cougars took nine of the game's 15 penalties, and the penalty-killing tactics took much of the steam out of the two-line system that Anderson leaned upon.

Dauphin Assumes Command

FORT WILLIAM (CP) — Dauphin Kings stormed back from a slow start in Western Canada Memorial Cup playoff action Monday to defeat Westfort Hurricanes 8-6 and take a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven junior hockey series.

Dauphin came out of a near-disastrous first period trailing 3-2 after being down 2-0 and 3-1, but took a 6-5 edge after two before a crowd of 3,500.

The Hurricanes, who play out of Fort William in the Thunder Bay Junior League, found themselves fighting an uphill battle from the first period on, mostly because of a weak defence.

Barnet Shot Tops Opener

NANAIMO — Bob Chenye of the Barnet Rifle Club won "high gun" honors by scoring a 290—12x out of a possible 300 Sunday in the first rifle match of the Vansouver Island Shooting League season.

Chenye also captured first in the master classification with 283—8x.

Powell River sharpshooter Sverre Holgersen broke the existing 100-yard prone event record with a 100—8x score.

Barnet captured the "A" team event with 1,092 points. Nanaimo was second with 1,062. Campbell River sewed up the "B" team award with a 1,007-992 margin over Nanaimo's "B" team.

Reilly, Lester Double Winners

John Reilly and Patti Lester each topped two events in figure skating tests completed by Racquet Club members.

IN WORLD MEET

Canadian Ref Blasts Politics

(Times News Services)

STOCKHOLM — Canadian referee Lou Joyal, 35, of Winnipeg says his first world hockey championship will be his last.

"I'll never referee another international match," he said. "The reason? Politics. They tell us individual teams have no say on which referees work their games, but I just don't believe it.

"They won't tell us how the referees are chosen, though."

He denied a report which said the Winnipegger was quitting because he had received "three communications" saying Joyal was a bad referee.

"In other words, I'm supposed to be quitting under fire and that's just not true."

Early in the tournament, Joyal was one of the two Canadian referees who were criticized by United States team officials.

C. F. Patterson of Toronto, head of referees for the International Ice Hockey Federation, said he had not heard from Joyal but "if he's sounding off that way, then he has refereed his last game."

Bunny Ahearne of London, European president of the International Federation, termed the 1969 world championship "the most successful in history."

"Receipts are up 70 per cent over 1963, the last time the tournament was held in Stockholm," he said.

The two-week tournament ended Sunday night

A total of 196,299 persons watched the 30 games in the championships.

Despite the tournament's success, however, Ahearne said he still would like to see changes, possibly some of them coming in time for the 1970 championships in Canada.

"For instance, I would like to see us return to a larger goal crease, a six-foot circle instead of the little four-by-two you have now," he said. "It would afford greater protection for the goalie and the public would be able to see who scored the goals.

"I would like to see only three face-off spots, one at centre ice and one in the centre of each blueline. Why have seven as you do now, with most of them unused?"

And Bunny still won't go for three officials on the ice as in the North American professional game.

"There are too many people out there now," he said. "I would like to see one of the two referees taken away altogether and the other controlling the game from a cage suspended above the ice surface."

TWO OF SPEAKERS during Victoria's second annual Sports Celebrity Dinner tonight at Empress Hotel will be Jim Finks (top), former professional quarterback who is now general manager of National Football League's Minnesota Vikings, and Jim Champion (bottom), coach of B.C. Lions of Canadian Football League. Other featured guests will include Dewey Soriano, president of Seattle Pilots, new major league baseball expansion club, and MLA Herb Capozzi, former manger of B.C. Lions. Awards to city athletes will also highlight the event, which starts at 6:30.

Doncaster Tops School Playoffs

Doncaster slipped by Glanford 16-13 in the final game Monday to win the Victoria elementary school girls' basketball championship at Richmond School.

Doncaster advanced to the victory with wins over Tolmie (19-18) and Willows (23-15) in semi-final games.

Players on the winning squad were Stephanie Bridgeman, Nicky D'Estrube, Linda Saunders, Carla Clarke, Janice Breedom, Sue Anderson, Colleen Stevenson, Loraine Mosher, Karen Jones and Ellen Brown.

WINNIPEG (CP) — George Michell 'Scotty' Harper, whose curling column appeared in The Free Press for more than 40 years, died Sunday at his home at the age of 80.

RED WINGS OPEN DOOR FOR BREWER'S RETURN

DETROIT (AP) — Carl Brewer, former National Hockey League all-star defenceman, has ended his retirement to sign a contract with Detroit Red Wings, it was reported Monday night by a Detroit sports announcer.

Brewer reportedly came to terms for next season with general manager Sid Abel of the Red Wings just before a midnight deadline Monday when his rights would have reverted to Toronto Maple Leafs.

Detroit obtained the rights to negotiate with Brewer in a multi-player trade with Toronto last year. Brewer, who previously quit the NHL, was a player-coach in Finland last season.

Stockers Grab League Honors

Late starts and strong finishes seemed to be the key to success as Stockers North Americans captured the Vancouver Island Hockey League title in the deciding game Monday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Jim Shkwarok and Tom Mullan fired overtime goals to carry Stockers to a 3-1 victory over University of Victoria Vikings in the final game of the best-of-five series.

Shkwarok's goal went into the net at 3:26 of the overtime period and 48 seconds later Mullan put the game out of reach.

Vikings took a 1-0 lead in the second period on a goal by Terry Foreman only to have Dennis Ferrill tie it up after 69 seconds of play in the third period.

Stockers lost the first two games of the series 3-2 and 8-5 before starting a comeback with a 7-3 victory in the third game. The new champions then scored a come-from-behind 7-6 win last Sunday to tie the series and force the issue.

Bruins Ignore 'Jinx'

By The Canadian Press

"I don't speak to the players about it," said coach Harry Sinden of Boston Bruins. "But I'm sure they feel the way I do. It won't affect us at all."

Sinden was talking about the Bruins' inability to win National Hockey League games in Maple Leaf Gardens. The Bruins, winless in 22 consecutive games at Toronto since Nov. 27, 1965, open a best-of-seven Stanley Cup quarter-final against the Maple Leafs at Boston Wednesday night.

The second game of the series is at Boston Thursday night and the Bruins will not enter enemy territory until Saturday night.

"Anyway, it doesn't have a damned thing to do with the first two games," said Sinden. "We don't worry about it because if worse comes to worse we don't have to win there. We can take four games here."

Playoff action opens on three other fronts Wednesday night as Montreal Canadiens welcome New York Rangers, St. Louis Blues play Philadelphia Flyers and Los Angeles Kings visit Oakland Seals. All are best-of-seven quarter-finals.

AGREED WITH SINDEN

Several Boston players agreed with Sinden that the team's jinx at Maple Leaf Gardens was unimportant.

"It's silly to think about that," said right winger Johnny McKenzie. "Of course, we'll win in Toronto. Maybe we'll win both games there and get it over in a hurry."

In New York, manager-coach Emile Francis of the Rangers, was confident of his team's chances of ousting the Canadiens.

"We're going into the Stanley Cup playoffs with the best team I've ever coached," said Francis. "Physically we're in the best shape we've been in for two years."

Francis took over a fifth-place team from an ailing Bernie Geoffrion Feb. 18 and guided it into third place in the Eastern Division. Montreal finished first, setting NHL records for most points and most wins—103 and 46.

The second game of the series will be in Montreal Thursday and the third and fourth games at New York Saturday and Sunday.

RECALL SIX PLAYERS

The Canadiens announced Monday the recall of six players from Houston of the Central Hockey League. All will be on stand-by during the playoffs.

Recalled were goalies Phil Myre and Tony Esposito, defencemen Guy Lapointe and Paul Curtis and forwards Ernie Hickie and Lucien Grenier.

St. Louis, which ran away with first place in the Western Division, had bad news Monday. Defenceman Doug Harvey suffered a head injury in practice and will miss the first few games of the series against Philadelphia.

The Blues, who play host to the Flyers Wednesday and Thursday before visiting Philadelphia Saturday and Sunday, said Jim Roberts will replace Harvey.

The second game of the Oakland-Los Angeles series will be at Oakland Thursday with the third and fourth games at Los Angeles Saturday and Sunday.

Sullivan Cast Adrift As Pittsburgh Coach

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Penguins, trying to create a winner in the National Hockey League, are searching for a new coach.

Red Sullivan was fired as coach Monday, but the move had been rumored for some time.

In their first season in the NHL, the Penguins finished only six points out of first place, but still missed a playoff spot by finishing fifth in the Western Division.

This season they tied for fifth with Minnesota North Stars and wound up with a 20-45-11 record. They are the only expansion team which has not made the playoffs.

Attendance dipped this season and a club spokesman said the Penguins lost $400,000. Last year they lost $250,000.

WANTED A CHANGE

"The board of directors just felt a change was necessary," said general manager Jack Riley. "It was a matter of circumstance.

"We didn't beat the new clubs on our own ice. That was our biggest downfall.

"But I don't blame it all on coaching. Winning takes care of a lot of things."

The Penguins offered Sullivan a job as head scout, but he said he wants a few days to think about it.

Riley said the Penguins want an experienced coach.

Sullivan, fired from New York Rangers three years ago when he couldn't produce a winner there, said he won't give up hockey.

"I have 20 years in professional hockey and I'm not about to throw it out the window. I'm going to stay in hockey. The scouting job is a very important job."

He said the club wouldn't hire anybody until June, after the amateur and professional drafts.

Alcindor Says 'No Thanks' To $3,250,000 Contract

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lew Alcindor, UCLA's basketball superstar, decided Monday to turn down an American Basketball Association offer said to be $3,250,000 over five years and begin negotiations with Milwaukee of the National Basketball Association, one of his advisers said.

Sam Gilbert, a Los Angeles contractor and adviser to the seven-foot-1½-inch three-time All-American, said Alcidor "decided to fulfill his moral obligation given in New York to the Milwaukee club."

The decision came after ABA Commissioner George Mikan wired Alcindor, apparently offering a lucrative contract with the New York Nets. Neither Gilbert nor Alcindor would reveal the contents of the telegram.

Gilbert said private negotiations on an NBA contract will begin Tuesday or Wednesday.

These conferences apparently will be held to iron out final details of what is reported to be a $1,000,000-plus offer.

The younger ABA had hoped to sign Alcindor to give the struggling league a boost.

"I think that's a girl jockey in disguise!"

Bosox and Bo Starting Anew

By The Associated Press

With the opening of the major league season a week away, Boston Red Sox and Bo Belinsky are starting from scratch.

Manager Dick Williams, complaining his Red Sox were "goofing up and not playing baseball," yanked his players from the field Monday during an intrasquad game and let them know who's boss.

We'll start from scratch," he said after a 10-minute lecture in the clubhouse.

Belinsky, the playboy pitcher who has bounced around four major league clubs, found out from general manager Bing Devine of St. Louis Cardinals that he will start from scratch, too.

The Cards asked waivers on the 32-year-old left-hander and said they'll decide today or Wednesday whether to assign Belinsky to the Cards' Tulsa farm club.

Later, Chicago White Sox, helped by two key hits from rookie Bill Melton, defeated the Cards 5-3 in an exhibition game.

The Red Sox confined their action to the practice field at Winter Haven, Fla. Their scheduled game with Washington was one of five cancellations because of the national day of mourning for Dwight D. Eisenhower.

GAMES START LATE

The other games started late because of the Eisenhower funeral. New York Mets blanked Cincinnati Reds 3-0 and San Diego Padres defeated Chicago Cubs 5-3.

The San Francisco Giants-Cleveland Indians game was called because of darkness after eight innings and a 5-5 tie. The Oakland Athletics-California Angels game was also called because of darkness, with Oakland in front 7-1 after six innings.

Four San Diego homers helped the Padres break a five-game losing streak. Ollie Brown tagged two homers, his sixth and seventh of the spring, while Clarence Gaston hit a two-run homer and Nate Colbert stroked one with none aboard.

Rich Scheinblum's first home run of the exhibition season boosted Cleveland into a tie with San Francisco. Willie McCovey's two-run homer, his third of the spring, had given the Giants a 5-4 lead.

Oakland pitcher John (Blue Moon) Odom, held the Angels to three hits.

'Y' Gymnasts Score Win At Vancouver

VANCOUVER — Two boys' squads from the Victoria YM-YWCA won team titles here last weekend in the British Columbia age-group gymnastics championships.

Setting the pace for the Victorians was Phillip Delesalle, who won three of five events and the all-around crown in his class as he combined with Frank Delesalle and Wayne Margetts to take the 12-and-under team title.

Ron Peterson was third all-around in the 16-and-under section as he worked with Dan Leno and Ken Stewart to give Victoria its other team victory.

Finishing a close second in the 14-and-under section was the Victoria Y trio of Dick Harney, Don Tolson and David Siddal.

Totem Goalie Bounces Back

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle Totems' team physician says goalie Jim Armstrong may have suffered a whiplash injury instead of a blow to the neck in a goalmouth collision Saturday in a Western Hockey League game against Denver.

Dr. Alfred I. Blue, an orthopedic surgeon, said Armstrong's lower back was heavily bruised, but the back of his neck "was only a little red."

"It may be that Jim's back hit the post and his neck snapped."

Armstrong was taken to hospital paralysed from the neck down, after being slammed into a goal post. The injury was diagnosed as a spinal cord contusion.

"But his recovery has been phenomenal," said Dr. Blue. "The only paralysis is in a limited area along his left side."

Murray Costelo, the Totems' general manager, visited Armstrong Monday night and said "Jimmy was removed from the intensive care unit and is seeing visitors."

Armstrong, 26, is a native of Omemee, Ont.

UNGERMAN FINED

NEW YORK (AP) — Irv Ungerman of Toronto, manager of Canadian heavyweight champion George Chuvalo, has been fined $100 by the New York Athletic Commission for "coaching" during Chuvalo's Feb. 3 bout here with Buster Mathis.

Saanich Honors Puck Teams

Saanich Minor Hockey Association squads stepped forward to receive awards and honors Monday during the wind-up ceremonies at G. R. Pearkes Arena.

Saanich Bantam Braves again took bows for winning the Lower Vancouver Island championship and received the Beneficial Finance trophy. Essos won the bantam league trophy while Fairway Market collected the playoff championship Campbell Construction trophy.

Burnside Plaza won the newly-presented Sydney Blake Memorial trophy as midget playoff champions, McDonald's Bread captured the Joseph Wallace trophy as pup "A" division league champions and pup "A" division playoff champion Cadboro Bay Merchants won the Sponsorship trophy.

A and L Bakery won the ANC trophy as peewee league champs.

Saanich Co-ops won the pup "B" division league championship while Steen Builders and Saanich Employees' Association won the pup "B" division's first and second playoffs, respectively.

Jones Repeats As Point Champ

SEATTLE (AP) — Portland Buckaroos, regular season champions of the Western Hockey League, dominate individual goaltending and scoring in final league statistics of the 1968-69 season.

Portland centre Art Jones was the league's top scorer for the second straight year, piling up 114 points on 38 goals and 76 assists. Teammate Bill Saunders was runner-up with 112 points, and Seattle's Guyle Fielder finished third with 94.

Goalie Jimmy McLeod of Portland headed his division with a record-breaking goals-against average of 2.29, bettering the 2.36 mark set last season by Marv Edwards, also of Portland. Runnerup, with a 2.54 average, was Vancouver's Charlie Hodge.

The league's most penalized player was Tom Polanic of Phoenix, who collected 187 minutes in penalties on the strength of 77 minors, a season high.

The scoring leaders:

LACROSSE MEETING

Victoria Minor Lacrosse Association has scheduled a general meeting at the Ingraham Hotel on Tuesday, April 8, starting at 8 p.m.

Pro Lacrosse League Suspends Operations

TORONTO — The attempt to make lacrosse a major professional sport came to an end after one season when it was announced Sunday that the National Lacrosse Association had decided to suspend operations.

Status of the sport remained uncertain. The newly-formed Eastern Lacrosse Association intends to carry on as a professional league and perhaps play some interlocking games with what was the Western Division of the NLA last season. At the same time, the ELA has asked for official sanction from the Canadian Lacrosse Association, which governs amateur lacrosse in Canada.

Under present plans, the ELA will retain the Toronto and Peterborough clubs from last year's NLA Eastern Division. St. Catharines will take over the Montreal franchise and Detroit's franchise will likely go to Kitchener.

Morley Kells, general manager of the Toronto club, said the ELA will play a 38-game schedule starting in May. He added that a draft will be held, possibly next week, with each club able to protect either five or 10 players from last year's teams.

"More consultation" will take place, Kells said, before there is any firm decision on interlocking play with the Western group, also likely to have a new name this season.

Victoria, New Westminster and Vancouver are holdover clubs in the West and Coquitlam is scheduled to replace Portland.

U.S. Team Opens Series in Haiti

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill. (AP) — The U.S. World Cup team will play its first soccer game against a team from Haiti on Sunday, April 20, in Haiti.

Bob Guelker, president of the United States Soccer Football Association and head coach at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, said today the contest will be the first of a home-and-home series with Haiti.

Nanaimo Clipped

NANAIMO (CP)—North Shore Winter Club downed Nanaimo, 15-3, in a two-game, total-goals series for the Pacific Coast peewee hockey championship during the weekend. North Shore posted a 13-1 victory Saturday night, but was held to a 2-2 draw on Sunday.

Special High Performance Note. If you own a high performance car, be sure to mention that fact to your Esso dealer. Reason—your car should be shod with Atlas High Performance tires for top operating performance. Choose between wide ovals, radials and bias belted fibre glass tires—your Esso dealer will advise you firsthand.

Free Shock Test. Have your car's shock absorbers tested free of charge at your Esso station. If you need new shock absorbers you can take advantage of more sales prices—just $7.88* each, for all standard shocks. Remember, new shock absorbers do more than just improve your ride and stability. They also reduce wear on your tires and that can be a very important dollar saver!

See your Esso Dealer soon for the tire and shock absorber bargains of the year. You can buy for cash or use your Esso-Matic Credit card. But come soon, because with these kind of savings we may sell out of merchandise anytime. And then you'll have to wait until 1970.

SLIPPING QUIETLY into Washington to attend funeral services for former president Eisenhower are ex-president Johnson and Mrs. Johnson. (AP Wirephoto)

EX-PRESIDENT SHY OF CROWDS

By ROBERT C. MAYNARD

WASHINGTON (WP) — Although it was a cold and wintry day, Jan. 20 was a day of triumph for Lyndon Johnson. He left Washington in a blaze of pomp, craving the quiet of the stern Texas hill country.

From that day until Monday, Washington was not to see his face, only rarely even to hear his name. He had truly become a private man.

Accused often of being bombastic, a showman, a hogger of headlines, he returned to Washington for the funeral of Gen. Eisenhower a very different man from the one who left on Jan. 20.

His desire for privacy, in fact, was very nearly obsessive.

Arriving almost with the dawn, he quietly checked into the Sheraton Park Hotel under a name not his own.

Slipping away in late morning, he went downtown to visit briefly with Mrs. Eisenhower and returned to wait until shortly before the time for the funeral ceremony to depart for Washington Cathedral.

While he was waiting to leave, a keystone kops routine ensued at a front entrance to the hotel, which also houses Vice President Spiro T. Agnew. As various official limousines came and went, reporters chased up one driveway and down the next for a glimpse of the former president.

When most had given up in exasperation, a modest Cadillac of last year's vintage cruised around a service driveway and parked at a grimy servants' entrance.

A lone secret service man sat at the wheel for nearly 10 minutes, until just 4:15. Down the ramp, led by one more agent, came the nattily dressed Mr. Johnson and the former first lady. Just the two of them and the agent walked the 50 feet down the ramp, at the bottom of which the maintenance crew for the hotel has its time clock to punch out.

Emerging into the bright sunlight with his hand gently holding Mrs. Johnson's arm, he nodded to a couple of reporters and quickly entered the Cadillac and drove away.

Uvic Student Given Award For Research

A fourth-year physics student at the University of Victoria is among 47 young Canadians receiving $15,000 scholarships from the National Research Council.

Charles J. C. Lee, 21, of 2700 Asquith, will use the award for computer study at the University of Toronto.

A graduate of Victoria Senior Secondary School, Lee earned top marks for the second consecutive year in 1968, winning A-plus in his five best subjects.

The NRC scholarships are designed to assist outstanding young Canadians to obtain doctorate degrees in science and engineering. Recipients receive an annual grant of $5,000 for a three-year period, with scholarships being renewable for a fourth year if necessary.

The academic fees and travel costs are also paid by the council, and the university at which they will study receives an annual grant of up to $1,500.

LINGUISTIC AWARDS

The University of Victoria has announced that three of its graduate students in linguistics have been awarded doctoral fellowships totalling $12,500 by the Canada Council.

Completing work for an MA this year are Tiiu Kava, 22, and David Grubb, 24, both of Victoria.

A graduate of Oak Bay Senior Secondary School, Miss Kava's MA work deals with the Cowichan Indian language and she receives a $3,500 fellowship to aid her doctoral studies at the University of Hawaii this fall.

Grubb was offered a $4,500 fellowship but decided to refuse it and remain in Victoria a further year to continue research into regional Indian languages. He is a graduate of University School.

Another $4,500 award goes to James Arthurs, 35, now teaching French at the Canadian Services College, Royal Roads. He received his MA in linguistics from the University of Victoria last year and will complete his studies towards a PhD at UBC.

Theatrical Arts School Established

TORONTO (CP) — So you're a young hopeful, aching for the big break in professional theatre but you can't get any training. Take heart.

The youth and recreation branch of the department of education is sponsoring Ontario Youtheatre, an organization that will provide professional training in any aspect of theatre including acting, direction, designing and administration.

John Wood, 30, Youtheatre's special consultant, has lined up an impressive list of contributing professionals for their first meeting in Welland, May 16-18.

"John Hirsch (associate artistic director of the Stratford Festival) has offered his help. So has Barry Morse (former artistic director for Niagara-on-the-Lake's Shaw Festival).

"The National Arts Centre in Ottawa, the St. Lawrence Centre here—they're both interested."

He said Michael Croft, who founded the National Theatre of Great Britain in 1956, will also attend the Welland meeting.

"But we're already looking beyond the Welland production; we have had some very exciting offers of assistance . . . which may allow us to get our first production company going before the end of the year."

English Director Captures Top Award With Second Try

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — He is sandy-haired and quiet-spoken, and you'd never suspect that he could tame such strong spirts as Katharine Hepburn and Peter O'Toole9 But he did and now he's reaping the rewards.

Anthony Harvey's telephone rang so ofte ae he tried taking his ease beside the Beverly Hills Hotel pool that he finally told the operator to hold the calls. The gist of the messages, most of them from total strangers: "Tony, baby, I've got a great script for ya. ..."

Harvey,38, a nswered each call politely, vowing to read the scripts when they were sent to him.

WON GUILD AWARD

"I've got to take a house at the beach to get away from the telep one and try to do some reading," said the English-born director. "It's the only way I'll be able to make a decision about the next picture."

Harvey's last picture—the second he ever directed—was The Lion in Winter, and that's the reason he has been inundated by more than a hundred scripts. His accomplishment was signalled by his winning of the Directors Guild award for best picture of 1968. Since the Guild winner has coincided with the Academy Award for best director during the last 15 years, he qualifies as a favorite for the Oscar.

Like Lewis Milestone, Robert Wise and many other noted directors, Harvey was a film editor, the man who puts togethe the finished movie. Like most of his predecessors, he had difficulty making the transition to director.

"I was an editor for 15 years and ji was always looking for an opportunity to direct," he recalled. "But nobody was willing to take a chance on me." Harvey solved his problem by acquiring rights to LeRoi Jones' play The Dutchman.

Said Harvey: "I was fascinated by the language in it, and also by the fact that it took place in a New York subway, which to me is the most frightening of places."

Against all odds, Harvey filmed The Dutchman at an English studio, completing it in six days on a $62,000 budget. The movie was not a hit, but Harvey's work impressed Peter O'Toole.

Demerit Point System Effective Today For All V.I. Drivers

The point demerit system for driving offences used in Victoria since Oct. 1 will cover the whole Island starting today.

A spokesman for the motor vehicles branch said Monday the system, which replaced fines for most driving offences, has been found "quite effective and satisfactory" during its six-month trial here.

Under the demerit system a person is penalized for driving infractions by having points assigned to his driver's licence. The more serious the offence, the more points he receives.

AUTOMATIC

If he accumulates nine points he automatically loses his licence if he cannot show just cause why his licence should not be suspended. Suspension periods, depending on the driver's record, vary from one month to three years.

If three points or less are accumulated, they are erased from the driver's record after a year. When six points are amassed, the driver receives a warning from the motor vehicle branch.

Driving offences in the Criminal Code of Canada are punishable by point demerits as well as fines prescribed by the Code.

MOTOR VEHICLE ACT

Two Points

Driving through red light; failing to stop at traffic control light; changing lanes illegally; passing on the right (without lanes); left turn other than at intersection; right turn other than at intersection; making reverse turn; failing to signal turn; failing to yield right-of-way at intersection; failing to yield right-of-way on left turn; failing to yield right-of-way on entering through highway; emerging from an alley without due care; failing to stop at railway crossing controlled by mechanical device; failing to heed railway stop sign; commercial vehicle failing to stop at railway crossing; improper stopping; failing to exercise caution in backing; failing to maintain proper distance following fire engine; driving on sidewalk.

Three Points

Failing to obey restriction on driving licence; failing to obey construction zone flagman; driving too slowly; speeding; speeding on playgroung or in school zone; failing to stop on meeting or overtaking school bus; failing to drive on right (except when passing); passing when meeting oncoming vehicle; passing on solid double line; failing to drive safely when overtaking another vehicle; failing to drive safely when passing on left; passing without clear view for safe distance; driving against highway division barrier; improper entry to controlled access highway; improper turn at intersection; failing to stop when emergency vehicle approaches; failing to yield right-of-way to pedestrian; failing to stop properly at stop sign; moving vehicle on highway when unsafe to do so.

Others

Four points — following too closely; five points — minor driving without insurance, squealing tires; six points—driving without due care and attention; 10 points — driving while right to obtain licence is suspended:

Criminal Code

Ten points to squealing tires death by criminal negligence; causing injury by criminal negligence; criminal negligence; failing to remain at scene of accident; dangerous driving; drunken driving; driving ability impaired; driving while under suspension.

ANCESTRAL LANDS SOUGHT BY INDIANS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hearing of a claim against the provincial government by the Nishga Indians for their ancestral lands in the valley of the Nass River 500 miles northwest of Vancouver began this week in British Columbia Supreme Court.

Tom Berger, lawyer for the band of 2,000 Indians in north coastal B.C., said it is a test case for B.C.'s Indians, most of whom never signed land treaties with the provincial government.

The hearing had been postponed twice before at the request of the attorney-general's department.

Scot Society May Set Up Branch Here

A branch of the Saltire Society of Edinburgh may be set up in Victoria.

Inquiries can be sent to Peter J. Allan, director, The Saltire Society, Gladstone's Land, 483 Lawmarket, Edinburgh, Scotland.

"Our society is the sole organization concerned with the total culture of Scotland," Allan says. "Since 1936 it has through architecture, education, literature, music and all the other arts, sought to raise standards generally.

"The society is non-political and non-sectarian. It welcomes all Scots and those interested in the welfare of Scotland.

"It offers a link to anyone interested in Scotland through branch meetings, a newsletter and tape recordings," Allan said.

A two-week residential summer school sloganed The Character of a Nation will be held at the University of St. Andrew's, Scotland, Aug. 9-23.

Group travel arrangements are offered to members of the Saltire Society.

Musicians' Union To Hold Concert For Threads

Victoria Musicians' Union will provide the weekly concert at Victoria Silver Threads Centre Wednesday at 2 p.m., with George Fairfield as master of ceremonies.

There will be sing-along at 1:20 p.m. led by Lorna Robbins and Elsie Bullough.

The Old Time dance band at Saanich Silver Threads Centre, 286 Hampton Road, will play Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.

Saanich Silver Threads Orchestra will give a concert Wednesday at 2 p.m.

A class in ceramics will be held in Esquimalt Silver Threads Centre Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. followed by a whist drive.

There will be a concert Thursday at 1:30 p.m. by Vivien McCahill, Laura Gosse, Mrs. Henry Smith and William Glover.

City Philatelists Elect First Woman President

The 30-year-old Greater Victoria Philatelic Society has elected its first woman president, Mrs. L. E. Small.

A collector and active society member for many years, Mrs. Small has for many years assisted her husband, Lester Small, in promoting junior stamp collecting.

Others elected at the annual meeting are vice-president Ron Stocks, secretary Miss Vida Morley, treasurer Jack Isaacson, auctioneer Philip Anderson and editor Miss Grace Mears.

Dr. Joseph Pearce, 1223 Union Avenue, was presented the Royal Philatelic Society of Canada's plaque for outstanding service. Dr. Pearce is also a charter member of the Vancouver Island Philatelic Society, chartered in 1931.

War Frustration Top U.S. Problem

By MURREY MARDER

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Nixon administration has broken the normal pattern of diplomacy to stave off the time pressures upon it to end the war in Vietnam.

By focusing maximum public attention on expected private negotiations on Vietnam, the administration has bought time to try to cope with the war frustrations that unseated the Democrats.

But this strategic gamble in public psychology has a double cost: it builds expectations for displaying tangible results from secret diplomacy that has no assured timetable; it can also encourage the Communist side to try to exploit the American public's expectations of early results in a massively complex process.

Administration strategists are aware of both dangers. But they concluded they had no effective, alternative course to gain the time they need for the negotiating path they have chosen.

More talk of continued military progress or "turning the corner" simply was discredited as a time-buying tactic long before the 1968 election.

Nixon administration strategists now concede privately that they over-estimated the grace period of about six months which they originally counted on for what they call a more "forthcoming" approach to the Paris negotiations than the Johnson administration initiated.

They found they could not achieve their time interval by the silence that secret diplomacy normally requires. Therefore they opted to capitalize upon inevitably growing press and public curiosity about what was going on behind-the-scenes by underlining, dramatically, the importance of secret talks.

At some point within the next weeks or months, every official dealing with Vietnam recognizes, the congressional and public frustrations are bound to well up again.

The administration will try to stretch out the patience interval as long as possible. What its strategists hope is that there will be some publicly discernible breakthrough in the diplomatic struggle in Paris that will produce a safety valve for the next spiral of impatience. But no one can guarantee that.

Despite the public disclaimer last Thursday by Secretary of State William P. Rogers of any intention to "buy off" public impatience with a limited withdrawal of perhaps 50,000 U.S. troops from South Vietnam, the possibility is a very real one, other sources concede.

Some American strategists long have favored such a withdrawal for multiple purposes: to alleviate public frustrations about the war, and also to prod the South Vietnam government, militarily and diplomatically.

The military objective was to induce South Vietnam's forces to take over a larger share of the war; the diplomatic objective was to put Saigon on notice that it must face up to the need to reach a political compromise with its bitter adversary, the National Liberation Front, the political arm of the Viet Cong guerrillas.

At the end of last year, in one of the shrewdest moves yet made by the South Vietnamese leadership, it took active cognizance of these multiple American pressures. Instead of fighting them, Saigon's leadership, in effect, decided to roll with the punches.

The Saigon regime began to display cautiously, in two-steps-forward, one-step-backward style, a readiness to bargain with the NLF. At the same time, President Nguyen Van Thieu himself took the initiative to float an interest in staged withdrawals of U.S. troops from South Vietnam spaced over several years—whether North Vietnamese forces withdrew or not.

This was South Vietnam's version of buying time for its own interests, to avert any precipitate, wholesale withdrawal of U.S. forces, and to gain time for the South Vietnamese regime to cope with NLF on a political plane once the shooting stops.

Publicly, the American and South Vietnamese position is that if North Vietnam withdraws its troops and subversive cadre forces from the south, American troops could be totally removed swiftly. Secretary Rogers reiterated that position publicly on Thursday.

But the reality of the situation, as South Vietnamese officials themselves concede privately, is that if the Communist-led forces were to lay down their weapons tomorrow, and shift their attack on the South Vietnamese regime from the battlefield to the political arena, it would cause political dismay in Saigon.

"Courtesy On The Highway Saves Lives"

Hon. Wesley D. Black, Minister of Highways

If every driver on our highways extended the same courtesy to other drivers as he thinks they should extend to him, there would be far fewer accidents and fatalities and highway driving would always be the pleasure it should be.

On the highway, courtesy means obeying the rules – e.g. staying in the right hand lane except when passing, using signal lights when changing lanes, avoiding excessively fast or slow speeds. Drivers towing trailers and other slower moving vehicles should not bunch up, but allow space between vehicles for safe passing.

Highway courtesy begins before the driver leaves home. He makes sure that his car's steering, brakes, tires, lights and engine are in excellent condition and that he, himself, feels rested and alert.

In B.C., we have built our highways to make safe, courteous driving a pleasure. Only you the driver, however, can determine if these highways are used properly and courteously or abused injuriously or even fatally!

World Leaders Chat With Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon set aside his entire schedule today for private conferences with a dozen world leaders, including Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky of South Vietnam.

Nixon ruled out the presence of any advisors at the session, except for interpreters.

Ostensibly, the president's chats with foreign leaders who came here to attend funeral services for former president Dwight D. Eisenhower were largely ceremonial in nature. However, press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler declined to rule out substantive discussions on world affairs.

"There is no agenda," he said.

Ky will be flying from Washington to the Vietnam peace talks in Paris and it seemed certain he and Nixon would discuss that parley, as they did when they met in Paris a month ago during Nixon's European tour.

Another U.S. supporter in the Vietnam war, President Ferdinant Marcos of the Philippines, said en route to Washington that he had unspecified "urgent" matters he wanted to discuss with Nixon.

Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada, who had a state visit to Washington last week, returned to Ottawa Monday.

In addition to Ky and Marcos, those scheduled to visit the White House at Nixon's invitation were:

Premier Mariano Rumor of Italy, Prime minister John Gorton of Australia, Premier Chung Il Kwon of South Korea, premier Marcello Caetamo of Portugal and Premier Suleiman Demirel of Turkey.

Also Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger of West Germany, the Shah of Iran, President Habib Bouguiba of Tunesia, Foreign Minister Joseph Luns of The Netherlands and former premier Nobusuke Kishi of Japan.

Today's talks followed a large diplomatic reception Nixon gave at the White House Monday night for the heads of state and other dignitaries who came for the Eisenhower state funeral.

Although Nixon talked with most of those attending the reception, the conversations apparently were social.

King Starts Crisis Tour

AMMAN (Reuters) — King Hussein of Jordan left today for Beirut, Lebanon, on his way to visit Paris and Washington, where he will meet with President Nixon.

During his brief stopover in Beirut, the Jordanian monarch will meet President Charles Heou and other Lebanese leaders for discussions on the Middle East crisis. He will have similar talks in Paris with President de Gaulle.

Hussein will arrive in Washington April 8 at Nixon's invitation to discuss bilateral relations and the Middle East.

Hope No Longer Voiced In U.S. Viet Headquarters

By PETER ARNETT

TAY NINH, South Vietnam (AP)—Optimism about the war reflected at United States headquarters in Saigon earier this year has been replaced by constraint. American pacification officials no longer mention the confident forecasts, made in February, that 90 per cent of South Vietnam's population would be under government control and protection by year's end.

As has happened often in the past, hopes have proved premature that the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces were so weakened and disarrayed that they had lost the drive for any real fight.

Many realities of the war seem as valid now as they did in earlier years.

One is that there is no easy way to win.

The B-52 bombers that send explosives crashing into the jungles have scored many successes, officers say, but they have not deterred the determined Viet Cong and North Vietnamese from frequently bursting upon combined forces bases.

Sophisticated radar and electronic tracking devices on aircraft and vehicles were seen as another technique of reducing the troops' workload. But none of this apparatus located two battalion-sized Viet Cong ambushes laid in daylight last week along busy highways in this area 50 miles northwest of Saigon.

The South Vietnamese army appears nowhere near taking over the workload from the Americans. In three sectors surveyed last week, American troopers were earmarked to take over areas currently defended by the South Vietnamese army, should the pressure increase to a dangerous level.

Hopes that people in outlying villages recently armed by the Saigon government would resist the Viet Cong have not fully materialized. Viet Cong forces have walked through allegedly pacified villages west and south of Saigon without a shot being fired by the defenders.

'We Spar, Then We Fight . . . Then We Retreat'

Outer-ring defences around many cities have not functioned. A hamlet outside Bac Lieu city in the Mekong Delta was found to be harboring Viet Cong forces at night. They regularly received intelligence from villagers visiting the nearby city market.

Another reality is that combined forces troops often cannot grasp the initiative from the Viet Cong. Usually the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese are found only when they want to be found.

Deficiency in knowledge of the local scene is compensated by the vast firepower U.S. forces can summon at any given moment from artillery and airpower. In the final analysis, this immense firepower generally saves the day. But firepower can be used successfully only against a visible enemy.

This gap in knowledge has not been bridged by the South Vietnamese military who often give a sober assessment of the war's progress.

For example, South Vietnamese airborne officers at Tay Ninh characterize the weeks of vicious fighting in the sector as a boxing match.

"Up here, the Communists are our equals," said a captain. "They come across the Cambodian border; we leave our base camp. We spar, then we fight for a while, then we retreat to our corners for a minute's break. Then it's out and at it again."

Eight Fined $5 For Having Small Clams

Eight persons were fined $5 each Saturday in Sidney magistrate's court after pleading guilty of possessing under-sized clams.

They were: William Baxter, 1259 Revercombe Place, Leonard Murrant, 3430 Maplewood, Leo McGillis, 996 Brighton Cresc., Brian Baker, 1145 Faithful, Ron Brown, 2807 Wyndeatt, Edwin Kuefler and Briget Eric Badminton, 4141 Gillie, Flynn, 1802 Oak Bay Avenue.

EARNINGS LIMIT BACKED BY COURT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Supreme Court upheld today the right of unions to punish workers who go over production quotas.

Fining or even expelling piece workers who exceed production quotas set by the union is a matter of internal policy not forbidden by federal labor law, the court said in a decision approved by seven out of eight members.

The decision, given by Justice Byron R. White, dealt with quotas set by the United Auto Workers Union at the Wisconsin Motor Corp., in Milwaukee, Wis. Four machine operators were tried by the union and fined $50 to $100 and were suspended from the union for a year when it was found that they, and other members, had exceeded the production ceiling for piece workers.

The union rule, enforceable since 1944 by fines and expulsion, allows members to produce as much as they like each day but sets a ceiling rate for how much pay they may draw on a particular day.

ECM Union Makes Technical Progress

By CLYDE H. FARNSWORTH

BRUSSELS — The European Common Market is marking time on the big issues of European integration, but is making limited, technical progress towards economic union in the fields of transportation, patents and customs safety regulations.

Standards are being established for the work day of a truck driver. A Common Market patent office is beginning to take shape. Procedures are being set up to eliminate technical, non-tariff obstacles to trade.

Rhese are the minutia of community development, being accomplished in a year that is supposed to move the market out of a transition phase into a state of solid economic union. The ambitious schedule of the market's founders has now run into trouble.

Every new step foreward has to cross the barrier of deep political mistrust. In this atmosphere, the member states are reluctant to give up the sovereignty that major decisions, say in agriculture financing, or in monetary co-operation, would entail.

Despite the present malaise, no one, including French President de Gaulle, who has made no secret of his dislike for the community, is prepared to write it off yet.

SIGN OF PROGRESS

Powerful interests want it to continue: the businessman who can sell in a tariff free market of 180 million people; the farmer who is guaranteed high prices for his produce; the worker who can settle down in any of the member states and benefit from local social security.

The outsider may dismiss some of the "small" decisions, but for the interested parties, such as the thousands of community truckers, these are important. It is a sign of the community's stature and progress that no decision taken in Brussels can be ignored.

POLITICAL WILL

Yet, there is the feeling in some quarters that, apart from some of the minutia, the Market has progressed about as far as it can until a free political will emerges.

Much of the present bad temper stems from de Gaulle's refusal to allow Britain in as a new member. The general now speaks vaguely of new forms of economic and political co-operation that might include Britain and that might replace the Common Market.

There is little support for the idea among the five countries that want Britain included — the "Friendly Five," as they are called.

Students Produce Movie

WINNIPEG (CP) — University of Manitoba students have entered the film-making industry with a 48-minute movie produced from a budget of $7,800.

The first showing of the film, entitled And No Birds Sing, was held recently for a number of guests including the provincial industry minister, Sidney Spivak.

"This type of activity indicates the need for more government, and especially community, participation in the way of grants for creative people," Mr. Spivak said.

He said talented "creative groups like these youngsters" prompted the provincial government to establish the Provincial Arts Council set up last year for the purpose of offering grants.

The film was written, produced and directed by Prof. Victor Cowie. It tells a story about a young university student intent on wooing a young lady in his classroom. Until the night of a party, the heroine appears unimpressed by her admirer.

Sherwin Lyman, executive producer, said the film has possibilities of being entered in one or several film festivals in the nited States. Nodec ion hasiUs United States. No decision has yet been made on whether to make copies of the film.

Trustee Resigns After Defeat Of Bylaw; Raps Voter Apathy

By ED GOULD

DUNCAN—One trustee resigned, two others felt like it but reconsidered, and another was asked to either co-operate or quit at a heated session of the Cowichan School Board Monday night.

Alastair I. MacDonald resigned because he regarded "the budget defeat Saturday as a vote of non-confidence in this board."

He considered his remaining on the board a "waste of time" considering the apathetic attitude of the district voters towards their children's education.

MacDonald, a Duncan lawyer, also referred to Trustee Margeret Whittaker when he blamed board disagreements on "a new trustee who was not ready . . . who had not completed in-service training."

Trustees Jack Efford and Ernie Goddard said they also considered resigning. Efford said "however I think we should continue to take the next step to the department level and try to obtain the best education possible for our children."

Trustee Goddard said he would have resigned too but "since I am one of the architects of the budget, I feel I should see it through to the end."

The requested resignation of Mrs. Whittaker came in a strong attack from Trustee Andy Anand who questioned her ability to be a good administrator without having and previous knowledge of running such a complex business as a school district.

He said commitment to trusteeship was not "the same as milking cows and doing farm chores. I believe you are pretty experienced in that line of work.

Mrs. Whittaker had not "put forth an honest four-hour's work in the past three months . . . . I suggest now is the time to either work with the rest of the board members in an effort to salvage our program or quit and let someone else in."

Trustee Terry Taylor also drew a bead on Mrs. Whittaker when he said a school board is more like a cabinet than legislature.

"When a majority decision is made by the board, you abide by it," he said.

Byelection On May 3

DUNCAN — A byelection to fill the vacancy created by the death of Alderman Robert Mason will be held May 3, Mayor Jim Quaife told city council Monday night.

Nominations are open until noon April 23.

Returning officer is city administrator Gordon Berry.

Flying Start For Tahsis Baby

VANCOUVER (CP)—Flight 240 of British Columbia Airlines took off from Tahsis on the West Coast of Vancouver Island with seven passengers Monday and landed half an hour later at Vancouver International Airport with eight.

The extra passenger, born between Port Alberni and Nanaimo at about 11,000 feet, was a six-pound, 14-ounce baby girl for Doris Savinkoff of Tahsis.

Mother and baby were doing well today in Richmond General Hospital—closest hospital to the airport.

The baby was delivered by Dave Mills, an off-duty B.C. Airlines pilot who was heading for Vancouver on company business.

Pilot of the 11-passenger Grumman Mallard, R. M. (Red) Croisdale, said a slight turbulence at the time probably contributed to the birth.

The father, a stevedore in Tahsis, said he sent his wife to Vancouver on the family doctor's advice "just in case of complications."

"This is our fifth child. I'm sure happy to hear everyone's all right," he said in a telephone interview. "I'm stuck at home looking after our four youngsters. I can't even go out to buy cigars."

Waiting at home for the new baby are Dave, 6, Judy, 5, Gregory, 3, and Paul, 2.

JOGGING SESSION 'NO JOKE'—MAYOR

DUNCAN — Mayor Jim Quaife's physical fitness program which was to start today with a jogging session at the high school track was washed out by rain.

Opinions had been expressed that the project was part of an April Fool's joke.

"Not so," the mayor said, from the dry comfort of his bedroom. "This is a serious attempt to upgrade the physical standards of my fellow Canadians."

He said although the wet day was a setback, the program will begin the first sunny day this week.

Gordon Pynn, director of community programs branch of the provincial department of education, has supplied material for a physical fitness program which Quaife has set up for interested persons.

"They can either jog outside in the early morning with me or anywhere that's convenient," Quaife said.

'Excesses' in Promotion Regretted

Mrs. Whittaker said she had never made any personal attacks on a trustee and that her disagreements lay with the budget itself.

She then attempted to get a resolution passed that "this board regrets excesses in the bylaw-promoting campaign through the schools."

Taylor seconded the motion because he said an allegation against the board had been made.

Only Mrs. Whittaker voted in favor.

Efford, who was chairman of the public information committee which put out the pamphlet referred to by Mrs. Whittaker in her "excesses" remark said: "If there was misinformation it was not by those who supplied the information but by those who read and by those who passed it on."

He said his committee did everything above board and nothing behind anyone's back. He produced three elaborate information booklets put out by other school districts in favor of their programs and hoped he would be back next year to do the same, "only with a larger money appropriation."

Chairman Bruce Devitt reiterated earlier statements that he did not consider the bylaw defeat a vote of non-confidence.

He asked the board to get down to work and cut the budget as much as possible and then, with the help of the B.C. school trustees assocation, go to the department of education for help.

The chairman said the aim should be to keep the basic program intact as possible.

He said it was not "our intent to cause a serious rift in the community or to turn the issue into the insane, mad tea party that developed."

The bylaw would have permitted the board to spend $366,000 above a provincially-imposed ceiling on this year's operating costs.

Agreement Reached With School Staff

DUNCAN — Agreement has been reached between Cowichan District School Board and its non-teaching employees.

Details of the contract were not released. The employees, members of Local 1-80 of the International Woodworkers of America, will be asked to ratify the contract at a meeting April 12 at 10:30 a.m. in the Duncan IWA office.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A federal official has recommended that two Vancouver Island Indian bands, which were amalgamated two years ago, separate again.

Camera Woes Scuttle Final Scenes

GANGES — Gremlins got into the camera and delayed the filming of a big helicopter search scene in Meridian film's "The Blast" which was to have been completed here Saturday.

"I am completely baffled by what caused our camera to pack up while we were filming the final scenes from the helicopter," producer Mike Holden said. "The camera and the film were new and had been functioning perfectly but the rushes of that scene were completely blank."

The weather during the week the 42-member company was "on location" had been almost perfect. The Toronto-based filmmakers now have returned to Vancouver to complete scenes there and expect to return in about two weeks to refilm the helicopter scene on nearly Maxwell Mountain.

The Blast is a "cheapie" movie costing about $500,000 to make and which will be sold outright to an American company to distribute. It is about two American draft-dodgers in Canada who run afoul of the law.

The helicopter scene involves the fugitives being pursued and fired upon by Canadian police. One falls to his death from the 2,200-foot peak.

Rezoning Asked For Apartment, Trailer Park

DUNCAN — Four applications requiring amendments to the city zoning bylaw were given two readings at a special city council meeting Monday night.

Final decision will be made at a meeting to be announced by council.

The applications included a 14-unit trailer park adjacent to a new hotel being built opposite the A and W Drive-In on the Trans-Canada Highway by the Vancouver firm of Village Green Hotel Ltd.; a 32-unit apartment at Price Place behind the Drive-Inn; a Mohawk Oil Company service station just south of Trunk Road on the Trans-Canada Highway, and a Glad Tidings Tabernacle on Tzouhalem Road across from the Christian Reformed Church and school.

Slash-Burning Supported But More Research Urged

Logging companies should continue to burn slash timber in the fall to help prevent forest fires in the summer, the legislative committee on forestry recommended to the legislature Monday.

But the committee's report said the slash-burning policy should be reviewed next year again in the interior of the province.

And its effects in the coastal area should be reviewed in 1971.

In the meantime, it called for more research on other methods of disposing of the waste wood left behind as litter by loggers.

To help with forest fire fighting, the committee urged efforts continue to improve the federal government's special fire weather forecasts. It recommended the wages paid to men drafted for fire-fighting duty be raised from the present $1.25 to $1.75 an hour.

Also recommended was formation of an inter-departmental committee to develop land use policies and adjudicate the various demands from farmers, miners, loggers, subdividers and recreationists for use of the same crown lands.

The report said the cabinet committee should inelude Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell, Forests, Lands and Water Resources Minister Williston, Recreation and Conservation Minister Kiernan, Agriculture Minister Shelford and Mines and Petroleum Minister Richter.

Douglas Coming For Scout Walk On Easter Monday

NORTH COWICHAN — NDP Leader Tommy Douglas will participate in the Boy Scout Association's annual eight-mile walkathon being organized for Easter Monday.

The promoters of the event did not know whether Mr. Douglas, MP for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, would walk or just present awards to the winners.

Mayor Jim Quaife and Ald. Dennis Hogan also have agreed to take an active part in the walk which is to raise funds for Scout activities.

FUNERAL SERVICE will be held Thursday at 3:15 in McCall's chapel in Victoria for Sidney alderman and water board chairman Leonard Wadhams, 2567 Beaufort. He died Monday of cancer. He is survived by the widow, Marjorie; one son, Terence, of Vancouver, and two grandchildren.

Sterner Penalties Face Bad Drivers

TORONTO (CP) — Tougher penalties loom for careless drivers in Ontario, where Transport Minister Irwin Haskett says 1,586 persons died last year in traffic accidents and 71,000 persons were injured.

He told the legislature Monday, as he introduced nearly 100 amendments to the Highway Traffic Act, that he was "fed up" with provincial court judges who were lenient with bad drivers. Most of the amendments come into effect Sept. 1.

The amendments, which received first reading include:

—A sliding scale of fines for speeding convictions with bigger fines for higher speeds.

—A minimum fine of $100 instead of the present $10 for careless driving convictions, with the $500 maximum remaining.

—An increase in the discretionary jail term to six months from the present three months on conviction for careless driving.

—A new requirement that a driver identify himself at the demand of a policeman.

—Addition of two offences for which police may arrest without a warrant; failure to remain at the scene of an accident and failure of a driver to identify himself properly to a policeman.

In the past, the act provided for a minimum fine of $5 and a maximum of $50 for speeding offences.

Under the amendment act the fine for speeding will be increased by $2 a mile up to and including nine miles an hour over the limit.

Between 10-19 miles an hour over the limit the fine will increase by $3 for each mile. It goes to $4 a mile for speeds between 20 and 29 miles an hour over the limit and more than that at $5 a mile.

NIGERIANS TO CONTINUE BOMB RAIDS

LAGOS (AP) — The Nigerian federal leader said Monday his air force will continue bombing the secessionist state of Biafra even though the wisdom of air attacks on civilian areas has been questioned by Prime Minister Wilson of Britain, a supplier of military aid to the federal government.

Maj.-Gen. Yakubu Gowon charged at a news conference held after Wilson concluded a four-day visit and flew to Ethiopia, that the Biafrans "stage-managed" civilian casualties in raids by federal planes.

Surplus Hits Milk Price Aid

OTTAWA (CP) — Dairy farmers can blame the world surplus of skim milk powder for a drop of about eight cents a hundredweight in their take-home pay for manufacturing milk.

The dairy support policy for the 1969-70 dairy year starting today, announced Monday by the Canadian dairy commission, keeps the support price at $4.85 for a hundred pounds of milk at the factory but increases the holdback deducted by the commission to help finance skim milk powder exports.

Announcing the policy in the Commons, Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson said the holdback required to support the price of skim milk exports at 20 cents a pound would average 29 cents a hundred pounds on industrial milk. It was 21 cents last year.

Cream shippers, who do not contribute to the milk powder surplus, will be docked the same one-cent-a-pound on butterfat as they were last year.

Mr. Olson warned, however, that larger holdbacks would be charged if the present trend towards butterfat surpluses continues.

DETAILS INCREASES

Butter production since last October has been 10 per cent above a year ago, the dairy commission had to purchase 8,000,000 pounds of surplus cheddar cheese to support the market price and "there is a serious surplus of skim milk powder."

He stressed that the dairy policy aims at providing equitable returns to producers for dairy products "for the Canadian market."

Producers fully understand that the cost of disposing of surplus products "must be a charge against the industry."

Harry A. Moore PC—Wetaskiwin) protested that never before had dairy farmers greater reason for concern and never had the government demonstrated less concern for them."

Alf Gleave (NDP—Saskatoon-Biggar) said the dairy industry was going through a period of transition and hardships should be minimized.

The greatest weight of adjustment had been falling on the small operator who was least able to absorb it.

BASED ON SUBSIDY

The support price for milk is based on a federal subsidy of $1.25 and $3.60 from the factory. Equivalent rates apply for cream shippers, the dairy commission said in a press release accompanying the minister's statement.

The holdback for milk shippers has been raised to 26 cents a hundred pounds for shipments up to the subsidy quota and 52 cents for each hundred pounds above the quota. It is expected to average out to 29 cents.

Quotas will continue to be available for producers who already have them to the 12,000-pound-a-year level, but new quotas will only be issued to those who purchase a dairy herd from someone going out of business and they will have to ship a minimum of 100,000 pounds a year.

The minimum for cream shippers, now at 450 pounds, will be lowered. An announcement of the new level will be made later, the commission said.

Skim milk powder brings only six cents a pound on the world market, but is supported at 20 cents to the manufacturer. The butter support price for 1969 will continue at 65 cents a pound, the same as last year.

White cheddar cheese, manufactured in April will continue at 44 cents a pound. The new price, to go into effect May 1, will be announced later.

Christians Going Red Churchman Charges

EDMONTON (CP) — Communist tactics are being used by the churches to destroy the benefits of capitalism, the president of the International Council of Christian Churches said Monday night.

Dr. Carl McIntire of Collingswood, N.J., here to address a faith and freedom rally, said in an interview the Russian Orthodox Church is an "instrument for Communist infiltration and espionage" throughout the world.

Other churches were also criticized.

"At the root of trends toward ecumenism and changing structures is a socialistic philosophy," he said. "The churches are using tactics to destroy the benefits of capitalism, those of freedom and responsibility."

STRIPPING RELIGION

Speaking on behalf of 140 Protestant denominations belonging to the ICCC, Dr. McIntire said the organization opposes the ecumenical movement because "the ecumenical churches are denying their original creeds and the authority of the Bible and turning their structures into simple institutions with revolutionary programs."

He said modern church leaders were stripping religion of its "supernaturalism" and were changing the "nature, purpose and message" of religion.

"If the Bible says Christ was born of a virgin, then he was, and that's it," he said. "Some people deny that Daniel and Moses ever wrote certain passages, but Jesus said they did and I guess he knew what he was talking about."

The rally was sponsored by the Canadian Council of Evangelical Protestant Churches.

NIGHTCLUB DANCER JOINS MALE WORLD

TORONTO (CP) — Jann Olsson, a petite former nightclub dancer from Australia, spends her days carving cutlets with 38 males.

The five-foot-two, 105-pound native of Australia is the only woman taking a meat-cutting course at a local community college and she hopes to open a "meat boutique" in Australia or Canada when she graduates in May. She comes from a family of food caterers, but meat-cutting in Australia is strictly a male trade.

Before entering the course, she worked as a nightclub dancer in Australia and was a magician's assistant in New Zealand where being "sawed" in half was all part of a day's work.

Before arriving in Canada two years ago with her husband, a TV producer, she toured the Orient for six years.

Instructors at George Brown College, which has been offering the course for three years, say Jann is the first woman to enrol and that her marks are "good to excellent."

Jann says she is strictly not a "steak and potatoes" girl but prefers stroganoff and beef bourguignon.

She hopes to sell "rosy rumps, mini-steaks and frilly fillets" if she opens her boutique.

St. Joseph's Nudges Into Surplus Picture

By PETE LOUDON

In the space of one year, St. Joseph's Hospital has pulled itself out of the red and now is ringing up a $29,000 surplus.

The improvement in the hospital operating budget was attributed today to mutual co-operation by the hospital and B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

Full details of the hospital financial picture will be made public at the annual meeting April 24.

Last year, in a report covering 1967 operations, the hospital showed a deficit for the year of $244,536.

The situation last March was so critical the medical staff of 245 doctors each were advised by letter of a "serious financial situation."

They were told that operating costs had risen by $2 million in four years and the situation for 1968 showed little hope of improvement.

Executive director Dr. E. C. Q. Van Tilburg said the hospital had either to cut back on services or utilize staff and services to a higher degree. He said the hospital might have to settle for "something less than maximum care."

He asked doctors to relieve nurses of paper work and to try to accept some patients for office treatment.

The 1968 budget shows the rise of costs unabated. Operating costs totalled $3.6 million in 1963 and $5.7 million in 1967. The latest report puts them at $6.5 million.

A hospital official today said, however, "the hospital has done better than ever in obtaining BCHIS funds."

He also credited part of the improved financial picture to the fact "we took a critical look at ourselves."

The improvement was reached despite records set in the number of patients treated during the year.

Funeral Slated Saturday for Ex-Stereotyper

Funeral services will be held Saturday for Fred Bidstrup, retired newspaper stereotyper.

He died Friday at the age of 78 after 60 years association with newspapers in Denmark and Canada. Affectionately known as "Papa" Bidstrup, he worked for 17 years in the Victoria Colonist's stereotype department before retirement in January, 1965.

He was born in Copenhagen in 1890 and began a stereotyping apprenticeship at 15. In 1929 he went to Toronto and worked for 20 years at the Toronto Star, Telegram and Globe and Mail.

He is survived by a son, Fred, two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren in Portland.

Boys' Club Needs Adult Volunteers

Langford Centennial Boys Club seriously needs volunteer instructors, supervisors and drivers.

The group of 50 boys now is involved in model making and plans to try building a boat they can use.

They also play basketball and floor hockey, and have gym classes. They are anxious to take on other sports, hobbies and crafts — anything which adults will take time to teach them.

Director Skip Willard (478-4808) will provide information on request. Interested persons are also invited to a meeting Wednesday, April 9 at 8 p.m. at Our Lady Of The Rosary Church Hall on Goldstream Avenue.

22 Protest Lakeside Septic Tank

Twenty-two Florence Lake residents are protesting the installation of a domestic septic tank on a lakefront lot.

They have sent a petition to Metro Health Officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread.

The property, at the south end of the lake, is a former marsh which has been filled with mill waste and soil.

The lake empties through a small stream which flows along the side of this lot and eventually cuts through the Dogwood School grounds on Jacklin Road.

The ratepayers feel the septic tank flow will drain into the stream. A mobile home is already on the property.

Spokesman for the petitioners, W. L. Hoban, said the percolation test performed when the lake was at its lowest level last August should be repeated during high water.

Clem Cunningham, provincial building inspector, earlier said he felt "it would be all right."

Hoban stressed that the lake area residents are not opposed to trailers but that they are concerned with the quality of the lake for recreation.

"We all realize that the lake is slightly polluted now," he said, "but we don't want to increase the level of pollution any more."

Bank Takes Court Action

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Royal Bank of Canada has confirmed it has made application in British Columbia Supreme Court to take civil action against persons allegedly holding property purchased with the $490,000 taken from its Penticton branch.

The application against Ann Kathleen Spiller, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Spiller, and Fanny (Bambi) Shubin will be heard Monday.

Miss Spiller is now serving a six-year prison sentence for the theft.

The Royal Bank seeks to consolidate custody of the goods in question with the receiver.

Frank Christian, who successfully defended Miss Shubin against charges of possession of stolen money, said in Penticton: "The bank has declared that it has a right to property purchased with money stolen from it by Miss Spiller."

War Viewers Given Relief

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence department has announced a change in officers representing Canada on the international team observing the 20-month civil war in Nigeria.

Maj. George R. Harper, 39, of Timmins, Ont., now serving at the Canadian Forces staff school in Toronto, will succeed Lt.-Col. E. B. M. Pinnington, 43, of Cobalt, Ont.

The team, made up of representatives of Britain, Canada, Poland and Sweden, has been observing the conduct of the federal troops in their war against secessionist Biafra.

The team was invited to the war zone by the Nigerian government following reports of atrocities by federal troops.

Maj. Harper, a veteran of 20 years service, served in Korea and has held a number of staff and field appointments.

Labor Bill Approved

REGINA (CP) — After 12 hours of debate over two days, the Saskatchewan legislature Friday gave approval in principal to amendments to the Trade Union Act, one of the most controversial bills in the current session which the opposition New Democrats have fought at every stage. One amendment would make it an unfair labor practice to refuse to handle shipments labelled as "hot cargo" because they are en route to or from strike-bound plants.

April Is Funniest, Cruellest Month

By JOY STILLEY
Associated Press Writer

"April, April
"Laugh thy girlish laughter;
"Then, the moment after,
"Weep thy girlish tears. . ."

—Sir William Watson, April Song

The whole world laughs as April makes its entrance on a wave of practical jokes with which All Fools' Day has been observed for centuries. Though its origins are obscured in the mists of time, most common theory is that the custom started through celebration of the vernal equinox heralding the spring season.

But there are tears too:

"April is the cruellest month, breeding
"Lilacs out of the dead land, mixing
"Memory and desire, stirring
"Dull roots with spring rain. . "

—T. S. Eliot, The Waste Land

As uncertain as the April weather is the derivation of the month's name. Some authorities claim it comes from the Latin verb aperire, which means "to open," referring to the opening of leaves and buds at that time of the year. Others say, since April in ancient times was sacred to Venus, the name stems from Aphrilis, corrupted from Aphrodite, Greek name for Venus.

However, it got its name, from earliest literature April has been celebrated in song and poetry.

In the 14th century, Geoffrey Chaucer wrote in Caterbury Tales: —

"Whan that Aprille with his shoures soote
"The droghte of March hath perced to the roote. . .
"Thanne Longen folk to goon on pilgrimages. . ."

And Robert Browning spoke feeling in Home Thoughts from Abroad:

"Oh, to be in England
"Now that April's there. . ."

It's a big month in history. Germany signed an unconditional surrender pact in 1945 and that same month the United Nations was organized.

Born in April were Adolf Hitler, John James Audubon, Samuel F. B. Morse, Guglielmo Marconi, Hans Christian Anderson, Al Greco, Benjamin Disraeli, Charlemagne, Marcus Aurelius Antonius and Queen Isabelle I of Spain.

Shakespeare had much to say about the month of his birth, including:

"Oh how this spring of love resembleth
"The uncertain glory of an April day. . ."

Those who cut their birthday cake in April were born under the zodiacal sign of Aries, the ram, up to April 19, or Taurus, the bull, the rest of the month.

CHAOS IS CLOSE, HOOVER WARNS

WASHINGTON (UPI)—FBI director J. Edgar Hoover said Monday that the United States is experiencing daily "the progressive revolutionary steps of anarchy—coercion, intimidation, violence and unlawful takeover."

He also declared that law-abiding Americans must unite to resist criminal forces or "face chaos."

Writing in the monthly FBI law enforcement bulletin, Hoover said, "We are living in a day when defiance of authority is becoming the norm. We must establish a united resistance against the criminal forces destroying the structure of our society, or we face chaos."

Mining Bills 'A First Step'

New Democratic Party and Liberal MLAs predicted the government's legislation to control strip mining, given third reading Monday, will have to be updated next session.

The bills, amended along the lines recommended by the select legislature committee study, were described as only "a first step" by Opposition Leader Robert Strachan.

He said his party supported the legislation in the full knowledge that a year from now the legislation "will have to be updated to do the kind of job that's necessary."

Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) indicated his party did not find the bills as exacting in their requirements for reclaiming mined land as they might be.

He said it provided the government with tools to control devastation and if they didn't work it would be because of the inefficiency of the departments concerned.

CAN BE CORRECTED

"Any faults which do crop up can be corrected next session," he added.

Mines Minister Frank Richter introduced amendments giving the mining companies six months instead of three months to file plans for conserving and reclaiming the countryside at strip-mine sites.

New provisions were added for appeals, consultation between government departments and for increased deposits where reclamation is not to occur immediately.

The opposition continued its demands that a reclamation board, independent of the cabinet, be set up to police the bills — the Coal Mines Regulations Act and amendments to the Mines Regulations Act.

Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan said this would only increase bureaucracy while their departments and the mines department now have enough experts to handle the situation.

Cities to Handle Tenant Disputes

The provincial government's planned legislation to handle disputes between landlords and tenants turns the key over to municipal councils.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell Monday released draft legislation he said now is being circulated among municipal governments for comment.

It is enabling legislation which would permit municipal councils to set up a "rental accommodation grievance board" and pay for it out of the local budget.

The board will rule on the validity of any complaint dealing with either written leases or where lease are not in effect.

AREAS OF DISPUTE

Specified areas of dispute are:

The amount of time to be given as notice of a rent increase; the amount of time given notice to vacate either by tenant or landlord; the level of service and maintenance to be provided; conditions of entry for inspection of the premises by the landlord and any other conditions set by the local council.

The bill would provide payment of a maximum $25 a day for members of the grievance board who are not already council members.

Despite opposition efforts to get Campbell to say when such legislation is likely to be introduced, the minister would only say it will come in when local councils indicate they want it.

Norman Levi (NDP — Vancouver South) called the proposed bill "a pitiful document" in the face of what he described as "the rent-gouging now going on" in the province's major urban areas.

Levi said the legislation should be introduced now and be a starting point for more complete statute protection of tenants.

The exchange came as the house neared the end of debate on the municipal affairs department's estimated 55.9 million expenditures.

LEVI
... blast at welfare

'Stoned Coming, Going'

A social worker member of the NDP said Monday welfare recipients in Vancouver are arriving in taxis to collect their cheques.

"They are stoned when they arrive and stoned when they leave," said Norman Levi (NDP—Vancouver South).

The MLA was critical of both ends of the province's welfare setup as the house debated the $87.7 million social welfare department estimates.

Levi said there is too much needless bureaucracy in administration of the provincial program and added that no one is checking to see how the money handed out in the bi-weekly cheques is spent.

"Nobody seems to care what happens to these people when they leave the welfare office."

He charged that the system is driving good welfare social workers out of the field because they spend 80 per cent of their time doing nothing but clerical work.

Levi mentioned watching one administrator okay a requisition for a 25-cent tube of toothpaste.

The government was not getting down to the problem "of what's going on on the firing line."

He recommended an experiment: take one in every 10 families on welfare in a community, put them on a straight $3,000 or $4,000 annual income and see how they fare. Don't force them to account for every minor expenditure.

He said the present concentration on "accountability" is "crippling the system."

Grant Aids Research Into Emotional Ills

TORONTO (CP) — Prevention has proven at least as successful as cure in treating most physical diseases. Now a health unit in Ontario's Wellington County is taking the preventive approach in tackling children's emotional health.

That means tracing them back even prior to the crib stage.

Dr. B. T. Dale, medical officer and director of the Wellington-Dufferin-Guelph health unit, says authorities in many centres have found that emotional problems originate early in the child's life.

Behavioral abnormalities, he says, are detected in pre-school years—sometimes from birth.

"There is agreement among those professionally concerned," he says, "that we have been picking up these problems too late."

The first stage of the project—a two-year study period—has already started, with a $65,000 grant from the Ontario health department.

Mothers of children who enter school next fall are being interviewed on a wide range of subjects, including their health and happiness during pregnancy. They will be interviewed again when the children enter school, to see how this has affected the children. Six months later teachers will be asked to fill out a questionnaire about the children.

Mothers will be chosen from city, suburban and rural areas and computers will be used to analyse the information. The hope is that some common denominators will emerge to help predict which children are likely to have emotional problems later in life.

Then the psychologists will have to come up with a program, in which the schools can participate, to prevent these problems.

DEVELOPMENT FOR HOUSING WIDENED

A bill in the final stages of becoming law in the legislature will grant the B.C. Housing Authority power to acquire land to initiate housing developments.

It would increase the powers of the year-old authority to include powers to plan, construct, and manage any public housing project, to acquire and dispose of in its own name any lands required for public housing and land assembly, and acquire in its own name and sell housing to individuals.

The section is contained in the government's omnibus bill, a pot pouri of amendments to various statutes that cleared committee stage in the house Monday.

In explaining the section, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said that under the existing statute the authority was "married to land assembly initiated by municipalities."

Bill Would Seal Off Trust Act Loopholes

A bill to tighten up the B.C. Trust Companies Act was introduced in the legislature Monday by an opposition member.

Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby-Edmonds) said his proposal would close some of the loopholes revealed so far by the Commonwealth Trust Company situation.

He explained it would require trust companies to observe strictly the prohibitions against "insider" deals, provision of public audits and establishment of liability on directors for improvident decisions which now apply to all other companies under the Companies Act.

His amendments would make nine sections of the Companies Act applicable to trust companies and also specifically:

Prevent anyone becoming a trust company director if he already was a director of bank, another trust company or a loan company and also require trust company directors to buy at least $5,000 worth of paid-up shares in the trust company apiece;

Make directors liable to repayment of all moneys that "are paid out impairing the capital or rendering (the company) insolvent' unless they are on record as protesting the actions in question.

Japan Holds Trade Future For Canada

Japan will become Canada's most important trading partner within the next 15 years, Industrial Development Minister Waldo Skillings told Victoria Gyro Club on Monday.

He described Canada and Japan as "natural trading partners."

"We have everything that the Japanese want: coal, copper, timber and grain from the Prairies."

The minister said B.C. will have its own pavilion at the Osaka world's fair in 1970 due to the importance of Japanese trade. The pavilion will cost between $1.4 and $1.75 million, and its message will be "British Columbia is the land of the giant trees," he said.

Old Fire Truck Worth More Now Than in '50s

COWICHAN BAY — One of the oldest fire trucks still in operation on Vancouver Island will be offered for sale when its replacement arrives here soon.

The Cowichan Bay volunteer fire department's 1937 model Bickle Seagrave pumper was purchased in the mid-forties from Oak Bay for $500. Because of its good condition and antique value it is expected to be worth much more now.

Cowichan Bay is getting a new $20,000 Thibault fire truck for its 18-member brigade under Chief Gordon Price.

Bagpipe Greets McGregor On Sixtieth Anniversary

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Fred McGregor—A tall, slim version of the benevolent Mister Pickwick—was piped into the Georgian Lounge of the Empress Hotel Monday evening.

A gay company of men and women surged forward to greet him and the expressions of goodwill were Mutual.

Fred, the genial rhymester and general benefactor, was celebrating his 60th year with Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada.

The company gave a dinner in his honor and top executives from head office at Waterloo, Ont., came here to share in the testimonial.

Now 81, Fred retired as manager of the Victoria office 18 years ago but has continued ever since as a salesman, between bouts of service on welfare drives and as prime booster for the city.

"We are deeply proud of the role he has played in the life of this community," said Kenneth R. MacGregor, president of Mutual Life.

He added that, although their names were spelt differently, he hoped they came from the same ancestral tree.

SOME VERSES

"We have all benefitted from the goodwill that surrounds him," said G. T. Harris, vice-president (marketing), who is in charge of the company's field force.

N. E. McLeod, superintendent of agency operations, joined with Victoria manager James W. Peyton praising McGregor.

Fred responded with some of the verses he invents for every occasion.

Among the guests were his son, Malcolm, one of a company of famous bush pilots that included Punch Dickens, Ginger Coote and Grant McConachie. In 1954, on loan from Canadian Pacific, he founded and developed Pakistan International Air Lines.

Another honored guest was Fred's "kid" sister, Mrs. Anne Young.

Fred was presented with a set of photos of conventions he has attended over the past 50 years. He was piped to the head table by Doug Blackwell of Mutual Life.

NOEL
. . . leads ski debate

Elk Lake Skiing Controls Aired

Water ski enthusiasts turned out Monday night to defend their sport, and left a Saanich parks and outdoor recreation committee happy that they weren't banned.

Twenty - five persons jammed the small committee room and the forces for and against water skiing and motor boats ran the debate back and forth for 90 minutes.

The meeting was arranged after the issue was tabled in February when four aldermen voiced opposition to motor boats on Elk Lake.

The aldermen maintained their reservations, but agreed to authorize chairman Ald. William Noel to meet water ski official Grant Fenwick and parks administrator Bert Richman to see what kind of proposal they can bring forward for water skiing and an estimate of the cost of providing policing of the sport.

A police report read to the meeting mentioned only three complaints about boats last summer, one of them about a coxswain shouting "stroke" at 5 a.m.

It was said that regular patrols should confine water ski boats to their designated part of the lake.

DEFENDS SPORT

Speaking for water skiers, Gordon Campbell said there is seldom a large number of boats on the lake, he had never seen more than 15 at once, he had never seen a motor boat in the swimming area or swimmers in the water ski area and the noise was less than hundreds of swimmers and thousands of cars and trucks on the highway.

On the other side, Roy Wootten, appearing for the Elk Lake and Saanich Ratepayers' Association, said the biggest problem is water skiers themselves because they won't police each other's behavior.

He had lived near the lake for 43 years, had seen markers ignored by the majority of skiers, "bugging" of fishermen, chasing of wild life and even killing swans. Motorboats go into swimming areas and swimmers go outside their own area.

There was room on the lake for everyone "if all would co-operate."

MAIN PROBLEMS

Other speakers picked up the various points, and even agreed with the opposition at times. The main problem appeared to be getting a minority of water skiers to behave themselves and not have the majority banned because of them.

Ald. Noel, who summarized the various pros and cons of the issue, said he favors water skiing on Elk Lake provided:

- Skiing is restricted to designated areas (which it already is);
- Strict observance of Sunday starting times;
- Due regard for sailing and rowing craft and fishermen;
- More attention to the regulation stating there must be two persons in a boat for water skiing;
- Water skiers assist in the policing of their own groups;
- Any persistent violations could mean water skiing could be banned from the lake.

Earlier in the evening, Ald. Noel outlined preliminary discussions which are expected to lead to an upsurge in rowing and yachting activities on the lake.

JAPANESE EXHIBIT TO END IN SALE

A unique major sale of Japanese art, the first in Canada, began today at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

The project is the result of a chance conversation last summer held between gallery director Colin Graham and Prof. Toru Mori, who was here to study the gallery's oriental collection with his colleague, Bunzo Nakanishi of Kyoto.

Prof. Mori suggested it would be interesting to show the folk pottery of Japan and perhaps offer articles for sale. Graham eagerly accepted the offer.

The current show and sale, which will be staged for a week, is titled Springboard to Expo 70 and is sponsored by the gallery's women's committee.

Nakamishi supervised the project in Japan, travelling extensively for three months to assemble the 300 items in the show and sale.

He was assisted by the distinguished Japanese potter, Takeichi Kawai, a member of the National Mingei Society. Some of the famous potter's work is included in the exhibition.

In addition to the folk pottery (mingei), Nakanishi has also made a gift of a series of Japanese wood stencils of the 19th century. These were used for hand-printing on fabric.

The delicate patterns are cut into the stencil, which is made from wood laminated with glue from the persimmon tree.

Nakanishi is accompanied by his brother, Masakazu, a distinguished painter in oils.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

I would like to thank all our friends for kindnesses shown during my husband's illness and sympathy in our bereavement.—Gladys Mason and Sons.

9 IN MEMORIAM

LANDY — In loving memory of my dear wife, Gertie, who passed away April 1, 1967.
My lips cannot tell how I miss her,
My heart cannot tell what to say.
God alone knows how I miss her,
In a home that is lonesome today.
Always remembered by her loving husband W. H. (Bill) Landy, son, Larry and family and Bob.

Study of Man To Occupy Conference

Studies of man in a wide range of societies will be presented in Victoria this week at the 22nd annual Northwest Anthropological Conference.

Sessions will be held Thursday to Saturday, mainly in the Provincial Museum, with professors and students from the U.S. and Canadian Northwest delivering 45 papers.

Among titles of papers: "Myth and Reality in Class Mobility in Rural Taiwan" and "Heads I Win, Tails You Lose or—Sum Zero Games in Academia."

Co-hosts for the conference are the museum and the University of Victoria.

Speaker Thursday evening will be Dr. William Wilmott of the University of B.C., whose topic will be "What Is Anthropology For?"

Delegates will move to the university campus Saturday for the concluding session. Prizes will be awarded for the best student papers.

Conference registration is open to all at a cost of $2 or $1 for students.

Child 'Fair,' Semi-Conscious

Susan Bergman, eight, of 855 Richmond, is semi-conscious and in fair condition today Royal Jubilee Hospital officials reported.

She suffered head injuries March 20 when her bicycle struck a car on Rockland Avenue. She was unconscious for more than a week following the accident.

Project Rejected

OSOYOOS (CP)—The Osoyoos Indian Band has rejected an offer to develop summer cottage and motel sites and a golf course on 1½ miles of its valuable land fronting on Osoyoos Lake. Councillor Jane Stelkia said the offer from a group of businessmen included no guarantee of rent.

Treaty Asks Underground A-Test Ban

GENEVA (Reuters) — Sweden proposed today a treaty to outlaw underground nuclear tests with provisions for inspections by invitation.

Alva Myrdal, Swedish delegate to the 17-nation disarmament conference, introduced a draft treaty in the form of a working paper.

It would ban all underground nuclear blasts except those for construction or other peaceful purposes conducted under a separate international agreement.

The main stumbling block for past efforts to work out such a treaty was Soviet and U.S. differences on the need for on-site inspections.

Mrs. Myrdal's proposal would provide for an exchange of information if one country suspected another of violating the ban and for on-site inspections if the country concerned invited them.

Observers here doubt whether this would go far enough to meet American insistence on an annual quota of permitted inspections to check that no country was violating the ban.

Russia insists no on-site inspections are needed, saying modern seismic equipment can distinguish between underground tests and earthquakes.

If any country deemed information on a suspicious event was inadequate, the Swedish draft would permit it to inform the United Nations Security Council that the state in which the event occurred did not cooperate fully.

AUTORAMA FEATURES CARS AND FASHIONS

Fashions in clothes and cars will be on view when the Quarter Milers hold Autorama '69 at the Esquimalt Sports Centre. Here Heather Summers, Diane Summers and Sarah Harvey (from left) model some of the dresses from Kaleidoscope 9 that will be on view in the fashion show, a first for the Autorama. The car, once a 1928 Model T Ford pickup, now fondly called Winebarrel, is one of the many new cars, custom cars and motor bikes that will be on show. Winebarrel is owned by Barry Lehna and is being entered by Corona Stereo. The Autorama will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Fashions will be shown from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. Thursday and from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. Friday and Saturday. (Robin Clarke Photo)

Fought 17 Years to Free Husband

By SUSAN RILEY

Betty Ambatielos spent the better part of her married life—about 17 years—fighting to free her husband from a Greek jail.

He was finally released in 1963 and fled Greece with the help of the underground resistance recently. But her fight isn't over.

She's in Canada now on a speaking tour, addressing university audiences, trying to inform people about the "fascist government which has denied Greeks their freedom."

"I met political prisoners while I was in jail, many of our friends are still in prisons in Greece because of their political opinions. I cannot sit back," she said.

"Everyone in Greece is opposed to the military junta which overthrew the liberal government in Greece in April of 1967," she said.

"People believed that this sort of thing (the coup and dictatorship) only happen in South American countries. It's happening in Europe now.

"Greeks are very aware of their freedom. They are angry to find themselves under a gang of ridiculous but dangerous men."

Their anger has taken substantial form in the resistance movement which is spreading to factory workers and townspeople, she said.

"Nothing is going to break the Greeks' devotion to the idea of freedom. If countries like the United States support the junta and give them arms, then Greeks will take to armed struggle," she said.

"They don't want to fight. They've been in one civil war and it's a searing experience. But they love freedom."

Mrs. Ambatielos' particular concern is the fate of about 150 women now being held in concentration camps on the island of Crete.

Mr. and Mrs. Ambatielos

She was part of that group for six weeks after the junta's coup. During that time the women, political prisoners, were held with thousands of others in a football stadium. She was separated from the crowd and taken to a military prison camp.

After a few weeks she was freed and deported to her native England, thanks to the intercession of two British MPs.

Many of the women still being held after two years in these camps are "little more than hostages," she said. The rulers want their husbands.

"But Greek women, in spite of all the subtle intimidation they are subjected to, even those from peasant stock, see through the government's front. They will not renounce what they believe in or deny the real values," she said.

Her own refusal to renounce her belief in freedom and her political beliefs took dramatic form in her lengthy campaign to have her husband freed when, as a leading Greek Seamen's Union official, he was imprisoned in 1947.

For the next 17½ years he was in prisons in Greece and she saw him only three times.

She gained the support of some politicians in England and the sympathy of many political people of all persuasions.

Finally with the introduction of a liberal government in 1963 he was released, and was a member of the resistance for a few months after the junta in 1967.

Again he had to flee his country and Mrs. Ambatielos fled with him.

Since then they have toured West Germany, Scandinavia, England, and now Canada, trying to win moral and financial support for their struggle against the junta.

Mrs. Ambatielos and her husband Tony will speak at Central Junior Secondary School at 8 tonight on Human Rights and Political Oppression in Greece.

Their visit is sponsored by the Victoria International Studies Association.

Drinking, Smoking Riskier Than the Pill

By JANE BRODY

NEW YORK — Mrs. David G., a lithe 35-year-old brunette, began taking oral contraceptives after the birth of her third child. But now, two years later, she has given up the pill because, she says, "I became so irritable and depressed that my family couldn't live with me."

Mrs. Richard D., a young newlywed, became a pill dropout after she developed incapacitating headaches that had no other apparent cause.

Still another former pill user is Mrs. William F., 25. She explains: "I didn't have any problems with the pill, but I was worried about what might happen. My mother kept showing me articles about how dangerous it could be."

These women are typical of those who have become disenchanted with the pill. Nine million women are now taking oral contraceptives, making the pill the leading birth-control method in the nation today. But in recent years numbers of women have stopped taking them.

The actual number of pill dropouts cannot be determined. In the last nationwide survey, made in 1965, it was found that about one-third of the women who had started the pill had stopped using it. Birth-control experts believe that about one in three pill-takers are still dropping out after two years of use.

The survey was done by Dr. Charles Westoff of Princeton University and Dr. Norman Ryder of the University of Wisconsin under a contract with the United States Public Health Service. It indicated that about one-fifth of the dropouts had stopped taking the pill because they wanted to become pregnant or because they no longer needed contraception.

But 80 per cent of the women who discontinued the pill did so because they were uneasy about the method, worried by the "scare" reports, or plagued by annoying side effects.

Various reports have linked the pill to a long list of serious illnesses, among them blood clots, strokes, sight-threatening eye disease, sterility, diabetes-like upsets in sugar tolerance and even cancer.

How much validity have these reports? What has medicine learned about the side effects and diseases that have been associated with pill use? Is the woman who takes the pill risking her life for the surety and convenience of this method of contraception? If so, how great a risk is she taking?

Interviews with many physicians in the business of prescribing and studying oral contraceptives and a review of the medical literature have revealed that no definitive answers to these questions are currently available, but there are enough indications of problems associated with pill use to keep hundreds of researchers busy pursuing the answers.

Although most obstetricians consider oral contraceptives of minimal risk to most women, opinions about their safety vary widely from doctor to doctor.

Those who are far removed from prescribing oral contraceptives, such as cancer specialists and pharmacologists, tend to be more cautious and concerned than those who deal daily with women in need of effective contraception.

Dr. D. M. Potts, medical secretary of the International Planned Parenthood Federation, summarized general thinking among pill proponents when he pointed out that many aspects of social behavior, such as drinking and cigarette smoking, carry a much greater risk than the pill.

"From the point of view of the health of society," he said, "it would be more justifiable to have oral contraceptives in slot machines and restrict the sale of cigarettes to a medical prescription."

However, pill sceptics like Dr. Louis Lasagna, a noted pharmacologist from Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, hold that since the pill is not completely free of risk, it should be prescribed only for those women who are unable or unwilling to use mechanical contraceptive techniques effectively.

The most frequent difficulties surrounding the use of the pill involve the temporary side effects common to the first three months on the pill. Several of these effects—nausea, vomiting and breast tenderness—represent the body's adjustments to the pseudopregnancy induced by the hormones in oral contraceptives.

Considering the risk of pregnancy associated with other contraceptive techniques, Potts concludes that "a woman who takes oral contraceptives has more chance of being alive one year later than her sisters who chose to have a baby or use some other form of contraception."

Passing Train Solves Problem

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: What advice have you for a 22-year-old girl who's pretty and smart, but lives in a small town with snobbish people who won't let her forget that she lives on the wrong side of the tracks? — NO FUTURE.

DEAR NO: The next time the train comes through, get on it.

DEAR ABBY: If there isn't an organization called "RELIGIOUS FANATICS ANONYMOUS" there ought to be. I am serious. My husband is a real nut on religion. Now I go to church, too, and I think everyone should go once a week, but my husband LIVES at church. He runs there before he goes to work every morning, and when he comes home late from work I know he's stopped in at church again. I wonder what he has done that his conscience bothers him so much. This man has got to be the world's champion sinner.

I keep telling him he is going to wear his knees out, and he says I'm nagging him.

What do you say, Abby? How much church is enough? — FANATIC'S WIFE.

DEAR WIFE: Let each man decide for himself how much "church" is enough.

DEAR ABBY: Hooray for the woman who admitted her error in naming her son "Junior" and had to suffer through the "Big Bob" and "Little Bob" syndrome.

Now, what can be done about people who mark their progeny with William Williams, John John, Robert Roberts, Ima Ford, or Ima Anything?

Oh, well, one of my ancestors, Temperance Cooper married Pleasant Loving, which didn't seem to hinder future development of the line. Who knows what another union like that could accomplish? Yours truly — CAROLYN COOPER IVEY.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1.00 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069.

VISITOR FROM ENGLAND

Mrs. Barbara Cooper, a social worker, spent 10 years in Nigeria helping set up a home training centre for girls. The wife of the Very Rev. Alan Cooper, Dean of Bradford Cathedral in Yorkshire, Mrs. Cooper also has done social work in South Africa and southern India. She comes to Victoria from Jamaica and is now visiting Canon C. P. Bishop and Mrs. Bishop. She has encountered great interest about Nigeria and Biafra in her travels here. The civil war, she said has interferred with a building boom which was making the African country one of the most progressive anywhere. (Robin Clarke Photo)

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Now Nibble and Reduce!

There are a few comparatively new ideas about nutrition and reducing which have come along in recent years. One I call "scientific nibbling."

Lowman

The idea is to eat the same amount of food but to divide it into smaller portions for five or six meals a day rather than the usual three. Experiments seem to indicate that many women reduce more successfully with this plan.

Aside from any biologic aspects, I can see why this would take some of the sting out of a reducing diet. If you eat periodically at close intervals, even a small amount, this keeps hunger under control. Also many overweights got that way by nibbling unscientifically. Therefore this plan soothes that psychological urge.

TWO DANGERS

If you are going to adopt the nibbling method let me warn you about two dangers. Unless you choose your nibbles carefully, just as you would the items in your three meals, you are very likely to do one of two things, and maybe both.

You may consume a diet which is unsound nutritionally. You are apt to miss some of the essential foods. Do not nibble indiscriminately for the reason I have just mentioned and also for another. If you are careless about the nibbles you are almost certain to go over your allowable calorie intake. What appears so small may count up real big in calorie count.

It is a well-known fact that persons who live alone are prone to be malnourished. The reason is plain. Many women feel there isn't much incentive to prepare a lovely meal just for oneself. Scientific nibbling might be helpful in this situation. However, this should be used only as a temporary measure.

It gives the woman living alone a psychological lift, which she needs, to sit down to a well-prepared and attractive meal. The person who cooks for just one has learned many tricks. One of them is to cook enough of any favorite item for several meals and freeze what she does not eat for future use.

However this also has its hazards. An acquaintance of mine who is just becoming accustomed to living alone told me how this backfired on her. She prepared a delicious casserole dish and made enough for two. She intended to freeze the second half, but she laughed as she admitted that it was so good she ate all of it at one time.

So, remember these warnings if you live alone or if you decide to adopt the five or six-meal plan.

Red Roses and Silver Bowl Given Curling Club Member

The Victoria Curling Club, Evening Ladies, presented life member Mrs. Jessie Ledinham with a silver rose bowl and a dozen red roses as recognition of the many things she had done for the group over the years when they held their annual banquet recently.

Ada Fuller was elected president for the upcoming season. Also on the executive are Kay Trevelyan, first-vice president; Claire Duncan, second-vice president; Mary Wilkinson, third-vice president; Dorothy Cheesman, secretary; Ruth Oster, zone representative; Sadie Campbell and Nan Painton, co-chairmen of ways and means.

The Walter Knight trophy was won by Helen Edwards with Edna Messum, Sheilah Manifold and Doris Nordlinger.

CHAMPIONSHIP

The Club Championship went to Verle McKeown with Florence Morrison, Peggy Levins and Sarah McRae. Runners-up were Claire Duncan with Cora Treby, Maude McGillvary and Jenny Bondeson.

The seven-ender went to Flora Martin with Joy Parsons, Ella MacDonald and Ann Snowden.

Marion Smith received the Silver Shield Award, given to the member who unselfishly furthers the good fellowship of curling and upholds the responsibilities invested in her.

Way-Out Mathilda Drives Penny Wild

By PENNY SAVER

The doorbell rang and a moment later Mathilda came bounding in. "Greetings Saver, P.," she called. "How do you groove my new threads?" My rubber gloves went completely limp with surprise. "Mathilda?" I ventured shakily. Her greying hair had been loosed from its usual bun and was flowing around her shoulders in the style favored by the white goddess-queens of old Tarzan movies. Paisley bell-bottoms flapped around her square-toed granny shoes with their chunky heels while her wide-sleeved, big collared man-styled shirt was titivated with a wide tie and a well-fitted paisley vest. Since the day was chilly she had topped this with a finger-tip cape in bright red. "Come and see my wheels," she gurgled.

"Wheels?" I murmured weakly as I was dragged toward the door. "Like, you know, wheels, rod, iron. In your square jargon — car." Perhaps Mathilda called it a car, but I'm not so sure. It was bright purple with the front taken apart so you coud see the chromed motor. I could see her point about the wheels though — they were almost as big as the car and so wide they stuck out the sides. To top it all off, the "whatever one calls it" was canted at a sharp angle, back high in the air and nose pointed toward the ground. "Twenty-five coats of hand-rubbed lacquer," declared Mathilda proudly, stroking a bumper. "And inside, Penny, look inside." I did and wished I hadn't. The seats were covered in a spotted fabric and as I leaned through the window, wondering what could have happened to my aunt, I began to fall through a spotted space until I landed with a gentle plop on my bed. Faintly I heard the children laughing and the familiar cry of "April Fool!"

Ironing Board Saver

All fooling aside, I found a little item for 98 cents that can be an ironing board saver. This is an iron rest that will do either for steam or regular irons though as it is made of metal it would have to be used with care if your iron is coated with one of the new non-stick finishes. This iron rest is lined with asbestos to keep the heat from reaching the cover and has holes in it to let the steam circulate. It has folding legs that set the rest at an angle so the steam is not trapped in any way while a generous ledge at the base of the rest keeps the iron from sliping. The rest can also be put flat on the board without fear of scorching the cover.

Ironing board cover fasteners are sure to make ironing day a little brighter. These are sturdy double-pronged hooks attached to strong springs that hold the cover taut and keep it from wrinkling up. Made of gold-colored metal they will not interfere with opening and closing the legs of a folding ironing board. They will fit any size board and are easy to install. A package containing five clips is 49 cents.

Please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. if you would like information on this column.

Anglican Addresses UCW Group

A representative of Anglican Church Women, Miss Ruth Scott, addressed the United Church Women's Victoria Presbyterial meeting recently.

She told the group that there must be 75 per cent acceptance by both Anglican and United churches before union is possible.

She also emphasized the necessity of dropping sixteenth century language and adopting English in sermons, readings and prayers.

Miss Muriel Bissel who has worked in Zambia for four years also addressed the meeting. She discussed progress being made in Africa and displayed authentic African artifacts and costumes.

Doubtful Shrubs Awaken

By HILDA BEASTALL

When the horse-chestnut trees show swelling buds we know spring is well on the way. This past week many sure signs are visible and audible. Shrubs which we thought beyond reclaim after winter hardships are showing lively renewal, and the frog chorus is noisy in every piece of swampy ground.

Hilda

During the next two weeks we should be able to decide on the pruning necessary for those shrubs so doubtful until now.

Escallonia rubra, with deep rose colored flowers and dark green evergreen leaves, seems to be completely lost to ground level, and may as well be cut back now.

After other hard winters it has recovered by putting out new growth from the old root, so if you can bear to wait, leave the root in and see what happens.

The scented apple-blossom pink and white Escallonia Donard Seedling is suddenly recovering, and in spite of all the dry brown leaves it has new green at every leaf axil.

This shrub always puts on a magnificent display in early June. If lacking this year, the effort may be made in late summer as new growths ripen since we always enjoy a scattering of flowers on new tips about that time.

Another escallonia is the scarlet C. F. Ball, with a quite different habit to the others.

Thin twiggy growth makes it a rather untidy shrub, for the brilliant scarlet blossoms come on the ends of previous year's growth so they cannot be cut off until after blooming.

It is difficult to see what this shrub is going to do, but the next couple of weeks should give us clues.

Other doubtfuls will also become certainties one way or the other.

SUPER-SIZE pair of military transport aircraft are shown at Lockheed-Georgia Co., Marietta, Ga., where C-5 was put together. One 250-foot craft looms large in foreground at the end of taxi run, while sister ship takes off. Planes are among world's largest, having wingspan of 233 feet and tail assembly 65 feet high. They are capable of flying 220,000 pounds—110 tons—of supplies and material up to 3,105 miles. (CP Photo)

Bearded Social Worker Ombudsman to Ojibways

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress has provided 2,000 Indians with their own ombudsman, a bearded six-footer named Patrick Kerwin.

A master of social work in community organization and development from the University of Toronto, Mr. Kerwin has been working since last June among Ojibway Indians on eight reserves in the Kenora area of northwestern Ontario.

His work is described in Canadian Labor, the CLC's magazine.

Mr. Kerwin's task is to help the Indians assert their rights and ultimately to work himself out of a job by teaching them to use their own organized strength to accomplish the same objectives. His project is sponsored by the CLC's human rights committee.

He serves an area 100 by 50 miles which includes the Whitedog, Grassy Narros, Shoal Lake, Whitefish Bay, Sabaskong, Northwest Angle, Wabigoo and Couchiching reserves.

The only available employment is seasonal: Trapping, guiding, some commercial fishing, blueberry picking, some roadwork, and picking wild rice.

LISTS ACHIEVEMENTS

A. R. Gibbons, chairman of the CLC human rights committee, told a December, 1968, meeting of the congress executive council that Mr. Kerwin had:

—Helped get increased police protection for Indians on the Whitedog reserve, where fighting sometimes broke out among rival families.

—Had the hourly payments for Indians laying gravel on reserve roads raised to $1.75 a yard from 50 cents.

—Obtained back wages of $275 withheld from Indian guides by operators of private tourist camps.

—Established effective liaison with the Kenora-Keewatin and District Labor Council which has since appointed a human rights committee.

—Helped the Indians in their negotiations with federal and provincial government officials to obtain promised grants and loans for a co-operative store and trailer park.

—Successfully negotiated with federal and provincial officials to raise funds for a dam to control water levels in an inlet on the Whitedog reserve where the Indians harvest wild rice.

SHUN CITY LIFE

Born in St. Catharines, Ont., Mr. Kerwin did his field work as a social-work student at St. Christopher House, a settlement house in downtown Toronto where his job was organizing public-housing tenants to get action on their complaints.

His second-year field work was spent with the social planning council of Metropolitan Toronto. He married Anna Bernardo two weeks after starting his present job and his bride returned to Kenora with him.

Mr. Kerwin is quoted as saying: "Most Indians don't want to leave the reserve, and many of those who do, return.

They can't cope with city life and they don't want to. What's more, they're really not accepted, except as cheap labor."

It was significant that virtually no Indians were employed in the pulp mills — the principal industry of Kenora, a town of about 12,000 people with another 2,000 in its suburbs.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Mountie Ignored April Fool Order

By BOB BOWMAN

North West Mounted Police Colonel Herchmer must have thought it was an April Fool's Day joke in 1885 when he received an order from General Frederick Middleton to march from Regina to Battleford with 50 men. In any case he disobeyed the order, an unheard of action in the history of the NWMP.

Bowman

The Northwest Rebellion had begun on March 26 when Metis led by Louis Riel and Gabriel Dumont killed 12 police. Then the Indians had gone on the warpath, and occupied the town of Battleford, led by Chiefs Poundmaker, Little Pine, and Strike-Him-on-the-Back.

The 500 inhabitants of Battleford left their homes and took refuge in the police barracks.

Canada rushed 3,000 soldiers from the east, using the partially built CPR as far as Qu'Appelle. It was necessary to march from there to Batoche, 200 miles north.

The force was commanded by a British officer, General Middleton, who had little respect for the Canadian militia, or the police officers who had experience on the Prairies.

Colonel Herchmer knew he could not get from Regina to Battleford with 50 men. It was a distance of more than 200 miles, and only half his men were mounted.

They could not carry enough supplies for the journey. They would also have to ford the Saskatchewan River, in spring flood, and would be easy targets for Poundmaker's Indians. So he refused to go.

It was fortunate that he did because Middleton revised his plans, and divided the force that had been destined for Calgary and Edmonton.

Half the men were detrained at Swift Current so they could go overland and relieve Battleford. They were commanded by Colonel William Otter who became more famous later as leader of Canadian forces in the South African War.

Colonel Herchmer and his 50 men joined Otter's force, and were able to break the siege of Battleford on April 26, after a gruelling march.

Other events on April 1:

1684—Royal edict issued at Quebec that Canadians attempting to go to Albany or Manhattan would be put to death.

1734—First lighthouse in Canada went into operation at Louisburg. Post road was opened between Montreal and Quebec.

1818—Chambly-St. John, Quebec, canal incorporated.

1873—Post office savings banks opened.

1873—White Star liner "Atlantic" sank off Halifax with loss of 560 lives.

1882—A leprous Chinaman was hanged and partially burned by his own countrymen at New Westminster.

1909—Alberta coal miners went on strike until June 30.

1924—Royal Canadian Air Force was organized.

1938—Trans-Canada Airlines (now Air Canada) began passenger service between Vancouver and Winnipeg. Service to Montreal was completed one year later.

1954—Woodside, at Kitchener, Ontario, early home of William Lyon Mackenzie King, became a national historic site.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Cathy Elizabeth Woods, age 10, of Timmonsville, South Carolina, for her question:

What is an alpine glacier?

Glaciers come in assorted shapes and sizes — but all of them are fields of frozen snow. Some bury the polar regions under thick, massive ice caps and some spread over the plains at the feet of lofty mountain ranges. Others form long tongues of ice in the high valleys and gorges of mountainous regions. All glaciers have rugged surfaces and all of them are on the move.

Strictly speaking, an alpine glacier is a valley glacier. This may be misleading because we tend to think that valleys are long ditches, either in the level plains or at the feet of tall mountains. It is true that most of the valleys we know are of this type. But mountain climbers know that there are numerous valleys high among the lofty peaks of the mountains. As a rule, the steep sides of the pointed peaks are grooved with deep canyons and gorges. There are more of these lofty mountain valleys between one jagged peak and the next.

This is where we find most of the world's valley glaciers. Some people call them alpine glaciers because there are so many of them among the steep-sided peaks of the Alps in Central Europe. At least 1,200 alpine-valley glaciers have been counted in the Alps. There are more of them in our lofty northwestern mountains, especially in Alaska, and others in the Andes of Peru. There are also valley glaciers in Tibet between the mighty peaks of the high Himalayas.

Ice Cracks

Glacial ice is actually a rocky mineral, but it is very weak and fragile. Any glacier that is 200 to 300 feet thick cannot support its own weight. It cracks and bends and moves somewhat like a lazy river — in fact, a valley glacier is actually a frozen river. The slope of the valley gorge guides it downhill. In the Alps, some of the glaciers creep down at a rate of one foot a day. When summer comes to Alaska, some of the valley glaciers glide downhill at 40 feet a day or even faster.

Ice, of course, melts when the temperature rises above freezing point. In torrid and temperate zones, the weather is warm high up the mountain slopes. This causes the lower tips of valley glaciers to start melting far up in the mountains. Chilly streams and ice waterfalls come gushing down to the base of the slopes and wander away as rivers. In polar regions, through much of the year even the lowlands are icy cold. There the valley glaciers stay frozen and spread their ice over the lowlands. They form piedmont glaciers, shaped like covered frypans. The valley glaciers that feed them look like panhandles.

All glaciers have rough, cruel surfaces cracked with treacherous crevasses, sometimes several hundred feet deep. But valley glaciers are beautiful to behold, especially when seen from afar. They hang like white streamers between the dark rugged peaks. In the sunshine they sparkle like glittering jewels. A closer view shows that the snow white streamers have frayed edges. Feathery fingers of ice come down to join them from smaller gorges higher up the slopes.

Andy sends a World Book Globe to Jeremy Herda, age 7, of Spokane, Washington, for his question:

How are monkeys different from humans?

Some people think that monkeys look a little like humans. And some humans know for sure that certain people, old and young, sometimes behave like monkeys. But we should not pay serious heed to these likenesses. Actually, the differences between monkeys and humans are so great that we cannot compare them. One big difference is in the mind. No monkey could ever, ever understand the wonderful things that go on in the mind of a man. A human being is a top-notch thinker who can reason things out, make decisions and choices and solve problems. A monkey has a smidgeon of smartness, but he could never have tried, as the human race has, to remodel the whole world to suit himself.

And humans have an even greater gift that sets them apart from all of nature's animals. We can stand back, so to speak, and behold ourselves. We can examine the deeds we do and decide whether they are right or wrong. We can say no to ourselves when we want to be foolish. No monkey, no other animal can understand the human conscience or share the range of human feelings.

L.A. Has Oil Well Downtown

By JOSEPH A. ST. AMANT

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The California gold rush is a thing of the past but the great oil rush is still going strong. It even has hit the downtown civic centre in the nation's third largest city.

A wildcat rig — a 110-foot tower — has been built on the city's skyline atop Bunker Hill, hard by the harbor freeway.

There was nothing sudden about the appearance of the tower, but it seemed that way to some civic-minded persons who complained about its unsightly presence.

The rig is an eyesore when viewed against the background of the glittering new water and power building and the stately music centre.

The tower was erected on private property by Signal Oil and Gas Co., which leased rights from the city and county for slant drilling under city hall and other public buildings.

EMBARRASSED

Drilling will penetrate to a depth of 5,000 to 6,000 feet. Company officials, somewhat embarrassed over the furore caused by their well, promised it would be only temporary. They are conducting explorations under permits good for only 60 days.

If the company strikes oil in sufficient quantities to make a profitable production well under the government buildings, the drill site could be covered with something more esthetic in the way of housing. There is a precedent for this — another oil company has surrounded a well with a building in the downtown area.

Arthur Spaulding, city petroleum administrator, said:

LOOK ELSEWHERE

"If Signal finds something handsome — something of production value — it will have to look elsewhere for a permanent drilling site."

The company was careful to set up the rig as quietly as possible. "The drilling has been soundproofed and from a noise standpoint it's quieter than the environment," the company spokesman said. "The freeway — right there — produces much more noise."

There is oil under downtown. A field is in operation not far away on the eastern side of the civic centre and has attracted no special attention.

B.C. Farmer Sends Cows To Cuba

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Dairy farmer Michael Kournossoff, 65, has bought 35 purebred Holstein heifers and a yearling bull as a gift to the children of Cuba.

"This is how I believe I can help the children of the country," he said. The gift is in memory of his wife Gwen, who died in 1964, two years after they visited Cuba.

He and Mrs. Kournossoff, who was dying of cancer at the time, visited Cuba for two months at the request of the Cuban government to give advice no the handling of dairy cattle.

He hopes to ship the 33 head of Holsteins, none from his own herd of 50, to Montreal about April 14. The Cuban government will take over from there.

He said the Cuban government is continually trying to improve its dairy industry to fulfill its promise to continue providing children with a bottle of milk a day.

Mr. Kournossoff, who once owned the highest - producing herd of Jerseys in Canada, said the gift has nothing to do with politics, but is "a desire to do something for human beings."

Long-Hair Hater Scalps Teenager

TORONTO (CP) — Michael McGrath, 17, underwent skin grafts to his scalp Sunday because a stranger said his hair was too long—and hacked it off with a hunting knife.

The youth was admitted to hospital Saturday suffering from shock and a lacerated scalp.

He told police the stranger picked him up as he was hitchhiking home from his girl friend's house early Saturday.

He said the man first drove the wrong way and began talking about Michael's blond hair. The man stopped the car and began slashing at his hair with a hunting knife.

The youth staggered from the car and escaped.

Mrs. P. J. McGrath said her son's hair was "not really long—about four inches all around."

Police have seized a car, hunting knife and some raggedly-cut blond hair and are hunting for a man.

Anti-Missile Campaign Gaining Strength in U.S.

TRIO RELATES SPACE HOOK-UP

First-hand accounts of the recent dangerously-complicated lunar module mission is given today in The Times by the three U.S. astronauts who carried it out successfully.

Below, Russell Schweickart, 33, the only civilian and youngest of the trio, describes the overwhelming experience of standing outside the module in the awesome silence of outer Space.

On Page 7, Commander James McDivitt relates how tricky it was to steer the lunar module, while David Scott tells of the suspenseful time he had behind the controls of the command ship as he waited for the module to hook up.

He Stood in Awe At 17,000 MPH

By RUSSELL SCHWEICKART

In addition to the usual patches, pins and souvenirs which everybody takes up there, I had taken along copies of about 20 quotations I liked: From John and Robert Kennedy, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Thornton Wilder, Isaiah and some others.

It seemed important to have these glimpses of truth with me.

I was to do extra-vehicular activity (EVA)—to get outside the spacecraft — and I wanted very much to have a private moment then, to invite the beauty of that spectacle to penetrate the layer of my more immediate concern and responsibility.

But when I finally stood there on the "porch" of the LM, the quotations didn't spring into my mind, individually or collectively. So in that private moment I had to summom them up deliberately but it was an act on my part.

The visiual sensation you get from doing EVA is an overwhelmingly emotional experience. The intensity of the colors: it was just past sunrise, and I was out there looking up over the LM toward the Command Module into the richest black you ever saw.

Separating that fantastic sky and the Pacific Ocean was an intense, almost irridescent band of blue which formed the horizon.

The words to describe what you see just aren't there. I wasn't conscious of catching my breath or gasping; I was just overwhelmed by the beauty of it all.

Then there was the silence, and that has to be explained. I had the headset on, and everybody was talking.

Yet between those bits and pieces of conversation I was standing out there and aware of the fact that I was going 17,000 mph. Not because things were flashing by, as they do when you travel at high speeds in a car, but I did realize how high I was and was aware of the earth passing underneath.

And it was so quiet.

I really wished that I could turn off the radio and just listen to that silence. Of course in a vacuum there can't be a sound, but that silence penetrates.

I was out there for only 40 minutes. We had planned to be out for two hours, but we had trouble getting everything ready for the day's work. We always found ourselves behind at the beginning of every day.

We hadn't anticipated the mobility problem of getting into our suits before going into the LM. We had to suit up one at a time, staying out of each other's way, and the whole task took me 20 or 25 minutes, about twice what we had counted on.

We were all concerned that on the rendezvous day we might start out again behind the planned time line.

So we decided to wake up an hour earlier than planned. This meant an hour less of precious sleep unless we cut the EVA short. We left it up to Houston, and when they suggested terminating it early we all agreed.

Rescuers Abandon Hope For 178 in Mine

MUZQUIZ, Mexico (CP)—All hope was abandoned today for 178 miners trapped underground when a gas explosion ripped through a coal mine near this northern village.

Fourteen bodies were recovered and an official of the Red Cross, which is co-ordinating rescue efforts, said there was no hope of any survivors.

Of the 14 bodies recovered so far, 13 were of miners trapped near the mouth of the mine when fire-damp gas exploded and sealed off the two main shafts.

The other was of a man living nearby who rushed into the pit mouth in search of a missing relative and was overcome by fumes.

A Red Cross official said: "There can be no hope of any survivors—the shafts are filled with poisonous carbon monoxide gas."

The company is Altos Hornos de Mexico.

LITTLE HOPE

Dr. J. Ramos, director of the nearby Sabinas Red Cross Hospital, said he had little hope that any of the men survived.

"After the explosion they could have died from suffocation, toxic poisoning or burning," he said.

Some rescue officials expressed a hope of reaching some of the trapped men in 72 hours, but the mine tunnels were a shambles and rescue officials said it may be as long as 15 days before men could dig down to reach all of the victims.

FAMILIES RIOT

Troops were rushed in to control victims' families who rioted at the tunnel entrances. The crowds calmed down later.

The mine is at Barroteran, with a population of 8,000 people, about 75 miles southwest of the Texas border town of Eag the Texas border town of Eagle Pass.

"It was a tremendous explosion, blowing parts of the mine entrance into the air," said Dr. Emilio Lopez of the Barroteran hospital, who witnessed the blast. "We have no injured. They were either all killed at the entrance or trapped below. The lucky ones had left.

"They were able to take out the bodies of some of the dead miners because they were on their way up and near the exit." The mining company is one of Mexico's biggest coal producers.

MONTREAL BOMBER GIVEN LIFE TERM

MONTREAL (CP)—Terrorist bomber Pierre-Paul Geoffroy was sentenced today to life imprisonment for his active part in 31 recent bombing incidents in the Montreal area.

Geoffroy listened impassively, his arms folded across his chest, to the 20-minute judgment read by Chief Judge Andre Fabien of Sessions Court.

Judge Fabien said he was sentencing Geoffroy to life imprisonment on 124 charges stemming from 31 incidents—making bombs, placing bombs and conspiracy to make and place bombs.

Under terms of the law, Geoffroy could be paroled after serving seven years.

Kennedy Active In Protest Move

By WARREN UNNA

WASHINGTON (WP)—A nation-wide opposition movement to the Nixon administration's go-ahead on the safeguard anti-ballistic missile deployment suddenly is springing up.

SEN. KENNEDY
... leads critics

Some of it is centreing around Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D—Mass.); some of it around bi-partisan New York congressmen; some of it is coming from the Harvard-M.I.T. professors; and some of it is attempting to capture the grass roots college enthusiasm which last year fastened on the anti-Vietnam protest of Sen. Eugene McCarthy (D-Minn).

Kennedy has been by far the most active in this new fight against the ABM. And there is strong indication that it will not be confined to just defeating this year's safeguard appropriation requests by the administration, but to the overall priority military demands now should have in competition with pressing domestic needs.

NON-PARTISAN

Kennedy's aides insist the opposition is strictly on an issue and strictly non-partisan. But it coincides with a decision by the Democratic Party's potential presidential candidate to return to the banquet circuit of cross-country speechmaking beginning this month.

And Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky.), as avid as Kennedy in opposing the ABM, is warning that if the movement does become partisan and anti-Nixon he is going his own way.

The anti-ABM movement is taking many forms in many locales. The main ones are:

● A move by Sens. Kennedy, Cooper, Charles H. Percy (R-Ill.) and Philip A. Hart (D-Mich.) to form what tentatively is being called a "National Committee for Common Sense" led by perhaps 10 impeccable authorities from science, business, the ex-military, Negro and women's groups.

● A document, at last count 400 pages, requested by Kennedy from some 16 scientists, mainly in the Cambridge locale, which is to be completed within the next week or two and made available to a Congress confronted with Pentagon ABM authorization and appropriations requests.

● The grass roots movement, led by two associates of the Kennedy family political machine, Richard N. Goodwin and William Vanden Heuvel, which is centered in New York and now beginning to send out mail urging the establishment of community anti-ABM protest groups.

● A strictly New York coalition movement led by Rep. Jonathan B. Bingham, a Bronx Democrat, who hopes to run for the senate next year, and Rep. Ogden R. Reid, Westchester County Republican which already has a public relations firm engaged in putting out pamphlets, issuing press statements and keeping the home telephones ringing.

Pakistan Demands UN Action

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Pakistan demanded today that the United Nations Security Council condemn Israel anew despite the threat it might split the Big Four on the eve of private talks on Middle East peace.

Ambassador Agha Shahi of Pakistan formally introduced an Asian-African resolution asking condemnation for the Israeli attack on a Jordanian village last Wednesday.

He said the resolution represented the maximum compromise possible with the major powers on the council.

Shahi said the sponsors wanted to avoid division among the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France and thus went to greater lengths than the sponsors would have otherwise done.

But he added that the situation had deteriorated in the Middle East to the point where another condemnation resolution aimed at Israel was needed.

REVISIONS SOUGHT

The U.S. and Britain sought to persuade the sponsors to water down the resolution so that it would include mention of Arab guerrilla raids as well as retaliatory strikes by Israel.

The U.S. and Britain were believed likely to abstain on the resolution, while the Soviet Union would vote for it. The position of France was uncertain.

Robichaud Seeks New Ottawa Aid

FREDERICTON (CP)—In the midst of a flurry of protests over increased taxes, Premier Louis J. Robichaud of New Brunswick has appealed to the federal government for help.

The premier announced in the legislature Monday he has asked Ottawa for an "immediate and urgent" federal-provincial conference on finances.

Earlier Monday, the premier met demonstrators from Saint John, N.B., who presented him with a three-page brief asking for a reduction in provincial programs to cut tax increases.

It was the second group to come to the capital to protest the tax raises announced in Finance Minister L. G. Desbrisay's budget for 1969-1970.

The first group, from Moncton, N.B., received a brusque reception from the premier last Thursday.

However, he said Monday's delegation presented a fair brief and represented a definite segment of the public opinion.

LEADS DELEGATION

Paul Gordon, chairman of the Saint John Save New Brunswick Committee, led the delegation.

The brief he presented asked the premier to either find some means of lowering the recently-announced tax raises or "resign and allow the people to decide by an election who is capable of managing the affairs of our province."

While the delegation met the premier, a crowd of about 200 demonstrators outside the legislature building waved banners and called for his resignation.

Repeated attempts by the demonstrators to enter the building were foiled by 20 RCMP officers.

Criticism of the tax increases were also voiced Monday by members of the legislature. Claude Taylor (PC—Albert) said New Brunswick was probably the highest taxed area of North America.

Lawrence Garvie (PC—Fredericton) called for a full disclosure of the province's financial situation.

He said Finance Minister DesBrisay referred to his budget which brought a $29,400,000 increase in taxes, as anti-inflationary.

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The train bearing the body of Dwight David Eisenhower rumbled across the face of America today, carrying to a modest resting place the man who once led the world's mightiest nation and commanded the most awesome military machine ever assembled.

"I come from the heart of America," he liked to say of his boyhood in Kansas, and it is to that geographic centre of the United States he is returning.

The nation's capital bade farewell at sundown Monday as Eisenhower's coffin was placed on baggage car No. 314 for the 30-hour, 1,379-mile trip home to Abilene.

Earlier, Palm Sunday crowds had shuffled past his bier in an all-night procession through the great marble rotunda of the Capitol building. It was on this spot that Eisenhower had twice been sworn in as Republican president—in 1952 and in 1956.

But Monday bloomed bright and sunny, if unseasonably cold, for the funeral procession and service that brought together, in the National Cathedral, representatives of more than 120 nations among the 2,107 invited guests.

Prime Minister Trudeau headed the four-man delegation representing the people and government of Canada. He placed a wreath at the bier.

With Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, John Diefenbaker who was Conservative prime minister part of the time Eisenhower was in the White House, and Gen. Jean V. Allard, chief of the defence staff, the prime minister later attended a White House reception for visiting dignitaries.

MOVES TO STATION

Finally, as the setting sun cast long shadows across the city, the hearse carrying Ike's body in a standard $80 army coffin moved down the great avenues and into Union Station.

There it was placed aboard the black-draped, 10-car train and began the long journey home. At the rear came Eisenhower's private car, now occupied by his widow, Mamie, 72, still composed but visibly shaken.

Clusters of people gathered by the railway tracks in the night to pay final homage to the man they knew as "Ike."

At midnight tonight the funeral train will reach Abilene.

The burial, beside his first son who died in infancy, will be Wednesday in the Eisenhower Centre, a memorial library and chapel built on a cornfield.

President Nixon, the political heir whom Eisenhower lived to see in the White House at last, will fly here for the final services.

Nixon was blinking back tears as he left the train station in Washington Monday after the flag-covered coffin was carried aboard the funeral car.

Nixon led the great of the world at the state funeral in Washington National Cathedral.

CONDUCTS THE SERVICE

"The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord," intoned Very Rev. Francis B. Sayre Jr., dean of the cathedral and grandson of another president, Woodrow Wilson.

6.3 Per Cent Profit Made

OTTAWA (CP) — Air Canada had a net income of $8,184,000 in 1968, the sixth consecutive year in which it has shown a profit, Transport Minister Paul Hellyer announced Tuesday.

The Crown-owned airline will need more than $300,000,000 in outside financing, however, to buy new equipment and property in the next five years, it was stated in the company's annual report tabled by Mr. Hellyer in the Commons.

The 1968 profit was the 15th for the airline in the last 18 years. It signified a return on investment of 6.3 per cent.

Comparable results for 1967, the Centennial Year, were a profit of $3,547,000 and an investment return of 5.2 per cent.

Passenger traffic growth was described as modest in 1968, compared with the sharp increase experienced in 1967.

Massive Sweep By U.S. Troops

SAIGON (AP) — Thousands of helicopter-borne United States air cavalrymen are pursuing an estimated 7,500 troops of two North Vietnamese divisions through the Viet Cong War Zone C, military spokesmen said today.

The air cavalrymen are chasing the North Vietnamese 1st and 7th Divisions, which are believed to have pulled back into the jungles of northern Tay Ninh province near the Cambodian border after eluding a 10,000-man American sweep called Operation Atlas Wedge.

Atlas wedge was conducted in the Michelin rubber plantations in the southern half of Tay Ninh province, 45 miles northwest of Saigon. The new drive is called Montana Scout. Spokesmen said it is about half the size of Atlas Wedge.

Military analysts said the retreat of the two North Vietnamese divisions into War Zone C was part of a general withdrawal forced on them by heavy losses suffered in their five-week-old offensive. The Viet Cong's 9th Division, which is supposed to spearhead any attack on Saigon, also is reported in Tay Ninh province.

Cabinet Split on NATO Still Runs Deep

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — The division in the cabinet over NATO policy is broader, deeper and harder to bridge than had been thought.

Westell

The fact that ministers failed to reach a consensus after two days of strenuous debate at the weekend shows that it was far from merely a formality—as had been suggested—of approving a ready-made decision to maintain Canada's present position in the alliance.

The weekend of argument, in fact, seems only to have eliminated from practical consideration the far-out option of withdrawing Canada at once from the alliance.

There remains a realistic choice between the status quo and a decision to give notice of intention to withdraw Canadian forces from Europe over the next few years.

Avoid Bloodshed

Some sources inside the government now believe that Prime Minister Trudeau will have to move skilfully to avoid bloodshed—that is, one or more resignations from the cabinet.

He has, in any event, taken the argument firmly into his own hands and called another cabinet meeting for 8 p.m. tonight, at which he will seek to bring the hung jury to agreement on a verdict.

Meantime, he has been able to weigh the issue in his mind and, if he wished, to take private advice. Indeed, he had an unexpected opportunity yesterday, when he was in Washington for the Eisenhower funeral, to talk to President Nixon and to other heads of Western governments.

One of the questions which has run through the public debate on NATO, and which was asked again in the privacy of the cabinet room, is the attitude of the United States. Would a decision by Canada to withdraw from the alliance upset the U.S. government and public opinion as to make economic and political reprisals likely?

The U.S. government has been scrupulous in refraining from saying or doing anything that might be considered to be pressure upon Canada—so scrupulous that it is hard for the Canadian government to know just where it stands.

The likely U.S. response is obviously a factor that has to be weighed in the decision, and Trudeau may very well have had a final word with Nixon about it yesterday.

There is, after all, some truth in the old political proverb that there has been many a warm handshake over a cold grave.

But whatever the advice from Washington and Western Europe, Trudeau must be more influenced by his own inclinations and by the balance of power within the cabinet.

He made his preference, unmistakably clear a year ago when he was campaigning for the Liberal leadership.

He advocated the basic review of policy which is now coming to decision, but he clearly expected that it would show the desirability of pulling Canada out of the political wing of the alliance into some sort of "Third World" role.

Optimism Shaken

Trudeau's optimistic view of the peaceful course of events in Europe, like the view of many other people, was severely shaken by the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Even so, he opposed all suggestions that NATO should respond with a military build-up.

He wanted Canada to continue with its plan to cut the air division in Europe by 20 per cent, and this move was postponed only when External Affairs minister Mitchell Sharp and Defence Minister Leo Cadieux were actually at the NATO council meeting, in Brussels in November, and advised Trudeau of the strong opinions there.

He then agreed to maintain the current level of the military commitment for another year.

Trudeau obviously was not converted to any great enthusiasm for NATO, and he has since then been careful to keep his personal options open.

SHARP
. . . definitely yes

Only last week, when addressing the National Press Club in Washington, he went out of his way to say that he is not impressed by the theory that Canada cannot take foreign policy initiatives because of the likelihood that other countries would follow suit, with a cumulative impact on affairs.

He warned, in effect, that he does not accept the view that Canada's withdrawal from NATO might precipitate the break-up of the alliance.

It seems clear that Trudeau's personal choice is for, at the minimum, de-escalation of Canada's military contribution to NATO. What of his cabinet?

He has been remarkably successful in sealing off cabinet leaks, and it is hard to be sure that what ministers say privately outside the room is an accurate reflection of inside events.

Like ordinary mortals, ministers tend to interpret their own actions, and the actions of others, in a context provided by their own prejudices. They are not always reliable witsesses, and it is difficult nowadays to check one against another.

NATO Advocates

With this caution, it may be said that:

NATO's four horsemen in the cabinet are Sharp, Cadieux, former external affairs minister Paul Martin and former defence minister Paul Hellyer;

● The four principal ministers in opposition are Communications Minister Eric Kierans, Regional Development Minister Jean Marchand, Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier and Privy Council President Donald Macdonald.

. . . decidedly no

The position of other ministers, as far as can be determined, has not been as clear, or at least not as forceful. Some are torn between a personal view that the NATO commitment should be reduced and the opinion that the country, or constituents, are not ready for it.

Others argue personal convictions against the interests of their portfolios. Thus, Trade, Commerce and Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin appears to have little interest in NATO, but has to be concerned about the possible economic repercussions of withdrawal.

Generation Gap

One source suggests that the basic line of division in the cabinet is the age-experience gap—between the older and longer established ministers, to whom NATO has become part of Canada's international way of life, and younger, less-conditioned ministers, who are impatient with old ideas and eager for defence economies to release funds into their portfolios.

Trudeau's instinct must be to side with the reformers. But when he talks to cabinet tonight, he may have to impose a compromise.

The most likely solution seems to be to continue to keep Canadian troops in Europe for the next few years, but to make a conscious decision not to re-equip them.

Anguilla Accord Wins Moderates

BASSETERRE, St. Kitts (Reuters) — British envoy Lord Caradon is continuing talks today with Prime Minister Robert Bradshaw on the agreement reached Monday over the future of Anguilla.

The agreement, which left rebel Anguilla leader Ronald Webster with even greater prestige in the eyes of his followers, was termed by Caradon as a "good start, not a long-term agreement."

Caradon, returning to New York ot resume his post as chief of the British delegation to the United Nations, explained the agreement during two hours of talks Monday with Bradshaw, head of the associated state of St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla from which Anguilla seceded two years ago and proclaimed its independence.

Caradon said he could not say when British troops on Anguilla would leave the island but he hopes to see a quick improvement in the situation.

As the British diplomat emerged from his talks with the St. Kitts prime minister, a section of the large crowd waiting to see him shouted "Down with Bradshaw."

Caradon and Webster announced Monday that Britain and Anguilla reached agreement virtually quashing the island's republican regime and paving the way for a constitutional settlement.

Later, stopping over on the island of Antigua which served as jumping-off point for the British invasion nearly two weeks ago, Caradon said his talks resulted in a good start—"though not a solution."

Reuters correspondent William Gasson, reporting from Bridgetown, Barbados, said although Webster was unable to eject British Commissioner Tony Lee from Anguilla, he succeeded in getting agreement to allow the Anguillans to largely run their own affairs.

Under the agreement, the 6,000 islanders will be administered by Lee in consultation with the seven-man council which they elected after their declaration of independence.

Apart from Webster's enhanced position, it is also a triumph for the moderates whose voice can once again be heard in the island's councils without fear of the intimidation that is reported to have existed there.

Observers believe the Anguillans are at last convinced Britain has no intention of forcing them back to the hated St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla association. They also believe that, in time, the complete administration of the island may be theirs.

Despite the confusion of conflicting statements by both sides during the last two weeks, the Anguillans have gained what the majority wanted for the present:

—Direct ties with Britain.

—A system of law and order they can trust.

—Independence from St. Kitts.

Soviet Minister Sees Czech Troop Trials

PRAGUE (Reuters) — Soviet Defence Minister Andrew Grechko came to Czechoslovakia to watch the first Warsaw pact manoeuvres involving Czechoslovak troops since the August pact occupation of the country, usually well-informed sources said today.

There have been recent indications that the Soviet Union wants the Czechoslovak army—badly shaken by the events of the last year—to become a working component again in the Eastern European alliance's military command.

Observers here said the presence of Grechko, who arrived in Milovice in central Bohemia on Monday with a high-ranking military delegation, would give added importance to the manoeuvres by Soviet, Czechoslovak, East German and Polish staff and signal corps.

The manoeuvres are taking place on Czechoslovak, East German and Polish soil.

The Soviet marshal's visit came on the heels of a bitter Moscow attack on Czechoslovak leaders over a hockey victory celebration Friday night following the second defeat of Russia by Czechoslovakia at the world tournament in Stockholm, Sweden.

This turned into an anti-Soviet demonstration when the Soviet state airline office was ransacked and all its documents were burned on the pavement.

The Soviet attack came in Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, which accused Josef Smrkovsky, a leading member of the Czechoslovak presidium, of taking part in the attack on the Aeroflot office.

Prague officials denied he was involved.

The Pravda article also complained other party and government leaders failed to issue a statement condemning an earlier outburst after the first hockey victory and thus made the weekend outbreak possible.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, APRIL 1, 1969 —PAGE 17

Arthur Mayse

A look today at three by-products of a big little university.

The first is such a play as I've hoped would one evening rack up a full house for a McPherson Theatre which has remained stubbornly alive through good days and bad.

The play was Moliere's "Tartuffe," and a capacity Victoria audience gave the university cast that offered it one well-deserved curtain call after another.

As a Victorian who has seen Uvic theatre take on stature with the years, I congratulate undergraduate and faculty players. Their Saturday night performance marked a new high point in polished and spirited entertainment.

From the excellent sets (to which Bill West of Oak Bay Senior Secondary lent his talent) through to the handling of even minor roles, the quality was better-than-average professional.

The town's growing up, and so is its theatre. What I found most refreshing was the fact that in Tartuffe, we were presented with a play that called for no concessions from those who came to see it.

For those who missed it, Tartuffe is one of three classic plays to be staged at the McPherson as part of an ambitious Victoria Fair summer program of theatre, music and visual arts.

The second byproduct is 'Introductions from an Island', a 41-page book of poems written by students in Uvic's creative writing program.

The verse, nicely produced between green cardboard covers, is sharply modern in treatment, and contains contributions from some young men and women who will undoubtedly be heard from again.

As a sample, here is one poem that conveys the sinister quality of a forest at night. It is titled 'Between Two Islands,' and was written by Alan Jones.

Between two islands
the fishing fleet balanced
on a strip of metallic sea.

Thick fingers around the tiller,
the fisherman glanced
from time to time
at the fir-covered slopes.

Tossed dark in his cabin at night
he heard roots cracking
as always,
and again the splitting
and crunching of underbrush
as, one after another, trees
came down to the water.

The book, edited by poet and creative writing program director Robin Skelton, is on sale at the University book store for $1.

The third Uvic by-product was a fun thing, but one that brought university, lower schools and public together on amiable terms.

This was last Saturday's kite celebration — a final fling before Easter, and exams afterward for those who are required to take 'em this year.

Dodging strings that stretched up and away to kites of all shapes and sizes, we found student president Norman Wright calmly noting entry performance.

"It's going very well," said Wright, while a monstrous though temporarily grounded triangle of balsa and plastic passed with tail-bearers tramping behind.

"You see that dark one, high up on the far side of the road? They call it the flying mattress. No framework — the thing's just a wind tunnel."

Meanwhile, a busy group not far off was trying for the umpteenth time to launch a multi-kite that was composed of kitelets arranged in squadron formation. In brisker airs, it might have outflown the high-flyers that soared all but invisible in the changeable March sky.

But it didn't — not while we watched- at least — which struck as us a sorry reward for effort expended.

We started to tally tethered birds aloft, but lost count at 60 and took ourselves home stiff-necked from upward gazing.

By-products, yes . . . but all three mark a good neighbor reaching out by Uvic to a community that benefits from its presence.

Committee Calls Five Ministers In Plane Probe

MLAs Demand Explanations

The four ministers without portfolio and Health Minister Ralph Loffmark have been called to explain to a legislative committee Wednesday why they've been using government aircraft like air taxis to their hometowns.

And Highways Minister Wesley Black, in charge of the provincial air fleet, also will be asked to appear to say whether or not he believes they've ignored his warning to all departments last June that flight privileges should not be abused.

The committee agreed this morning it had to call the ministers as witnesses if it is to get down to hard facts on how much it costs to operate the fleet and who uses it.

Ernie Lecours (SC — Richmond) summed up the committee's feelings this morning by observing the ministers must be called because "We want to find out if government aircraft are being abused."

FEW FACTS

The committee learned there are few facts available about the air fleet's operations.

Fraser MacLean, assistant deputy highways minister, who now handles bookings for trips on the government planes, said no operating cost breakdown has been kept for the two piston-driven Beechcraft, one turbine-powered Beechcraft and one Grumman Goose now being converted to turbine power.

He said that Minister Without Portfolio Phil Gaglardi, who was in charge of the fleet as highways minister for almost the entire 1967-68 fiscal year under study, took a personal interest in the air fleet and his office handled all bookings directly.

"People phoned to his secretary and made a booking for where and when they wanted to go and the flights were approved by that office," MacLean said.

NO LEAR RECORD

He added that while operating details were skimpy for the existing fleet, there is no record left at all of the Lear jet's operations because its flight log was returned with the plane to the manufacturer when Premier Bennett decided to drop the lease-purchase agreement after Gaglardi's resignation.

After Black took over the portfolio last summer, he designated MacLean as the booking officer and sent out a circular memo to all departments June 6 laying down conditions for use of the aircraft by senior personnel as transport.

The memo said commercial lines were to be used wherever possible and the government planes used only when absolutely necessary and for productive purposes only with no flights going beyond the province except to use the Watson Lake and Whitehorse airfields when necessary on trips to northern B.C.

Black's memo said all personnel flights were to be endorsed at the ministerial level and the bookings made through MacLean.

Ask The Times

Q. What is the number of paid personnel in connection with the Greater Victoria Scouts? What is the average monthly salary? Is it true that the monies paid in dues and Community Chest donations are used: one sixth for training and camp operation, and the remainder for administrative costs? —J. T.

A. There are four persons on the staff of the Greater Victoria Region; an administrative supervisor, a camp warden (responsible for Camp Barnard near Sooke) and two women secretaries. Amounts of individual salaries are not available, but the total amounts to $19,637. This amount, explains one official, represents five employees, one of whom has now retired. A total of $2,460 for training and $3,335 for camp operation is shown. Community Chest donations are used for these expenses. In addition, approximately $4,000 for training and $30,000 for camp development has been spent during the past four years. These monies came from capital revenue, raised by donations and a T. S. McPherson legacy.

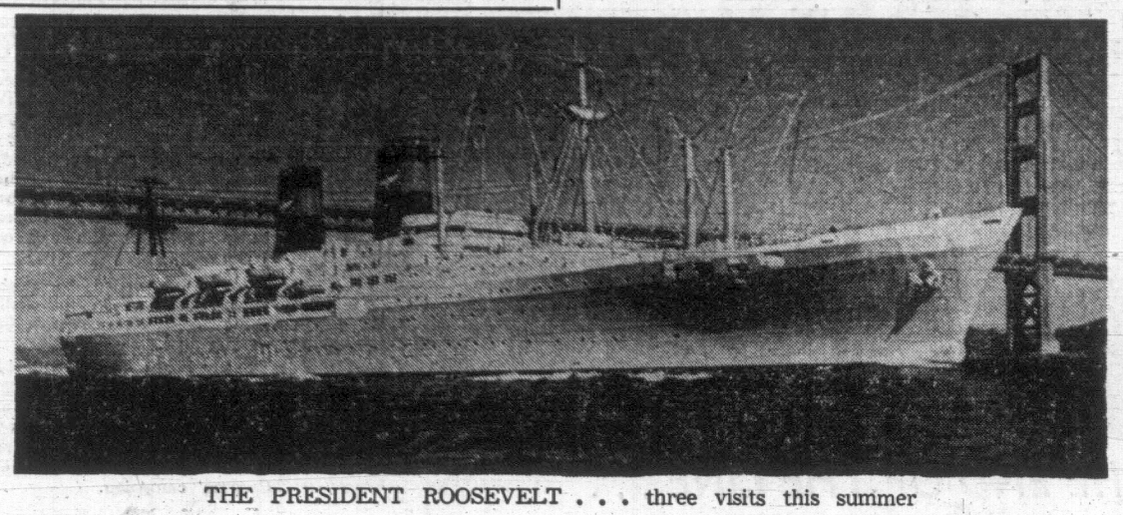
GOVERNMENT OFFICES CLOSED THURSDAY NIGHT TO TUESDAY

Provincial civil servants are looking forward to a long Easter weekend.

Government offices will be closed from Thursday at 5 p.m. until Tuesday at 8:30 a.m.

Provincial Museum staffers will be working Saturday and Sunday when the museum will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Sunday. The museum will be closed Friday and Monday.

Ogden Point Facelift To Start Immediately



THE PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT . . . three visits this summer

'First-Class Study' On Long-Range Plan

By W. RALPH THOMAS

A "two-pronged attack" on inadequate docking facilities at Ogden Point will be launched by Ottawa immediately, the Times learned Monday.

In a telephone interview from Ottawa with the two Victoria area Liberal MPs, David Anderson and David Groos, the results of a multi-departmental meeting involving federal cabinet ministers, deputy ministers and the CNR late last week were revealed.

The meeting decided (1) to whip the Ogden Point docks into shape for passenger liners arriving here this summer; and (2) to form a committee of representatives from the department of transport, the department of public works, the CNR, the city of Victoria and the Chamber of Commerce to determine the future of shipping here.

The first phase, which begins immediately, involves making improvements necessary for handling liners which will bring more than 7,000 tourists to Victoria this summer.

"We must guarantee that there will be enough water for the (passenger) ships to dock, and secondly, to make sure there will be sufficient facilities on the dock itself," said Anderson.

There will be an adequate waiting room, unloading facilities and space for buses to draw up to load tourists," he added.

SHARE COSTS

He said the cost of revamping the docks to enable them to cope with passenger liners will be shared by the department of transport and the CNR.

The second phase of the attack will be an exhaustive study of all aspects of shipping in Victoria.

Groos said this study will be carried out by the Inter-department Group on Canadian Ports, and that they will be instructed to prepare their report "within two months."

He said the pilings at the bottom of he docks will be examined to determine whether the rock footings are slipping, causing portions of the docks to sink, and that the exact cost of raising the docks and dredging alongside will be calculated.

"The study group will hold consultations with the city of Victoria with regard to zoning regulations in the vicinity of Ogden Point," he added.

Anderson expanded on this when he said the future of the residential area behind the docks will be examined to determine the effects it would have on the traffic increased shipping would bring.

"The whole future of the marine docking facilities in Victoria will be looked into," he said, "and one of the first things they (the study group) will look into is this agreement under which the CNR brings grain to the Victoria elevator.

FIRST-CLASS STUDY

"After that they will look at the road access to the docks. If they find the type of residential area in the future, such as apartment blocks, will congest present routes to the docks, they will have to take into consideration methods of handling the problem.

In describing the project as a "first-class study," Anderson said much of the credit should go to Groos for pushing the matter for more than a year and to the chamber of commerce for "constructive help."

Said Groos: "We've at last captured the interest of the various government departments and the CNR in this operation and we are finally going to get some action."

PRESSURING AT PARTY CHARGED

The Carpenters Union today charged a Victoria construction firm with holding a drinking party to pressure union members into disclosing how they voted in a secret strike vote a week ago.

An ex parte injunction granted by the British Columbia Supreme Court last week declared the vote invalid.

Lorne Robson, secretary of the Provincial Council of Carpenters, said the council learned from its members the party was held March 21 in the offices of Yakimovich Construction Ltd. in Victoria, shortly after the men had voted 8-7 to strike.

'SOCIAL'

A company statement confirmed the men had visited company offices but stressed they did so voluntarily to discuss the situation "freely among themselves and their employer in a convivial social atmosphere."

The union later set up pickets at one of the firm's Victoria construction projects. Robson said they were then called into Ernie Yakimovich's office one at a time and asked how they voted.

He said it was his opinion the men "were intimidated into signing affidavits that they had voted not to strike."

The injunction was granted by Mr Justice R. A. B. Wootton after he considered 10 sworn statements from carpenters that they had voted against a strike.

FILE CLAIM

Robson said the union plans to file a claim with the provincial Labor Relations Board that the company took action to break the secrecy of a strike vote provided under provincial law.

He said the union also will file an application in court to have the injunction removed and is seeking support of the B.C. Federation of Labor.

The new provincial Mediation Commission Act last year eliminated government-supervised strike votes and now permits unions to conduct their own secret votes.

The company statement called the union claim about its actions "absurd, inaccurate and most insulting to the carpenters involved and the integrity of the company."

It stressed that of the 15 carpenters who voted in the secret ballot, 10 visited its offices voluntarily and "swore under solemn oath that they had voted against strike action at the secret ballot."

The company has asked the mediation commission to make an inquiry into the holding of the carpenters' vote.

7,000 Extra Tourists Coming on Cruise Ships

An extra 7,000 U.S. tourists are expected to visit Victoria this summer.

And they are coming by sea.

They'll be disembarked at Ogden Point docks in 14 groups of between 350 and 600 from ships of three major passenger lines.

Slated to put in here on a regular basis are the Princess Italia, the President Roosevelt and Mariposa and Monterey. They are owned by Princess Cruises, American President Lines and Matson Lines.

Passengers will have time to explore the city for a day—or in some cases they will spend a night at Empress Hotel.

Another company announcement comes from P and O Lines—that starting next year ships of that world-girdling line will also call at Victoria.

This will permit waterfront watchers a close-up of vessels they have seen only in the distance in past years as they proceed to Vancouver.

Princess Italia will be the first of the passenger liners to arrive this year. Carrying a maximum of 420 passengers she comes June 14 from Alaska for a two-day stay while en route back to San Francisco.

She will make a total of seven two-day stopovers at two-week intervals during the holiday season.

Dates she is scheduled to be here are: June 14-15, June 28-29, July 12-13, July 26-27, Aug. 9-10, Aug. 23-24, Sept. 6-7, and Sept. 11-12.

600-PASSENGER

American President's 600-passenger liner President Roosevelt will arrive on the mornings of June 21, July 6 and Aug. 30 and depart again late the same days.

Matson's 375-passenger Monterey will dock here June 19 from 7 a.m. to noon on her initial run from Los Angeles to Alaska. Her sister Mariposa will also make three stops between 7 a.m. and noon on July 31, Aug. 14 and Aug. 29.

Many passengers aboard the plush Princess Italia will spend a night in the Empress Hotel as part of their itinerary, while passengers from the Matson Lines ships will make a quick tour of Beacon Hill Park, Marine Drive, Uplands and Butchart Gardens.

Woman Satisfactory After Crash on Hill

A Saanich woman whose car went off the road on Mt. Douglas Monday is in fairly good condition today in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Mrs. George Bartlett, 38, of 1836 San Juan, was found lying half out of her car and was thought at first to have suffered a broken neck. X-rays later showed this wasn't so.

Police said she was travelling down Churchill Drive from the summit of the mountain when her car went over the bank just past a treacherous hairpin turn.

She was alone at the time and police said damage to the car was slight.

Officers attending the accident said her car might have rolled over a 70-foot bank if it hadn't been for a large rock outcropping that caught the running board.

A doctor was brought to the accident scene before the woman was moved. Hospital officials said today her injuries were undetermined.

In a separate accident in the city an elderly man is in fair condition in St. Joseph's Hospital after he was struck by a car while crossing a street.

Wong Chew Kim, 87, of 516½ Herald, suffered head cuts.

Driver of the car was Colin William Molesworth, 22, of 1172 Yates.

Police said Kim was walking east on the southerly crosswalk at Douglas and Pandora when he was in collision with the car.

Mayor, Alderman in Sharp Clash Over Parking Fee at Thetis Lake

Ald. Clyde Savage of Victoria today advocated a 50-cent-a-day parking charge at Thetis Lake Park to help defray mounting maintenance costs.

His proposal ran into stubborn opposition from Mayor Hugh Stephen who said "I think you would have a riot on your hands if you tried to charge admittance to a public park."

Savage stuck by his guns claiming it was unfair that the taxpayers of Victoria should be forced to pay the cost to maintain a park which is used 65 per cent of the time by district residents.

"The only way we can properly maintain the park and keep it open to the public is by making a charge for parking to at least help with the cost," Savage said.

"It's either that or close the park.

"We need funds for roads and lifeguards and we have already earmarked $5,000 this year for the parking lot."

The cost of two lifeguards for swimmer protection has been estimated between $2,000 and $2,500 a season.

VENDING MACHINE

Savage said he was suggesting the installation of a parking ticket vending machine at the main gateway to the park to dispense 50-cent tickets which would be good all day.

Stephen argued the installation of parking ticket vending machines would be impractical.

"And anyway the regional district will be taking the park over next year," he added. "It would have become a regional park this year but the minister didn't seem to grasp just what we were trying to do."

Savage replied he didn't have too much faith in promises of government action.

"The way I have seen this government act I wouldn't be too sure that the government will take action next year or the year after," he said.

But Stephen still objected.

"Are you suggesting that we should pay between $25,000 and $30,000 a year just to keep the park open for the entire district?" asked Savage.

"No," answered Stephen. "Just that we should continue to pay for essential maintenance.

"I realize what you're saying and I agree with you to a degree," said Savage. "But we are still faced with the problem of asking the taxpayers of Victoria to pay for something which really belongs to the district."

'REALLY SILLY'

"We've been doing it for years," answered the mayor.

"And I think it's silly to keep on doing it," snapped Savage.

"We are faced with two courses of action: we either close the park or we charge for parking. I don't think the people will resist a parking fee. If we are going to keep the park open somebody has to help pay for it."

The parks committee discussing the problem left the matter in abeyance for further study and discussion before making a final decision.

Fight Promised Welfare Case Prescription Fee

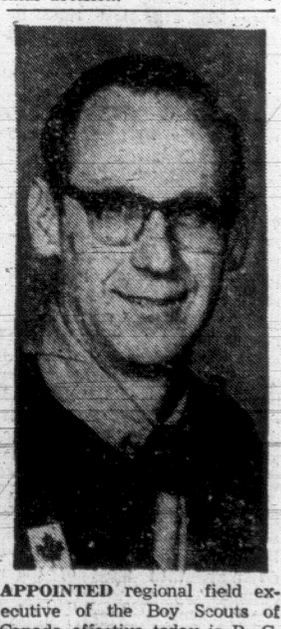
The provincial government will oppose plans of B.C. druggists to charge social welfare recipients an extra dollar per prescription.

Social Welfare Minister Dan Campbell told newsmen this is an attempt to force a "fee for service principle on the government."

"We will investigate as many ways of getting around this as are necessary," said Campbell.

He said pharmacists are caught in a price-cost squeeze, "but we don't intend to have the department of social welfare made the scapegoat for that situation."

On Monday the B.C. Pharmacists' Society warned it would introduce the extra charge April 15. The society claimed its members lose more than $900,000 on welfare prescriptions because the government payment for drugs is too low.



APPOINTED regional field executive of the Boy Scouts of Canada effective today is R. C. (Bob) Muir of Victoria. He will be responsible for assisting the regional council in the training program of adult members, field service training in eight districts and the camping and special events programs. Mr. Muir has been associated with the scouts for 33 years, starting as a cub in the First Tillicum Pack in 1933. He is married and has three sons, all of whom have been Queen's Scouts.

$75,000 Bill For Freighter After Grounding

Damage to the 7,600-ton Liberian freighter Hong Kong Clipper, which ran aground on Denny Island in the Queen Charlotte Sound last week, has been estimated at $75,000.

A spokesman for Yarrows Ltd. said a number of shell plates in the forward section were punctured by orcks and the internal structure was affected by the collision.

The freighter, undergoing repairs in Esquimalt Graving Dock, is expected to be under way later this week.

VICTORIA MAN ADMITS GUILT IN SIDNEY RIFLE INCIDENT

A man who held seven children captive while armed with a rifle today pleaded guilty in Sidney magistrate's court to possession of an offensive weapon.

Hubert Deforge, 27, of Victoria, was remanded by Magistrate D. G. Ashby until April 14 for a pre-sentence report.

He was arrested and a .303 calibre rifle seized after the seven children had been held captive for two hours in the home of Beverly Robinson. The children ranged in age from two to 10 years.

Police said the woman ran from the house after the armed man went inside. He later surrendered to police, who said one shot was fired from the rifle.

World Leaders Chat With Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon set aside his entire schedule today for private conferences with a dozen world leaders, including Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky of South Vietnam.

Nixon ruled out the presence of any advisors at the session, except for interpreters.

Ostensibly, the president's chats with foreign leaders who came here to attend funeral services for former president Dwight D. Eisenhower were largely ceremonial in nature. However, press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler declined to rule out substantive discussions on world affairs.

"There is no agenda," he said.

Ky will be flying from Washington to the Vietnam peace talks in Paris and it seemed certain he and Nixon would discuss that parley, as they did when they met in Paris a month ago during Nixon's European tour.

Another U.S. supporter in the Vietnam war, President Ferdinant Marcos of the Philippines, said en route to Washington that he had unspecified "urgent" matters he wanted to discuss with Nixon.

Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada, who had a state visit to Washington last week, returned to Ottawa Monday.

In addition to Ky and Marcos, those scheduled to visit the White House at Nixon's invitation were:

Premier Mariano Rumor of Italy, Prime minister John Gorton of Australia, Premier Chung Il Kwon of South Korea, premier Marcello Caetamo of Portugal and Premier Suleiman Demirel of Turkey.

Also Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger of West Germany, the Shah of Iran, President Habib Bouguiba of Tunesia, Foreign Minister Joseph Luns of The Netherlands and former premier Nobusuke Kishi of Japan.

Today's talks followed a large diplomatic reception Nixon gave at the White House Monday night for the heads of state and other dignitaries who came for the Eisenhower state funeral.

Although Nixon talked with most of those attending the reception, the conversations apparently were social.

King Starts Crisis Tour

AMMAN (Reuters) — King Hussein of Jordan left today for Beirut, Lebanon, on his way to visit Paris and Washington, where he will meet with President Nixon.

During his brief stopover in Beirut, the Jordanian monarch will meet President Charles Heou and other Lebanese leaders for discussions on the Middle East crisis. He will have similar talks in Paris with President de Gaulle.

Hussein will arrive in Washington April 8 at Nixon's invitation to discuss bilateral relations and the Middle East.

By PETER ARNETT

TAY NINH, South Vietnam (AP)—Optimism about the war reflected at United States headquarters in Saigon earier this year has been replaced by constraint. American pacification officials no longer mention the confident forecasts, made in February, that 90 per cent of South Vietnam's population would be under government control and protection by year's end.

As has happened often in the past, hopes have proved premature that the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces were so weakened and disarrayed that they had lost the drive for any real fight.

Many realities of the war seem as valid now as they did in earlier years.

One is that there is no easy way to win.

The B-52 bombers that send explosives crashing into the jungles have scored many successes, officers say, but they have not deterred the determined Viet Cong and North Vietnamese from frequently bursting upon combined forces bases.

Sophisticated radar and electronic tracking devices on aircraft and vehicles were seen as another technique of reducing the troops' workload. But none of this apparatus located two-battalion-sized Viet Cong ambushes laid in daylight last week along busy highways in this area 50 miles northwest of Saigon.

The South Vietnamese army appears nowhere near taking over the workload from the Americans. In three sectors surveyed last week, American troopers were earmarked to take over areas currently defended by the South Vietnamese army, should the pressure increase to a dangerous level.

Hopes that people in outlying villages recently armed by the Saigon government would resist the Viet Cong have not fully materialized. Viet Cong forces have walked through allegedly pacified villages west and south of Saigon without a shot being fired by the defenders.

'We Spar, Then We Fight . . . Then We Retreat'

Outer-ring defences around many cities have not functioned. A hamlet outside Bac Lieu city in the Mekong Delta was found to be harboring Viet Cong forces at night. They regularly received intelligence from villagers visiting the nearby city market.

Another reality is that combined forces troops often cannot grasp the initiative from the Viet Cong. Usually the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese are found only when they want to be found.

Deficiency in knowledge of the local scene is compensated by the vast firepower U.S. forces can summon at any given moment from artillery and airpower. In the final analysis, this immense firepower generally saves the day. But firepower can be used successfully only against a visible enemy.

This gap in knowledge has not been bridged by the South Vietnamese military who often give a sober assessment of the war's progress.

For example, South Vietnamese airborne officers at Tay Ninh characterize the weeks of vicious fighting in the sector as a boxing match.

"Up here, the Communists are our equals," said a captain. "They come across the Cambodian border; we leave our base camp. We spar, then we fight for a while, then we retreat to our corners for a minute's break. Then it's out and at it again."

Eight Fined $5 For Having Small Clams

Eight persons were fined $5 each Saturday in Sidney magistrate's court after pleading guilty of possessing under-sized clams.

They were: William Baxter, 1259 Revercombe Place, Leonard Murrant, 3430 Maplewood, Leo McGillis, 996 Brighton Cresc., Brian Baker, 1145 Faithful, Ron Brown, 2807 Wyndeatt, Edwin Kuefler and Briget Eric Badminton, 4141 Gillie, Flynn, 1802 Oak Bay Avenue.

EARNINGS LIMIT BACKED BY COURT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Supreme Court upheld today the right of unions to punish workers who go over production quotas.

Fining or even expelling piece workers who exceed production quotas set by the union is a matter of internal policy not forbidden by federal labor law, the court said in a decision approved by seven out of eight members.

The decision, given by Justice Byron R. White, dealt with quotas set by the United Auto Workers Union at the Wisconsin Motor Corp., in Milwaukee, Wis. Four machine operators were tried by the union and fined $50 to $100 and were suspended from the union for a year when it was found that they, and other members, had exceeded the production ceiling for piece workers.

The union rule, enforceable since 1944 by fines and expulsion, allows members to produce as much as they like each day but sets a ceiling rate for how much pay they may draw on a particular day.

ECM Union Makes Technical Progress

By CLYDE H. FARNSWORTH

BRUSSELS — The European Common Market is marking time on the big issues of European integration, but is making limited, technical progress towards economic union in the fields of transportation, patents and customs safety regulations.

Standards are being established for the work day of a truck driver. A Common Market patent office is beginning to take shape. Procedures are being set up to eliminate technical, non-tariff obstacles to trade.

Rhese are the minutia of community development, being accomplished in a year that is supposed to move the market out of a transition phase into a state of solid economic union. The ambitious schedule of the market's founders has now run into trouble.

Every new step foreward has to cross the barrier of deep political mistrust. In this atmosphere, the member states are reluctant to give up the sovereignty that major decisions, say in agriculture financing, or in monetary co-operation, would entail.

Despite the present malaise, no one, including French President de Gaulle, who has made no secret of his dislike for the community, is prepared to write it off yet.

SIGN OF PROGRESS

Powerful interests want it to continue: the businessman who can sell in a tariff free market of 180 million people; the farmer who is guaranteed high prices for his produce; the worker who can settle down in any of the member states and benefit from local social security.

The outsider may dismiss some of the "small" decisions, but for the interested parties, such as the thousands of community truckers, these are important. It is a sign of the community's stature and progress that no decision taken in Brussels can be ignored.

POLITICAL WILL

Yet, there is the feeling in some quarters that, apart from some of the minutia, the Market has progressed about as far as it can until a free political will emerges.

Much of the present bad temper stems from de Gaulle's refusal to allow Britain in as a new member. The general now speaks vaguely of new forms of economic and political co-operation that might include Britain and that might replace the Common Market.

There is little support for the idea among the five countries that want Britain included — the "Friendly Five," as they are called.

Students Produce Movie

WINNIPEG (CP) — University of Manitoba students have entered the film-making industry with a 48-minute movie produced from a budget of $7,800.

The first showing of the film, entitled And No Birds Sing, was held recently for a number of guests including the provincial industry minister, Sidney Spivak.

"This type of activity indicates the need for more government, and especially community, participation in the way of grants for creative people," Mr. Spivak said.

He said talented "creative groups like these youngsters" prompted the provincial government to establish the Provincial Arts Council set up last year for the purpose of offering grants.

The film was written, produced and directed by Prof. Victor Cowie. It tells a story about a young university student intent on wooing a young lady in his classroom. Until the night of a party, the heroine appears unimpressed by her admirer.

Sherwin Lyman, executive producer, said the film has possibilities of being entered in one or several film festivals in the nited States. Nodec ion hasiUs United States. No decision has yet been made on whether to make copies of the film.

Anti-Missile Campaign Gaining Strength in U.S.

TRIO RELATES SPACE HOOK-UP

First-hand accounts of the recent dangerously-complicated lunar module mission is given today in The Times by the three U.S. astronauts who carried it out successfully.

Below, Russell Schweickart, 33, the only civilian and youngest of the trio, describes the overwhelming experience of standing outside the module in the awesome silence of outer Space.

On Page 6, Commander James McDivitt relates how tricky it was to steer the lunar module, while David Scott tells of the suspenseful time he had behind the controls of the command ship as he waited for the module to hook up.

He Stood in Awe At 17,000 MPH

By RUSSELL SCHWEICKART

In addition to the usual patches, pins and souvenirs which everybody takes up there, I had taken along copies of about 20 quotations I liked: From John and Robert Kennedy, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Thornton Wilder, Isaiah and some others.

It seemed important to have these glimpses of truth with me.

I was to do extra-vehicular activity (EVA)—to get outside the spacecraft — and I wanted very much to have a private moment then, to invite the beauty of that spectacle to penetrate the layer of my more immediate concern and responsibility.

But when I finally stood there on the "porch" of the LM, the quotations didn't spring into my mind, individually or collectively. So in that private moment I had to summom them up deliberately but it was an act on my part.

The visiual sensation you get from doing EVA is an overwhelmingly emotional experience. The intensity of the colors: it was just past sunrise, and I was out there looking up over the LM toward the Command Module into the richest black you ever saw.

Separating that fantastic sky and the Pacific Ocean was an intense, almost irridescent band of blue which formed the horizon.

The words to describe what you see just aren't there. I wasn't conscious of catching my breath or gasping; I was just overwhelmed by the beauty of it all.

Then there was the silence, and that has to be explained. I had the headset on, and everybody was talking.

Yet between those bits and pieces of conversation I was standing out there and aware of the fact that I was going 17,000 mph. Not because things were flashing by, as they do when you travel at high speeds in a car, but I did realize how high I was and was aware of the earth passing underneath.

And it was so quiet.

I really wished that I could turn off the radio and just listen to that silence. Of course in a vacuum there can't be a sound, but that silence penetrates.

I was out there for only 40 minutes. We had planned to be out for two hours, but we had trouble getting everything ready for the day's work. We always found ourselves behind at the beginning of every day.

We hadn't anticipated the mobility problem of getting into our suits before going into the LM. We had to suit up one at a time, staying out of each other's way, and the whole task took me 20 or 25 minutes, about twice what we had counted on.

We were all concerned that on the rendezvous day we might start out again behind the planned time line.

So we decided to wake up an hour earlier than planned. This meant an hour less of precious sleep unless we cut the EVA short. We left it up to Houston, and when they suggested terminating it early we all agreed.

Kennedy Active In Protest Move

By WARREN UNNA

WASHINGTON (WP)—A nation-wide opposition movement to the Nixon administration's go-ahead on the safeguard anti-ballistic missile deployment suddenly is springing up.

SEN. KENNEDY
... leads critics

Some of it is centreing around Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D—Mass.); some of it around bi-partisan New York congressmen; some of it is coming from the Harvard-M.I.T. professors; and some of it is attempting to capture the grass roots college enthusiasm which last year fastened on the anti-Vietnam protest of Sen. Eugene McCarthy (D-Minn).

Kennedy has been by far the most active in this new fight against the ABM. And there is strong indication that it will not be confined to just defeating this year's safeguard appropriation requests by the administration, but to the overall priority military demands now should have in competition with pressing domestic needs.

NON-PARTISAN

Kennedy's aides insist the opposition is strictly on an issue and strictly non-partisan. But it coincides with a decision by the Democratic Party's potential presidential candidate to return to the banquet circuit of cross-country speechmaking beginning this month.

And Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky.), as avid as Kennedy in opposing the ABM, is warning that if the movement does become partisan and anti-Nixon he is going his own way.

The anti-ABM movement is taking many forms in many locales. The main ones are:

● A move by Sens. Kennedy, Cooper, Charles H. Percy (R-Ill.) and Philip A. Hart (D-Mich.) to form what tentatively is being called a "National Committee for Common Sense" led by perhaps 10 impeccable authorities from science, business, the ex-military, Negro and women's groups.

● A document, at last count 400 pages, requested by Kennedy from some 16 scientists, mainly in the Cambridge locale, which is to be completed within the next week or two and made available to a Congress confronted with Pentagon ABM authorization and appropriations requests.

● The grass roots movement, led by two associates of the Kennedy family political machine, Richard N. Goodwin and William Vanden Heuvel, which is centered in New York and now beginning to send out mail urging the establishment of community anti-ABM protest groups.

● A strictly New York coalition movement led by Rep. Jonathan B. Bingham, a Bronx Democrat, who hopes to run for the senate next year, and Rep. Ogden R. Reid, Westchester County Republican which already has a public relations firm engaged in putting out pamphlets, issuing press statements and keeping the home telephones ringing.

Pakistan Demands UN Action

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Pakistan demanded today that the United Nations Security Council condemn Israel anew despite the threat it might split the Big Four on the eve of private talks on Middle East peace.

Ambassador Agha Shahi of Pakistan formally introduced an Asian-African resolution asking condemnation for the Israeli attack on a Jordanian village last Wednesday.

He said the resolution represented the maximum compromise possible with the major powers on the council.

Shahi said the sponsors wanted to avoid division among the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France and thus went to greater lengths than the sponsors would have otherwise done.

But he added that the situation had deteriorated in the Middle East to the point where another condemnation resolution aimed at Israel was needed.

REVISIONS SOUGHT

The U.S. and Britain sought to persuade the sponsors to water down the resolution so that it would include mention of Arab guerrilla raids as well as retaliatory strikes by Israel.

The U.S. and Britain were believed likely to abstain on the resolution, while the Soviet Union would vote for it. The position of France was uncertain.

Britain told the council earlier that a split in the voting would prejudice Big Four talks on the Middle East set to begin this week.

The Israeli cabinet Sunday reiterated its opposition to any move by the Big Four to impose a peace settlement and said Israel and the Arab states are mainly responsible for working out a peace plan.

After the Security Council unanimously condemned Israel last Dec. 31 for its reprisal raid on Beirut International Airport, Israel rejected the condemnation and denounced the council as "morally, politically and juridically bankrupt."

Rescuers Abandon Hope For 178 in Mine

MUZQUIZ, Mexico (CP)—All hope was abandoned today for 178 miners trapped underground when a gas explosion ripped through a coal mine near this northern village.

Fourteen bodies were recovered and an official of the Red Cross, which is co-ordinating rescue efforts, said there was no hope of any survivors.

Of the 14 bodies recovered so far, 13 were of miners trapped near the mouth of the mine when fire-damp gas exploded and sealed off the two main shafts.

The other was of a man living nearby who rushed into the pit mouth in search of a missing relative and was overcome by fumes.

A Red Cross official said: "There can be no hope of any survivors—the shafts are filled with poisonous carbon monoxide gas."

The company is Altos Hornos de Mexico.

LITTLE HOPE

Dr. J. Ramos, director of the nearby Sabinas Red Cross Hospital, said he had little hope that any of the men survived.

"After the explosion they could have died from suffocation, toxic poisoning or burning," he said.

Some rescue officials expressed a hope of reaching some of the trapped men in 72 hours, but the mine tunnels were a shambles and rescue officials said it may be as long as 15 days before men could dig down to reach all of the victims.

FAMILIES RIOT

Troops were rushed in to control victims' families who rioted at the tunnel entrances. The crowds calmed down later.

The mine is at Barroteran, with a population of 8,000 people, about 75 miles southwest of the Texas border town of Eagle Pass.

"It was a tremendous explosion, blowing parts of the mine entrance into the air," said Dr. Emilio Lopez of the Barroteran hospital, who witnessed the blast. "We have no injured. They were either all killed at the entrance or trapped below. The lucky ones had left.

"They were able to take out the bodies of some of the dead miners because they were on their way up and near the exit." The mining company is one of Mexico's biggest coal producers.

6.3 Per Cent Profit Made

OTTAWA (CP) — Air Canada had a net income of $8,184,000 in 1968, the sixth consecutive year in which it has shown a profit, Transport Minister Paul Hellyer announced today.

The Crown-owned airline will need more than $300,000,000 in outside financing, however, to buy new equipment and property in the next five years, it was stated in the company's annual report tabled by Mr. Hellyer in the Commons.

The 1968 profit was the 15th for the airline in the last 18 years. It signified a return on investment of 6.3 per cent.

Comparable results for 1967, the Centennial Year, were a profit of $3,547,000 and an investment return of 5.2 per cent.

Passenger traffic growth was described as modest in 1968, compared with the sharp increase experienced in 1967.

MONTREAL BOMBER GIVEN LIFE TERM

MONTREAL (CP)—Terrorist bomber Pierre-Paul Geoffroy was sentenced today to life imprisonment for his active part in 31 recent bombing incidents in the Montreal area.

Geoffroy listened impassively, his arms folded across his chest, to the 20-minute judgment read by Chief Judge André Fabien of Sessions Court.

Judge Fabien said he was sentencing Geoffroy to life imprisonment on 124 charges stemming from 31 incidents—making bombs, placing bombs and conspiracy to make and place bombs.

Under terms of the law, Geoffroy could be paroled after serving seven years.

Robichaud Seeks New Ottawa Aid

FREDERICTON (CP)—In the midst of a flurry of protests over increased taxes, Premier Louis J. Robichaud of New Brunswick has appealed to the federal government for help.

The premier announced in the legislature Monday he has asked Ottawa for an "immediate and urgent" federal-provincial conference on finances.

Earlier Monday, the premier met demonstrators from Saint John, N.B., who presented him with a three-page brief asking for a reduction in provincial programs to cut tax increases.

It was the second group to come to the capital to protest the tax raises announced in Finance Minister L. G. DesBrisay's budget for 1969-1970.

The first group, from Moncton, N.B., received a brusque reception from the premier last Thursday.

However, he said Monday's delegation presented a fair brief and represented a definite segment of the public opinion.

LEADS DELEGATION

Paul Gordon, chairman of the Saint John Saye New Brunswick Committee, led the delegation.

The brief he presented asked the premier to either find some means of lowering the recently-announced tax raises or "resign and allow the people to decide by an election who is capable of managing the affairs of our province."

While the delegation met the premier, a crowd of about 200 demonstrators outside the legislature building waved banners and called for his resignation.

Repeated attempts by the demonstrators to enter the building were foiled by 20 RCMP officers.

Criticism of the tax increases were also voiced Monday by members of the legislature. Claude Taylor (PC—Albert) said New Brunswick was probably the highest taxed area of North America.

Lawrence Garvie (PC—Fredericton) called for a full disclosure of the province's financial situation.

He said Finance Minister DesBrisay referred to his budget which brought a $29,400,000 increase in taxes, as anti-inflationary.

TRAIN TAKES IKE BACK TO HEART OF AMERICA

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The train bearing the body of Dwight David Eisenhower rumbled across the face of America today, carrying to a modest resting place the man who once led the world's mightiest nation and commanded the most awesome military machine ever assembled.

"I come from the heart of America," he liked to say of his boyhood in Kansas, and it is to that geographic centre of the United States he is returning.

The nation's capital bade farewell at sundown Monday as Eisenhower's coffin was placed on baggage car No. 314 for the 30-hour, 1,379-mile trip home to Abilene.

Earlier, Palm Sunday crowds had shuffled past his bier in an all-night procession through the great marble rotunda of the Capitol building. It was on this spot that Eisenhower had twice been sworn in as Republican president—in 1952 and in 1956.

But Monday bloomed bright and sunny, if unseasonably cold, for the funeral procession and service that brought together, in the National Cathedral, representatives of more than 120 nations among the 2,107 invited guests.

Prime Minister Trudeau headed the four-man delegation representing the people and government of Canada. He placed a wreath at the bier.

With Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, John Diefenbaker who was Conservative prime minister part of the time Eisenhower was in the White House, and Gen. Jean V. Allard, chief of the defence staff, the prime minister later attended a White House reception for visiting dignitaries.

MOVES TO STATION

Finally, as the setting sun cast long shadows across the city, the hearse carrying Ike's body in a standard $80 army coffin moved down the great avenues and into Union Station. There it was placed aboard the black-draped, 10-car train and began the long journey home. At the rear came Eisenhower's private car, now occupied by his widow, Mamie, 72, still composed but visibly shaken.

Clusters of people gathered by the railway tracks in the night to pay final homage to the man they knew as "Ike."

At midnight tonight the funeral train will reach Abilene.

The burial, beside his first son who died in infancy, will be Wednesday in the Eisenhower Centre, a memorial library and chapel built on a cornfield.

President Nixon, the political heir whom Eisenhower lived to see in the White House at last, will fly here for the final services.

Nixon was blinking back tears as he left the train station in Washington Monday after the flag-covered coffin was carried aboard the funeral car.

Nixon led the great of the world at the state funeral in Washington National Cathedral.

CONDUCTS THE SERVICE

"The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord," intoned Very Rev. Francis B. Sayre Jr., dean of the cathedral and grandson of another president, Woodrow Wilson.

Massive Sweep By U.S. Troops

SAIGON (AP) — Thousands of helicopter-borne United States air cavalrymen are pursuing an estimated 7,500 troops of two North Vietnamese divisions through the Viet Cong War Zone C, military spokesmen said today.

The air cavalrymen are chasing the North Vietnamese 1st and 7th Divisions, which are believed to have pulled back into the jungles of northern Tay Ninh province near the Cambodian border after eluding a 10,000-man American sweep called Operation Atlas Wedge.

Atlas wedge was conducted in the Michelin rubber plantations in the southern half of Tay Ninh province, 45 miles northwest of Saigon. The new drive is called Montana Scout. Spokesmen said it is about half the size of Atlas Wedge.

Military analysts said the retreat of the two North Vietnamese divisions into War Zone C was part of a general withdrawal forced on them by heavy losses suffered in their five-week-old offensive. The Viet Cong's 9th Division, which is supposed to spearhead any attack on Saigon, also is reported in Tay Ninh province.

Trustee Resigns After Defeat Of Bylaw; Raps Voter Apathy

By ED GOULD

DUNCAN—One trustee resigned, two others felt like it but reconsidered, and another was asked to either co-operate or quit at a heated session of the Cowichan School Board Monday night.

Alastair I. MacDonald resigned because he regarded "the budget defeat Saturday as a vote of non-confidence in this board."

He considered his remaining on the board a "waste of time" considering the apathetic attitude of the district voters towards their children's education.

MacDonald, a Duncan lawyer, also referred to Trustee Margeret Whittaker when he blamed board disagreements on "a new trustee who was not ready . . . who had not completed in-service training."

Trustees Jack Efford and Ernie Goddard said they also considered resigning. Efford said "however I think we should continue to take the next step to the department level and try to obtain the best education possible for our children."

Trustee Goddard said he would have resigned too but "since I am one of the architects of the budget, I feel I should see it through to the end."

The requested resignation of Mrs. Whittaker came in a strong attack from Trustee Andy Anand who questioned her ability to be a good administrator without having and previous knowledge of running such a complex business as a school district.

He said commitment to trusteeship was not "the same as milking cows and doing farm chores. I believe you are pretty experienced in that line of work.

Mrs. Whittaker had not "put forth an honest four-hour's work in the past three months . . . . I suggest now is the time to either work with the rest of the board members in an effort to salvage our program or quit and let someone else in."

Trustee Terry Taylor also drew a bead on Mrs. Whittaker when he said a school board is more like a cabinet than legislature.

"When a majority decision is made by the board, you abide by it," he said.

GODDARD
. . . "I'll see it through"

'Excesses' in Promotion Regretted

Mrs. Whittaker said she had never made any personal attacks on a trustee and that her disagreements lay with the budget itself.

She then attempted to get a resolution passed that "this board regrets excesses in the bylaw-promoting campaign through the schools."

Taylor seconded the motion because he said an allegation against the board had been made.

Only Mrs. Whittaker voted in favor.

Efford, who was chairman of the public information committee which put out the pamphlet referred to by Mrs. Whittaker in her "excesses" remark said: "If there was misinformation it was not by those who supplied the information but by those who read and by those who passed it on."

He said his committee did everything above board and nothing behind anyone's back. He produced three elaborate information booklets put out by other school districts in favor of their programs and hoped he would be back next year to do the same, "only with a larger money appropriation."

Chairman Bruce Devitt reiterated earlier statements that he did not consider the bylaw defeat a vote of non-confidence.

He asked the board to get down to work and cut the budget as much as possible and then, with the help of the B.C. school trustees assocation, go to the department of education for help.

The chairman said the aim should be to keep the basic program intact as possible.

He said it was not "our intent to cause a serious rift in the community or to turn the issue into the insane, mad tea party that developed."

The bylaw would have permitted the board to spend $366,000 above a provincially-imposed ceiling on this year's operating costs.

Agreement Reached With School Staff

DUNCAN — Agreement has been reached between Cowichan District School Board and its non-teaching employees.

Details of the contract were not released. The employees, members of Local 1-80 of the International Woodworkers of America, will be asked to ratify the contract at a meeting April 12 at 10:30 a.m. in the Duncan IWA office.

The cost of treating mental illness in the United States during 1966 amounted to more than $20,000,000,000.

Byelection On May 3

DUNCAN — A byelection to fill the vacancy created by the death of Alderman Robert Mason will be held May 3, Mayor Jim Quaife told city council Monday night.

Nominations are open until noon April 23.

Returning officer is city administrator Gordon Berry.

Flying Start For Tahsis Baby

VANCOUVER (CP)—Flight 240 of British Columbia Airlines took off from Tahsis on the West Coast of Vancouver Island with seven passengers Monday and landed half an hour later at Vancouver International Airport with eight.

The extra passenger, born between Port Alberni and Nanaimo at about 11,000 feet, was a six-pound, 14-ounce baby girl for Doris Savinkoff of Tahsis.

Mother and baby were doing well today in Richmond General Hospital—closest hospital to the airport.

The baby was delivered by Dave Mills, an off-duty B.C. Airlines pilot who was heading for Vancouver on company business.

Pilot of the 11-passenger Grumman Mallard, R. M. (Red) Croisdale, said a slight turbulence at the time probably contributed to the birth.

The father, a stevedore in Tahsis, said he sent his wife to Vancouver on the family doctor's advice "just in case of complications."

"This is our fifth child. I'm sure happy to hear everyone's all right," he said in a telephone interview. "I'm stuck at home looking after our four youngsters. I can't even go out to buy cigars."

Waiting at home for the new baby are Dave, 6, Judy, 5, Gregory, 3, and Paul, 2.

JOGGING SESSION 'NO JOKE'—MAYOR

DUNCAN — Mayor Jim Quaife's physical fitness program which was to start today with a jogging session at the high school track was washed out by rain.

Opinions had been expressed that the project was part of an April Fool's joke.

"Not so," the mayor said, from the dry comfort of his bedroom. "This is a serious attempt to upgrade the physical standards of my fellow Canadians."

He said although the wet day was a setback, the program will begin the first sunny day this week.

Gordon Pynn, director of community programs branch of the provincial department of education, has supplied material for a physical fitness program which Quaife has set up for interested persons.

"They can either jog outside in the early morning with me or anywhere that's convenient," Quaife said.

Separation Urged For Indian Bands

VANCOUVER (CP) — A federal official has recommended that two Vancouver Island Indian bands, which were amalgamated two years ago, separate again.

David Munro of the Indian Affairs branch said the Fort Rupert and Tsulquate band at Port Hardy are dissatisfied.

Camera Woes Scuttle Final Scenes

GANGES — Gremlins got into the camera and delayed the filming of a big helicopter search scene in Meridian film's "The Blast" which was to have been completed here Saturday.

"I am completely baffled by what caused our camera to pack up while we were filming the final scenes from the helicopter," producer Mike Holden said. "The camera and the film were new and had been functioning perfectly but the rushes of that scene were completely blank."

The weather during the week the 42-member company was "on location" had been almost perfect. The Toronto-based filmmakers now have returned to Vancouver to complete scenes there and expect to return in about two weeks to refilm the helicopter scene on nearly Maxwell Mountain.

The Blast is a "cheapie" movie costing about $500,000 to make and which will be sold outright to an American company to distribute. It is about two American draft-dodgers in Canada who run afoul of the law.

The helicopter scene involves the fugitives being pursued and fired upon by Canadian police. One falls to his death from the 2,200-foot peak.

Rezoning Asked For Apartment, Trailer Park

DUNCAN — Four applications requiring amendments to the city zoning bylaw were given two readings at a special city council meeting Monday night.

Final decision will be made at a meeting to be announced by council.

The applications included a 14-unit trailer park adjacent to a new hotel being built opposite the A and W Drive-In on the Trans-Canada Highway by the Vancouver firm of Village Green Hotel Ltd.; a 32-unit apartment at Price Place behind the Drive-Inn; a Mohawk Oil Company service station just south of Trunk Road on the Trans-Canada Highway, and a Glad Tidings Tabernacle on Tzouhalem Road across from the Christian Reformed Church and school.

Slash-Burning Supported But More Research Urged

Logging companies should continue to burn slash timber in the fall to help prevent forest fires in the summer, the legislative committee on forestry recommended to the legislature Monday.

But the committee's report said the slash-burning policy should be reviewed next year again in the interior of the province.

And its effects in the coastal area should be reviewed in 1971.

In the meantime, it called for more research on other methods of disposing of the waste wood left behind as litter by loggers.

To help with forest fire fighting, the committee urged efforts continue to improve the federal government's special fire weather forecasts. It recommended the wages paid to men drafted for fire-fighting duty be raised from the present $1.25 to $1.75 an hour.

Also recommended was formation of an inter-departmental committee to develop land use policies and adjudicate the various demands from farmers, miners, loggers, subdividers and recreationists for use of the same crown lands.

The report said the cabinet committee should include Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell, Forests, Lands and Water Resources Minister Williston, Recreation and Conservation Minister Kiernan, Agriculture Minister Shelford and Mines and Petroleum Minister Richter.

Douglas Coming For Scout Walk On Easter Monday

NORTH COWICHAN — NDP Leader Tommy Douglas will participate in the Boy Scout Association's annual eight-mile walkathon being organized for Easter Monday.

The promoters of the event did not know whether Mr. Douglas, MP for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, would walk or just present awards to the winners.

Mayor Jim Quaife and Ald. Dennis Hogan also have agreed to take an active part in the walk which is to raise funds for Scout activities.

FUNERAL SERVICE will be held Thursday at 3:15 in McCall's chapel in Victoria for Sidney alderman and water board chairfan Leonard Wadhams, 2567 Beaufort. He died Monday of cancer. He is survived by the widow. Marjorie; one son, Terence, of Vancouver, and two grandchildren.

Anti-Missile Campaign Gaining Strength in U.S.

TRIO RELATES SPACE HOOK-UP

First-hand accounts of the recent dangerously-complicated lunar module mission is given today in The Times by the three U.S. astronauts who carried it out successfully.

Below, Russell Schweickart, 33, the only civilian and youngest of the trio, describes the overwhelming experience of standing outside the module in the awesome silence of outer Space.

On Page 6, Commander James McDivitt relates how tricky it was to steer the lunar module, while David Scott tells of the suspenseful time he had behind the controls of the command ship as he waited for the module to hook up.

He Stood in Awe At 17,000 MPH

By RUSSELL SCHWEICKART

In addition to the usual patches, pins and souvenirs which everybody takes up there, I had taken along copies of about 20 quotations I liked: From John and Robert Kennedy, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Thornton Wilder, Isaiah and some others.

It seemed important to have these glimpses of truth with me.

I was to do extra-vehicular activity (EVA)—to get outside the spacecraft — and I wanted very much to have a private moment then, to invite the beauty of that spectacle to penetrate the layer of my more immediate concern and responsibility.

But when I finally stood there on the "porch" of the LM, the quotations didn't spring into my mind, individually or collectively. So in that private moment I had to summom them up deliberately but it was an act on my part.

The visiual sensation you get from doing EVA is an overwhelmingly emotional experience. The intensity of the colors: it was just past sunrise, and I was out there looking up over the LM toward the Command Module into the richest black you ever saw.

Separating that fantastic sky and the Pacific Ocean was an intense, almost irridescent band of blue which formed the horizon.

The words to describe what you see just aren't there. I wasn't conscious of catching my breath or gasping; I was just overwhelmed by the beauty of it all.

Then there was the silence, and that has to be explained. I had the headset on, and everybody was talking.

Yet between those bits and pieces of conversation I was standing out there and aware of the fact that I was going 17,000 mph. Not because things were flashing by, as they do when you travel at high speeds in a car, but I did realize how high I was and was aware of the earth passing underneath.

And it was so quiet.

I really wished that I could turn off the radio and just listen to that silence. Of course in a vacuum there can't be a sound, but that silence penetrates.

I was out there for only 40 minutes. We had planned to be out for two hours, but we had trouble getting everything ready for the day's work. We always found ourselves behind at the beginning of every day.

We hadn't anticipated the mobility problem of getting into our suits before going into the LM. We had to suit up one at a time, staying out of each other's way, and the whole task took me 20 or 25 minutes, about twice what we had counted on.

We were all concerned that on the rendezvous day we might start out again behind the planned time line.

So we decided to wake up an hour earlier than planned. This meant an hour less of precious sleep unless we cut the EVA short. We left it up to Houston, and when they suggested terminating it early we all agreed.

Rescuers Abandon Hope For 178 in Mine

MUZQUIZ, Mexico (CP)—All hope was abandoned today for 178 miners trapped underground when a gas explosion ripped through a coal mine near this northern village.

Fourteen bodies were recovered and an official of the Red Cross, which is co-ordinating rescue efforts, said there was no hope of any survivors.

Of the 14 bodies recovered so far, 13 were of miners trapped near the mouth of the mine when fire-damp gas exploded and sealed off the two main shafts.

The other was of a man living nearby who rushed into the pit mouth in search of a missing relative and was overcome by fumes.

A Red Cross official said: "There can be no hope of any survivors—the shafts are filled with poisonous carbon monoxide gas."

The company is Altos Hornos de Mexico.

LITTLE HOPE

Dr. J. Ramos, director of the nearby Sabinas Red Cross Hospital, said he had little hope that any of the men survived.

"After the explosion they could have died from suffocation, toxic poisoning or burning," he said.

Some rescue officials expressed a hope of reaching some of the trapped men in 72 hours, but the mine tunnels were a shambles and rescue officials said it may be as long as 15 days before men could dig down to reach all of the victims.

FAMILIES RIOT

Troops were rushed in to control victims' families who rioted at the tunnel entrances. The crowds calmed down later.

The mine is at Barroteran, with a population of 8,000 people, about 75 miles southwest of the Texas border town of Eagle Pass.

"It was a tremendous explosion, blowing parts of the mine entrance into the air," said Dr. Emilio Lopez of the Barroteran hospital, who witnessed the blast. "We have no injured. They were either all killed at the entrance or trapped below. The lucky ones had left.

"They were able to take out the bodies of some of the dead miners because they were on their way up and near the exit." The mining company is one of Mexico's biggest coal producers.

6.3 Per Cent Profit Made

OTTAWA (CP) — Air Canada had a net income of $8,184,000 in 1968, the sixth consecutive year in which it has shown a profit, Transport Minister Paul Hellyer announced today.

The Crown-owned airline will need more than $300,000,000 in outside financing, however, to buy new equipment and property in the next five years, it was stated in the company's annual report tabled by Mr. Hellyer in the Commons.

The 1968 profit was the 15th for the airline in the last 18 years. It signified a return on investment of 6.3 per cent.

Comparable results for 1967, the Centennial Year, were a profit of $3,547,000 and an investment return of 5.2 per cent.

Passenger traffic growth was described as modest in 1968, compared with the sharp increase experienced in 1967.

MONTREAL BOMBER GIVEN LIFE TERM

MONTREAL (CP)—Terrorist bomber Pierre-Paul Geoffroy was sentenced today to life imprisonment for his active part in 31 recent bombing incidents in the Montreal area.

Geoffroy listened impassively, his arms folded across his chest, to the 20-minute judgment read by Chief Judge Andre Fabien of Sessions Court.

Judge Fabien said he was sentencing Geoffroy to life imprisonment on 124 charges stemming from 31 incidents—making bombs, placing bombs and conspiracy to make and place bombs.

Under terms of the law, Geoffroy could be paroled after serving seven years.

Robichaud Seeks New Ottawa Aid

FREDERICTON (CP)—In the midst of a flurry of protests over increased taxes, Premier Louis J. Robichaud of New Brunswick has appealed to the federal government for help.

The premier announced in the legislature Monday he has asked Ottawa for an "immediate and urgent" federal-provincial conference on finances.

Earlier Monday, the premier met demonstrators from Saint John, N.B., who presented him with a three-page brief asking for a reduction in provincial programs to cut tax increases.

It was the second group to come to the capital to protest the tax raises announced in Finance Minister L. G. DesBrisay's budget for 1969-1970.

The first group, from Moncton, N.B., received a brusque reception from the premier last Thursday.

However, he said Monday's delegation presented a fair brief and represented a definite segment of the public opinion.

LEADS DELEGATION

Paul Gordon, chairman of the Saint John Save New Brunswick Committee, led the delegation.

The brief he presented asked the premier to either find some means of lowering the recently-announced tax raises or "resign and allow the people to decide by an election who is capable of managing the affairs of our province."

While the delegation met the premier, a crowd of about 200 demonstrators outside the legislature building waved banners and called for his resignation.

Repeated attempts by the demonstrators to enter the building were foiled by 20 RCMP officers.

Criticism of the tax increases were also voiced Monday by members of the legislature. Claude Taylor (PC—Albert) said New Brunswick was probably the highest taxed area of North America.

Lawrence Garvie (PC—Fredericton) called for a full disclosure of the province's financial situation.

He said Finance Minister DesBrisay referred to his budget which brought a $29,400,000 increase in taxes, as anti-inflationary.

Kennedy Active In Protest Move

By WARREN UNNA

WASHINGTON (WP)—A nation-wide opposition movement to the Nixon administration's go-ahead on the safeguard anti-ballistic missile deployment suddenly is springing up.

SEN. KENNEDY
... leads critics

Some of it is centreing around Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D—Mass.); some of it around bi-partisan New York congressmen; some of it is coming from the Harvard-M.I.T. professors; and some of it is attempting to capture the grass roots college enthusiasm which last year fastened on the anti-Vietnam protest of Sen. Eugene McCarthy (D-Minn).

Kennedy has been by far the most active in this new fight against the ABM. And there is strong indication that it will not be confined to just defeating this year's safeguard appropriation requests by the administration, but to the overall priority military demands now should have in competition with pressing domestic needs.

NON-PARTISAN

Kennedy's aides insist the opposition is strictly on an issue and strictly non-partisan. But it coincides with a decision by the Democratic Party's potential presidential candidate to return to the banquet circuit of cross-country speechmaking beginning this month.

And Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky.), as avid as Kennedy in opposing the ABM, is warning that if the movement does become partisan and anti-Nixon he is going his own way.

The anti-ABM movement is taking many forms in many locales. The main ones are:

- A move by Sens. Kennedy, Cooper, Charles H. Percy (R-Ill.) and Philip A. Hart (D-Mich.) to form what tentatively is being called a "National Committee for Common Sense" led by perhaps 10 impeccable authorities from science, business, the ex-military, Negro and women's groups.
- A document, at last count 400 pages, requested by Kennedy from some 16 scientists, mainly in the Cambridge locale, which is to be completed within the next week or two and made available to a Congress confronted with Pentagon ABM authorization and appropriations requests.
- The grass roots movement, led by two associates of the Kennedy family political machine, Richard N. Goodwin and William Vanden Heuvel, which is centered in New York and now beginning to send out mail urging the establishment of community anti-ABM protest groups.
- A strictly New York coalition movement led by Rep. Jonathan B. Bingham, a Bronx Democrat, who hopes to run for the senate next year, and Rep. Ogden R. Reid, Westchester County Republican which already has a public relations firm engaged in putting out pamphlets, issuing press statements and keeping the home telephones ringing.

Pakistan Demands UN Action

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Pakistan demanded today that the United Nations Security Council condemn Israel anew despite the threat it might split the Big Four on the eve of private talks on Middle East peace.

Ambassador Agha Shahi of Pakistan formally introduced an Asian-African resolution asking condemnation for the Israeli attack on a Jordanian village last Wednesday.

He said the resolution represented the maximum compromise possible with the major powers on the council.

Shahi said the sponsors wanted to avoid division among the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France and thus went to greater lengths than the sponsors would have otherwise done.

But he added that the situation had deteriorated in the Middle East to the point where another condemnation resolution aimed at Israel was needed.

REVISIONS SOUGHT

The U.S. and Britain sought to persuade the sponsors to water down the resolution so that it would include mention of Arab guerrilla raids as well as retaliatory strikes by Israel.

The U.S. and Britain were believed likely to abstain on the resolution, while the Soviet Union would vote for it. The position of France was uncertain.

Britain told the council earlier that a split in the voting would prejudice Big Four talks on the Middle East set to begin this week.

The Israeli cabinet Sunday reiterated its opposition to any move by the Big Four to impose a peace settlement and said Israel and the Arab states are mainly responsible for working out a peace plan.

After the Security Council unanimously condemned Israel last Dec. 31 for its reprisal raid on Beirut International Airport, Israel rejected the condemnation and denounced the council as "morally, politically and juridically bankrupt."

TRAIN TAKES IKE BACK TO HEART OF AMERICA

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The train bearing the body of Dwight David Eisenhower rumbled across the face of America today, carrying to a modest resting place the man who once led the world's mightiest nation and commanded the most awesome military machine ever assembled.

"I come from the heart of America," he liked to say of his boyhood in Kansas, and it is to that geographic centre of the United States he is returning.

The nation's capital bade farewell at sundown Monday as Eisenhower's coffin was placed on baggage car No. 314 for the 30-hour, 1,379-mile trip home to Abilene.

Earlier, Palm Sunday crowds had shuffled past his bier in an all-night procession through the great marble rotunda of the Capitol building. It was on this spot that Eisenhower had twice been sworn in as Republican president—in 1952 and in 1956.

But Monday bloomed bright and sunny, if unseasonably cold, for the funeral procession and service that brought together, in the National Cathedral, representatives of more than 120 nations among the 2,107 invited guests.

Prime Minister Trudeau headed the four-man delegation representing the people and government of Canada. He placed a wreath at the bier.

With Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, John Diefenbaker who was Conservative prime minister part of the time Eisenhower was in the White House, and Gen. Jean V. Allard, chief of the defence staff, the prime minister later attended a White House reception for visiting dignitaries.

MOVES TO STATION

Finally, as the setting sun cast long shadows across the city, the hearse carrying Ike's body in a standard $80 army coffin moved down the great avenues and into Union Station. There it was placed aboard the black-draped, 10-car train and began the long journey home. At the rear came Eisenhower's private car, now occupied by his widow, Mamie, 72, still composed but visibly shaken.

Clusters of people gathered by the railway tracks in the night to pay final homage to the man they knew as "Ike."

At midnight tonight the funeral train will reach Abilene.

The burial, beside his first son who died in infancy, will be Wednesday in the Eisenhower Centre, a memorial library and chapel built on a cornfield.

President Nixon, the political heir whom Eisenhower lived to see in the White House at last, will fly here for the final services.

Nixon was blinking back tears as he left the train station in Washington Monday after the flag-covered coffin was carried aboard the funeral car.

Nixon led the great of the world at the state funeral in Washington National Cathedral.

CONDUCTS THE SERVICE

"The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord," intoned Very Rev. Francis B. Sayre Jr., dean of the cathedral and grandson of another president, Woodrow Wilson.

Massive Sweep By U.S. Troops

SAIGON (AP) — Thousands of helicopter-borne United States air cavalrymen are pursuing an estimated 7,500 troops of two North Vietnamese divisions through the Viet Cong War Zone C, military spokesmen said today.

The air cavalrymen are chasing the North Vietnamese 1st and 7th Divisions, which are believed to have pulled back into the jungles of northern Tay Ninh province near the Cambodian border after eluding a 10,000-man American sweep called Operation Atlas Wedge.

Atlas wedge was conducted in the Michelin rubber plantations in the southern half of Tay Ninh province, 45 miles northwest of Saigon. The new drive is called Montana Scout. Spokesmen said it is about half the size of Atlas Wedge.

Military analysts said the retreat of the two North Vietnamese divisions into War Zone C was part of a general withdrawal forced on them by heavy losses suffered in their five-week-old offensive. The Viet Cong's 9th Division, which is supposed to spearhead any attack on Saigon, also is reported in Tay Ninh province.
